SPARKLING RUBINE

Is a delicious effervescing beverage, and a really fine tonic and stimulant; is extremely palatable; is stimulating, though non-intoxicating.

"SPARKLING RUBINE" contains all the active principles of the Red Chinchona or Peruvian Bark, judiciously combined with tasteful and stomachic ingredients, yet, although it contains quinine, will not produce headache.

"SPARKLING RUBINE" is therefore a tonic of great value, and recommended as such by the medical profession. Is an absolutely innocuous "Pick-me-up," which may be taken between meals as well as with them.

"SPARKLING RUBINE." Dr. T. Stretch Dowse, in his celebrated paper on "Brain and Nerve Exhaustion," read before the Medical Society of London, makes special note that Sparkling Rubine is a pleasant and agreeable tonic, and may be judiciously taken at any period of life. Of Chemists, 5s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per dozen in champagne bottles.

SODA, POTASH, SELTZER, and LITHIA WATERS of guaranteed strength and purity. LEMONADE, GINGER ALE, SPARKLING LIMINE &c., of the best quality, manufactured in silver-lined machines. See that your chemist sells these waters, which are

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

NOTICE is hereby given that a Meeting of the Rothwell Local Board will be held in the Board room, Rothwell, near Leeds, on Friday, the twentieth day of January instant, at six o'clock in the evening, to consider whether or not it is advisable that the said Board should oppose the proposed Bill for incorporating and conferring powers on the Rothwell Gas Light Company, limited, which the said Rothwell Gas Light Company are seeking to have enacted in the session of Parliament, 1882, and if it should be deemed advisable to oppose such Bill, to pass at such meeting a resolution of the said Board, to oppose such Bill.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

On Monday evening, the ordinary meeting was held in the Board Room, present—Messrs. W. Hargreaves (chairman) J. Holmes, J Hargreaves, J. Sanderson, H. P. Newsome, J. Batty, J. Oliver, S. Bramley, and the clerk, treasurer and inspector.

The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, the ordinary business was then proceeded with.

ROTHWELL SEWAGE.—Mr. Jowitt, clerk of the works, made his report for the last 4 weeks, and stated that the work had only gone on very slowly, the contractors having laid 150 yards of 9 inch pipes, 1 shaft and 2 lamp holes. There had been a few difficulties in the progress: they had met with an old drain 100 yards long, just above Mr. Seanor's, which they had diverted. There had also been a "galliard flit" of above 30 yards long, which they could not blast; these with the great depth they had to go, had hindered progress very much. Mr. Jowitt also specified the number of pipes and other materials received during the month.

The chairman complained about the damage done to the hedges by the vast quantity of rubbish being thrown up against, seriously damaging the hedges, and which damage would have to be made good. He thought the contractors were not working in the easiest and best way; they ought to "drift" a lot of it which would be easier and cheaper for the contractors, and would not spoil the surface of the roads so much nor damage the property of people by throwing rubbish on the sides.

Mr. Bramley asked if the contractors were clearing the rubbish away, where the pipes were already laid.

Mr. Newsome had been over the entire length, and was pleased to find it cleared very satisfactorily.

DEPUTATION ON THE GAS BILL.—The vice-chairman read a letter which had been addressed to the chairman, asking the Board to admit a deputation on the Gas Company's Bill.

The clerk stated that the chairman was ill, and had sent to him a copy of the resolution passed at the public meeting of December 22nd, asking the Board to oppose the Bill of the Rothwell Gas Light Co.

Mr. Batty proposed that the deputation be admitted.

The chairman intimated his purpose to vacate his chair, but he was prevailed on to remain. Mr. Newsome seconded the resolution to admit the deputation, which was carried.

The deputation was then admitted, consisting of Messrs. B. Clark, G. Lockwood, J. Turner, Jun., and B. Batty

Mr. Clark stated in reply to the chairman's question as their object, that they wished to ask why the law has not been carried out in regard to the resolution passed at a public meeting held on the Gas Co.'s Bill on Dec. 22nd, according to the Public Health Act. As they understood the Act, the resolution should have been published in a paper circulating in the district and also on the church and chapel doors.

The chairman said there was plenty of time yet, as it would be 3 or 4 months before the Bill came on, and there was no need to hurry on a special meeting of the Board for that purpose. He was sorry their chairman was not present to-night, as he might have fully answered their questions.

Mr. B. Batty held that the chairman has no option after presiding at that public meeting but to at once advertise the resolution and send a copy of it to the Local Government Board.

Mr. Holmes contended that according to the Borough Funds Act, the chairman has to call a special meeting of the Board at ten days notice, when a resolution submitted to the Board must secure an absolute majority of the governing body, after which it is fully advertised and a public meeting called afterwards to ratify the action of the Board. He believed this was the first meeting since the public meeting and there was a notice on the agenda paper to give the ten days notice.

Mr. Turner, Jun., argued that at present they were simply going on the Public Health Act; they had not yet arrived at the stage referred to by Mr. Holmes. A certain resolution was passed at a public meeting and according to clause 7 of that Act.

'A copy, under the hand of the summoning officer of every resolution so passed, shall be forwarded by him to the Local Government Board; and it shall be his duty to publish a copy thereof by advertisement for three successive weeks in some one or more of the local newspapers circulated in the district or place, and by causing a copy thereof to be affixed to the principal doors of every church or chapel in the place to which notices are usually affixed.'

It did not matter whether they were going to proceed on the Borough Funds Act or not; if there was any informality about the meeting, it was not on their part, and it was the duty of the returning officer to transmit a copy of the resolution to the Local Government Board, to advertise it three times in the local newspaper, and to publish it on the church and chapel doors.

Mr. Holmes said, that from the report of the meeting, the resolution called upon the Local Board to oppose the Bill. This was the first meeting they had had since, and they were met to consider the matter and take action to-night; they seemed to wish to take it out of the hands of the Local Board and send direct to London

The clerk said he had told the chairman that if the meeting desired by the requisitionists was held, it would be an informal one; and that the Board would have to take up the matter as directed by the Borough Funds Act; Mr. Charlesworth in calling the meeting simply did so out of courtesy to those desiring it.

Mr. Lockwood was surprised to hear that the chairman should have called the meeting simply out of courtesy to the requisition, and not informed the meeting of its informality. Mr. Warren was there, and if there was any informality about the meeting, he ought to have said so. He must say that the ratepayers have been deceived, and it was unfair to think that they had gone there to decide a question, and to be told now that it was an informal meeting.

The chairman complained that it was unfair to use such words. The chairman was not here, he only wished he had been, no doubt he had good reasons for acting as he had done. He (Mr. Hargreaves) did not wish to say anything on the subject himself; he had not attended the meeting; he did not wish to speak on the subject then; but he must protest against such language being used as regards their chairman in his absence. The clerk read the clause of the Borough Funds Act bearing on the question

No expense in relation to promoting or opposing any Bill or Bills in Parliament shall be charged as aforesaid unless incurred in pursuance of a resolution of an absolute majority of the whole number of the governing body at a meeting of the governing body, after ten clear days notice by public advertisement of such meeting and of the purpose thereof in some local newspaper published or circulating in the district, such notice to be in addition to the ordinary notices required for summoning such meeting, nor unless such resolution shall have been published twice in some newspaper or newspapers circulating in the district, and shall have received, in respect of matters within the jurisdiction of the Local Government Board, the approval of such Board.

Mr. Turner, Jun., would like to ask the clerk to point out how the Borough Funds Act superseded the Public Health Act.

The chairman (Mr. Hargreaves) said Mr. Charlesworth had told him that he was acting under legal advice, and that the meeting was informal. The Board were purposing to take up the question to-night, and were going as fast as possible; they were not going to deceive the ratepayers.

Mr. Turner thought they were very remiss.

Mr. Lockwood regretted any remark which might have fallen from him which would cause ill-feeling, but wished to know how it was that Mr. Warren had not stated that this was an informal meeting, were they deceived by some informality.

Mr. Clark also regretted Mr. Warren did not say the meeting was informal.

Mr. B. Batty held that they were not responsible for the meeting being called so soon, the requisition asked for an early date.

Mr. J. Batty thought the only reason for this deputation was that they wanted to go too fast. He had no doubt, if the chairman had been here, he would have answered for himself.

Mr. Jas. Hargreaves asked if the deputation did not remember that Mr. Warren read the very clause out of the Borough Funds Act, stating how the Board should proceed; and said distinctly that another public meeting must be held after the special Board meeting? He would further say, that the members of the Local Board are quite out of order in discussing this matter in the absence of their chairman, who has not yet placed the matter in the hands of the Board.

Mr. Turner admitted Mr. Warren had said so.

The chairman thought that they were pressing unduly on the Board, ; and that they were going too fast, as Mr. Batty said; the Board was all in order yet.

Mr. J. Hargreaves thought Mr. Lockwood ought to apologise or withdraw the remarks he had made about deceiving the ratepayers.

Mr. Lockwood was quite willing, if he had said anything offensive, to withdraw it, but he wished to know what they were to say to the ratepayers?

Mr. Newsome pointed out that in holding the public meeting, the requisitionists had gained their point in ventilating the question, and that the Board was proceeding in the legal manner laid down, as speedily as possible.

The chairman, in replying to Mr. Lockwood's question, said, he could tell the ratepayers that the Local Board was doing its duty.

Mr. J. Hargreaves thought that it was a very poor tale if the three members who were shareholders, were going to lead the other six by the nose.

Mr. Newsome.—And the ratepayers, too!

Mr. Holmes remarked that more than twelve months ago, he had mentioned this matter; he was quite independent of either side, but desired the best thing to be done for the ratepayers. He believed there was no desire to offend on the part of any gentlemen. He thought the deputation had been going rather too fast, and believed the matter would have been just as forward, if they had not come.

Mr. Clark regretted that they had not known that the public meeting was informal.

Mr J. Batty reminded them that the next public meeting would be effective.

Mr. Turner, Jun., still held that the Public Health Act is not superseded by the Borough Funds Act. As to going too fast, if they had seen some activity by the Board, they would not have troubled the Board with this interview.

The chairman ruled such remarks out of order; he would give a full hearing, but he thought that was going too far.

Mr. Newsome also objected to such remarks, and assured the deputation that the Board had taken action as soon as the Bill was in their hands.

Mr. B. Batty said they ought to have had the Bill ten days earlier, and had an opportunity of getting well posted up in its provisions.

The chairman said that the clerk had a copy sent to him within two days of its being printed, and it was brought up at the first meeting after.

The deputation then thanked the Board for the interview, the chairman reminding them to tell the ratepayers "the Board is doing its duty" to which Mr. B. Batty returned the repartee "We've come to see that you are."

ROTHWELL SEWAGE.—A letter was read from Mr. Parkinson intimating his satisfaction with the work done by the contractors in clearing away, and a cheque was granted to Messrs. Brayshaw, Thompson and Stead.

Mr. Bramley wished to know when the valuations for damage to crops would be completed and Mr. Oliver (the chairman of the committee) replied they would be glad to meet any time.

A cheque was also granted to the Hunslet Rural Sanitary Authority for the proportion of cost due from the Local Board for the sewage works.

The chairman, Mr. Holmes and Mr. Batty were neutral; on being remonstrated with, they held that the charge was unjust, and could not vote for it.

HIGHWAY FOREMAN.—There were a large number of applications, and it was resolved to leave the appointment with the Highway Committee.

MESSRS. ELLIOTT'S CONTRACT.—The contract with Messrs. Elliott and Sons for repairing roads having now terminated, Mr. Farrer has made his award, the principal items of which are;

Value of Skipton stone on sides of roads	172	2	10
	£290	12	10

Mr. Farrer being sole arbitrator, it was moved by Mr. Holmes, seconded by Mr. Oliver, that a cheque be granted for the above amount

The cost of the award will be paid equally by the Board and Messrs. Elliott and Son.

Mr. Holmes expressed his satisfaction that after all the censure poured upon Mr. Elliott, that he had £118 10s 0d. to take.

Mr. Newsome said if they could value the labour expended on them, it would be a different matter. There voted for the motion Messrs. Holmes, Oliver, Sanderson and Batty, the other four members being neutral.

HIGHWAYS.—Mr. Sanderson complained that there is not a man on the Royds Green road.

The chairman agreed that this road was most disgraceful, and it was felt by all the members that Mr. A. Nichols had done very little in his contract at all, and it was resolved that unless steps were at once taken, the contract would be terminated

A complaint was also made about Rothwell streets not being cleaned.

A letter was read reminding the Board that the Quarter Sessions are held April 3rd, 1882, and asking the condition of the roads for passing the County surveyor. The matter was adjourned

RAILWAY BILL.—A letter was also read from the solicitors for the proposed East and West Yorkshire Union Railway, asking the Board whether they assent to or dissent from it. On the motion of the chairman, seconded by Mr. Newsome, a unanimous assent was given to it

AUDIT.—The clerk intimated that the audit of the books will take place on the 10th inst.

FINANCE.—A cheque was granted for half-year's interest on £3000 lent to the Board for 12 months.

A cheque was also signed for £15 for men's wages during the ensuing fortnight.

The collector has received and paid over to the treasurer during the last fortnight

General District Rate	3	2	7
Water Rents		17	1
	£3	19	8

ROTHWELL GAS LIGHT CO.'S BILL.—Mr. Hargreaves having vacated the chair, proposed that Mr. Oliver take the presidency, seconded by Mr. Sanderson; Mr. Bramley neutral.

Mr. Oliver on accepting the position, assured the members he should try to conduct the meeting impartially; he asked a fair hearing for both sides. He was sorry to have heard the remarks made about his conduct at last meeting, but was certainly an uninterested party in the Gas Light Co.

The clerk then read the resolution passed at the public meeting.

Mr. Holmes proposed at once that the clerk do give the requisite legal notice of a special meeting to take into consideration, the Bill of the Rothwell Gas Light Co., Limited.

Mr. J. Batty had pleasure in seconding the resolution.

Mr. Sanderson had rather changed his opinion about this matter, and was quite sure the Board had never yet had an opportunity of considering this question.

Several questions were then put to the clerk, who, although answering them in part, urged the advisability of taking a legal opinion on them, and a resolution was passed on the motion of Mr. Bramley, seconded by Mr. W. Hargreaves, that Mr. Warren be asked to reply to the questions.

Mr. Bramley.—What is an absolute majority of the governing body?

Mr. Newsome.—If three members are shareholders, are they thereby disqualified from voting, and the Board really consist of six members instead of nine; would they be entitled to vote or be counted as part of the governing body?

Mr. J. Hargreaves.—If the Board is right in proceeding under the Borough Funds Act.

In reply to another question, the clerk stated than an opposition was in time if raised within ten days after the first reading of the Bill, which would probably be in March or April.

ROTHWELL DEBATING SOCIETY.

On Wednesday last, the debate was "Ought capital punishment to be abolished." In the absence of the president, Mr. B Clark was called upon to take the chair. Some of the arguments used by the opponents of capital punishment were:—That though to a great extent it may act as a deterrent and a counteraction of the crime of murder, yet from statistics it was not found to be more deterrent than a more certain, secondary punishment, such as penal servitude for life, also that the capital penalty especially tends beyond all others to impose obstacles to its own enforcement, some of the obstacles being—its irrevocable nature; the probable execution of innocent persons, &c. On the other hand the advocates of the capital penalty maintained that if the punishment of death was abolished for murder, that this crime would be on the increase, and if innocent persons have been executed, they were very rare cases indeed, and that the penalty of death takes from the offender the power of doing further injury. The vote was in favour of continuing capital punishment.

THE PROPOSED RAILWAY.

Yesterday afternoon, the Parliamentary Committee of the Leeds Town Council held a special meeting in the Town Hall, under the presidency of Mr. Emsley (chairman) to consider the proposals of the promoters of the East and West Yorkshire Union Railway scheme for a new line from Leeds to Hull, that the Council would petition Parliament and take other measures in support of their Bill.

A long discussion took place on the subject, in the course of which Ald. Scarr spoke in opposition to any support being given by the Council to the scheme. It was, however, pointed out that any additional means of Railway communication between Leeds and Hull especially as the new line would open up a large colliery district must be of great advantage to Leeds.

On the motion of Mr. Barker, seconded by Ald. Addyman, it was unanimously resolved that the Council be recommended to petition Parliament in favour of the Bill.

INQUEST AT STOURTON.

An inquest was held befor T. Taylor, Esq., coroner, on Wednesday at the Stourton Hotel, on the body of John Scarr, clerk, aged 67 lately living at Bull-ring, Wortley. It appears from the evidence of deceased's son and another person, that he left home on the morning of the 28th Nov. to go to his work at Low Hall Mills, when he appeared to be in his usual health. He had not, however returned, nor been heard of since. On Tuesday last, Nathan Hutchinson, lock-keeper at Knostrop, saw the body of a man floating in the river, and it was secured and taken to the Stourton Hotel. Dr. Nicholson deposed to having made a post mortem examination of the body, and found two prominent wounds on the body, and one scalp wound at the side of the head, the latter of which he thought had been made previous to death. There was no further evidence; P. C. Wilson had charge of the case. Verdict "Found drowned in the river Aire."

OULTON WESLEYAN SUNDAY SCHOOL.

On Saturday evening last the usual Christmas treat was given to the scholars attending the above school. The proceedings commenced with a tea, for which eatables in variety and abundance had been provided, and it need scarcely be said that the youthful and unimpaired appetites were quite equal to a long and sustained attack on the good things. After tea, various games and recreations were indulged in, and during the evening Mr. Mason distributed the prizes which had been awarded for regular attendance and good conduct. Mr. Mason addressed the scholars in wise and appropriate words, and on the motion of Mr. Flockton, seconded by Mr. Fearnside, a hearty vote of thanks was given to him. On leaving, a free distribution of oranges was made to the scholars. The tea and all connected with it was gratuitously provided by the teachers and friends, and there were many evidences that these youthful existences had been brightened once more for a few short hours during the brightest (socially speaking) of all our festive seasons.

Mr. Kirkby.—In our advertising columns will be found preliminary notice of a concert which is to be given on behalf of Mr. H. Kirkby, who is, we are sorry to learn, in very poor health. It is not at all surprising that, as soon as his condition became known, there is quite an anxiety to be on the Committee, and to assist in making the effort a thorough success. A debt of gratitude as well as a tribute of thanks and honour are due to Mr. Kirkby by all the music-loving people of the neighbourhood, and the Brass Band and Harmonic Union have the support of members of the Church, Wesleyan, and Primitive choirs of Rothwell and elsewhere in helping in this praiseworthy object.

Here is an opportunity for those who wish to render honour to whom honour is due, for those who have derived personal benefit, for those who desire to console the "father of music in Rothwell" in his later years, to purchase tickets for the concert, not one, but half-a-dozen, and let us try to raise such a sum as will provide a nice reserve for the old man in his decline.

Epps's Cocoa.—Grateful and Comforting.—"By thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr Epps, has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette—Make simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in Packets labelled—"James Epps & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence for afternoon use.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—Rheumatism and Rheumatic gout are the most dreaded of all diseases, because their victims know that they are safe at no season, and at no age secure. Holloway's Ointment, after fomentation of the painful parts, gives greater relief than any other application; but it must be diligently used to obtain this desirable result. It has been highly commended by rheumatic subjects of all ages and of both sexes, for rendering the attacks less frequent and less vigorous, and for repressing the sour perspirations and soothing the nerves. In many cases, Holloway's Ointment and Pills have proved the greatest blessings in removing rheumatism and rheumatic gout which had assailed persons previously and at the prime of life.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may be secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and starchy compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

Liberals & Conservatives United!—This may sound strange but it is nevertheless true, that Liberals and Conservatives alike are unanimous in declaring that "BUDDEN'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND AND COLTSFOOT" is the best remedy for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and, in fact, any Affections of the Chest and Lungs. One dose relieves, one bottle cures. Ask for "BUDDEN'S BALSAM," and take nothing else.—Bottles 1s. 1½d. 2s. 9d. Agent for Rothwell, A. Marshall, Stationer and Patent Medicine Dealer.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

Our friends of the Choral Society keep things very quiet concerning the forthcoming Ethiopian venture, but one can occasionally get to hear a little whisper about it. I hear that the "Brethren of the Guild of the Calcined Cork" have for some time past been practising the songs and choruses with which we are to be regaled on the occasion of their annual appearance, and if report speaks truly we may look forward to something good; let us hope however that the something will not be after the manner of the "Transient and Eternal" affair, but of this I think, judging from past years, there is not much fear. Mr. Flockton will again preside over the tambourine in addition to furnishing the sketch for the concluding part of the entertainment, while Mr. T. Jackson will as usual "rattle his bones" to his heart's content. I am sorry to hear that two of the most useful members of the troupe will this year vacate their places; viz Mr. Towler and Mr. C. West, whose really good voices in the harmonised choruses will be difficult to replace satisfactorily. I am told that Mr. Atkinson the present conductor of the Choral Society will succeed Mr. Towler, and Mr. West's "vacant chair," will probably be occupied by another local basso.

If I remember rightly, we were favored with a very learned and paternal criticism in these columns, on the last Minstrel Concert at Woodlesford, from the pen of that short-lived but promising writer "P.Q.", who volunteered some very benevolent suggestions for the benefit of the performers. I think that in order to avoid the least risk of failure or incompetence on the forthcoming occasion the brethren cannot do better than invite Mr. P.Q. to assume the post of director; we should then have a sufficient guarantee that the programme would be designed and carried out upon the most sound and approved principles, and there would be no possibility of dissatisfaction on the part of anyone.

Experientia docet.

It has occurred to me that the Choral Society will have in connection with this concert, an opportunity of doing a very graceful and commendable action, and which if they avail themselves of it, cannot fail to add greatly to the credit and popularity of the Society. There is a large number of people in the village who cannot afford to go to these concerts on account of the comparatively high price of admission, and many old people who never have the chance. Let a free concert be given the night following the regular one and distribute tickets to those who would like to go, discretion being of course used, in order that the good intention might not be abused by imposition. There would, of course, be some additional expense incurred, such as the hire of the room, and the performers would be put to the trouble of "blacking up" a second time, but I think if they remember that one of the purest sources of pleasure is that of giving pleasure to others who cannot otherwise obtain it, they will not grumble at the little extra trouble which they would have to take, and I am sure they would be amply rewarded by the sight of the scores of wondering and gratified faces which would greet them during the evening. I do not think the extra cost would amount to very much, say twenty shillings; and as an earnest of my sincerity in proposing the venture, I shall have pleasure in subscribing half a crown towards such cost, which Mr. Editor will forward at the proper time.

The burning question at Rothwell just now is the gas bill and after my remarks on the proceedings of certain gentlemen I shall not be surprised to see a very fiery reply in this issue of the Rothwell Times by some ambitious young spark who will seek to extinguish my struggling light:—but no matter, it will be my turn next, so go ahead my friends, I am ready for you any time.

At last after many ineffectual attempts, which have frequently resulted in disaster, to their opponents at Rothwell, the colours of the Oulton kickists have been lowered by the Harmonic men who are naturally elated in consequence; I have not heard that the church bells were rung or that the band paraded the streets of Old Roddill on Saturday night in celebration of the victory, but certain it is that there was much rejoicing at "The Swan" on that night, and that a few of the convivial souls welcomed in the new year with plaudits on the success of their favorite club. As I understand that the game was a keenly, and withal pleasantly contested one; despite the anticipations of Mr. Full Back, I have pleasure in congratulating the Harmonic players on their well earned success and although I should have been better satisfied had Oulton won, I am quite willing to give honor where it is due.

The work of repairing the Stockings footpath seems to proceed very slowly, in fact I don't think there has been anything done at it for some time now; the portion which is finished is satisfactory, but I should like to see the job completed; come, Messieurs the surveyors, wake up and bestir yourselves, the 25th of March will soon be here again and the ratepayers will want to know why their instructions have not been carried out. I think if some of the flagged footpaths in Woodlesford were repaired a little here and there, it would be a good thing, and they require it badly enough, goodness knows.

The Temperance Mission at Rothwell has shewn some fruit this Christmas, anyhow. I hear that the famous Rothwell Model Brass Band is partly composed of members who are teetotallers, and they have stuck out so bravely since June, and during this Christmas, that the publican at whose house the Band meets has felt the loss of their custom so much, as to decline giving the usual 'kick-up.' The members have accordingly quarrelled, and there is now some talk of a Temperance Brass Band. Hurrah for teetotallers, say I, although perhaps not a very good one myself.

Since the defeat of the Oulton team at Rothwell on Saturday last, black crape has become fashionable as an article of apparel, and I am told that the blinds have been carefully drawn at Peel's during the present week. It is further said that two prominent lady supporters of the O. F. C. have been frequently seen in tears, while the genial captain has been observed ruefully contemplating the cup which his team won some little time since and upon which the following legend is proposed to be inscribed "Ichabod, thy glory is departed."

ROTHWELL GAS QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

As it had fallen to my lot to take a somewhat active part in this matter, I intended last week to desire you to insert a few remarks of mine upon several statements which appeared in your report of the meeting of December 22, but after the scurrilous and offensive abuse which has come from that anonymous correspondent, who is virtually a member of your staff, I must request to have this letter printed in your paper.

I was sorry to see that you had reproduced the words which Mr. Batty was led in his warmth and enthusiasm to utter at the ratepayers' meeting with reference to the present constitution of the Rothwell Local Board. I possess neither the inclination nor the qualification for a seat amongst that body and I never at any time gave Mr. Batty any ground for thinking otherwise. Mr. Batty and I have worked together in this and several other matters we have at heart with the greatest cordiality and unanimity, but I must protest against the impression which his words might seem to convey.

It is no doubt known to some of your readers that I was greatly instrumental in bringing about the meeting of last month; I took this part upon myself because I thought I knew perhaps better than some people the real meaning of a gas monopoly, because I seemed to observe a carelessness and apathy amongst the Local Board, and because after the matter had once been mentioned in your columns all subsequent meetings of the Gas Co. were suppressed, and it became obvious that their manœuvres were being purposely kept secret. Well Sir, all those reasons still apply to the case and urge me to ventilate the subject, but since the time that I speak of, another reason has presented itself, which calls for prompt and energetic action on the part of the ratepayers and gas consumers.

I regret to say that certain promoters and supporters of the Bill have not hesitated to circulate statements, which to use the mildest terms can only be characterised as strange mis-representations, and if these are not refuted in the plainest language, they cannot but prejudice very materially the cause of those who are wishful to oppose the Bill. I should be sorry to impute to these persons any wilful perversion of the truth, I much prefer to attribute their mis-statements to ignorance or an inability to grasp the meaning of the legal phraseology (often rather obscure to ordinary readers) in which some clauses of the Bill are couched.

Previous to the ratepayers' meeting I had a short but certainly rather hot dispute with Mr. J Seanor as to the effect of clauses 27 and 28 by which the profits of the shareholders and the price of gas are regulated; there is some little disagreement between us as to what actually passed on that occasion, but it will be fresh in the recollection of those present at the meeting that when I asserted that the Bill proposed to give the shareholders a dividend of 13¾ per cent when gas was being sold at its present price, Mr Seanor exclaimed 'That I dispute.' Well Sir, I submit that I proved to demonstration that my position was perfectly correct. If any person has still any doubts upon this point, I shall only be too glad to discuss the matter with him, and try to convince him of what I say.

Again, Mr W Hargreaves declared a few days ago to myself and two other persons that the Bill would preclude the Company from charging more than 5/5 under any circumstances, that is to say, that it created a limit or maximum price of 5 5, which the Company were utterly unable to exceed. Now Sir, I have carefully examined the Bill, and I find nothing of the kind. If the works should be badly managed, (a matter over which consumers would have no control) or residual products should become worthless, and coal, labour, plant, &c., should rise to such a price that the Co. could not sell gas at 5 5 without loss, I see nothing in the Bill to prevent them from raising gas to a higher price provided of course they were willing to receive a correspondingly reduced dividend.

The opposition have not yet so far as I am aware, had the assistance of any paid legal adviser, whereas the Gas Co. have had their solicitor at their elbow all along. I have not had any experience in this branch of law, nor have I any books on this subject, and therefore I may possibly be wrong in my contention; but if I am, I do, as representing a number of the ratepayers and gas consumers, claim to have my mistake pointed out to me and be informed not merely that I am mistaken, but how my mistake arises.

Sir, we demand that these persons who have come forward as the mouthpieces of the Gas shareholders should at least understand their own Bill, and we maintain that it is highly improper that they should propagate statements in favour of the Bill from ignorance, which cannot but be considered culpable.

We must admit that we have been able to examine very few of the particulars advanced by our opponents, but in the few cases where we have examined them, we find some startling discrepancies. Mr T Hargreaves is reported to have said 'The price here is 4s 2d, while at East Ardsley they pay 7s 6d, at Pudsey 6s, (only 10 candle light) and other places similar prices.' You, Sir, have assured me that you were yourself much surprised at these words, and that you reported them most carefully. Moreover, Mr Hargreaves has already had an opportunity of correcting the report, but has not done so.

Now Sir, what are the facts? I have on the table before me a receipted bill of the East Ardsley Gas Co. for gas consumed from 1st July to 30th September 1881 and the price there specified is 4s 7d per thousand. As to the Pudsey price, I have been told by a director of the Pudsey Company that the price last year was 3s 9d. and that this year it is 3s 5d. I have also learnt from another source that the Pudsey Co. return 2½ per cent discount on accounts paid within a month. As regards similar prices being paid in other places, I have been informed (though I cannot myself vouch for the truth of my information) that at Ecclesbill the price is 3s 4d, Idle 3s 9d, Yeadon 3s 9d, Bradford 2s 6d Wakefield 2s 6d.

As bearing upon something else which Mr T Hargreaves said, I may state that I have been informed on the very best authority that the Shipley contest (which was of three or fourfold greater magnitude than ours) did not cost the opposition more than £500.

I submit, Sir, that I have shewn that we have ample cause to complain of the misstatements of the promoters of the Bill as reported in your columns. I will only notice one more. In your paper of September 16, I read "Mr. Tennant, solicitor to the Co., then read the proposed Bill. The Bill includes a clause to increase the capital from £8,000 to £20,000 and also that the maximum of dividend be 10 per cent on old shares and 7½ per cent on new ones." Now Sir, this is quite incorrect; the Bill prescribes no maximum dividend at all. It speaks of a standard dividend which is a different thing altogether, and has nothing to do with the maximum dividend which the shareholders may receive, indeed I see nothing in the Bill to prevent the shareholders getting from 18 to 20 per cent very soon if the Act is allowed to pass.

While thanking you, Sir, for the impartial report you gave of last month's meeting, I may remark that your report is deficient in one respect. There was no analysis of the minority of 14 who supported Mr. Hargreaves amendment. The following list of the names is I think not very far from correct. Messrs. J. & T Hargreaves, J. Copley, J. Bumby, T Armitage, J. Abbishaw, E. Dobson, and J. Sheldon all shareholders, W. Denton, collector in the employment of the Company. Walter Hargreaves, son of a shareholder, and G. H. Armitage, A. Baines, A. Chapman and G. Wilson, the last four being all sons or relations of shareholders, but not ratepayers, and therefore possessing no right to be present at the meeting.

Your anonymous correspondent has spoken of those who are "not even ratepayers at all." I will not affect to misunderstand his meaning. It is quite true I never paid any rates in my life, but I am primarily liable for those payable in respect of the premises occupied by the Rothwell Liberal Association, and the way I came to be so is this:—a large number of working men and ratepayers constituting almost the whole of the above mentioned society thought that I was a fit and proper person to represent their views in this matter and therefore they elected me their president and instructed the guardians to enter my name on the ratebook in respect of the society's premises in order to enable me to come before the meeting. I would have your correspondent bear in mind that if I do not pay rates myself almost all the persons I represent are paying rates out of their "hard-earned" wages and I take this action on their part shews that I possess their confidence to a far greater extent than your correspondent ever will.

With regard to the meeting I have only one other thing to add. Mr. Warren is reported to have said "The procedure must be taken under the Borough Funds Act and not under the Public Health Act as supposed by Mr. Turner." I beg to say that I have all along been aware that we could only proceed up to a certain stage under the Public Health Act and that any subsequent proceedings must be under the Act 35 and 36 Vic. chapter 91, but though Mr. Warren may have implied that our meeting was called under a misconception and that it possessed no validity, I have no hesitation in saying such was not the case and I maintain that we have a perfect right to demand that the chairman shall advertise the resolution, post it on the church and chapel doors and transmit it to the Local Government Board as prescribed by the Public Health Act, and I am surprised that this has not been done. On Monday last, we enquired why these provisions had not been carried out and I hope that the chairman will see fit to explain to us, the precise reason why he has failed to do so. But here I admit our action under the Public Health Act comes to an end, what remains must be done under the Borough Funds Act and I think I may state that the Local Board are now moving in the matter and procuring legal advice as I urged some time ago. We have obtained all that we expected to obtain under the Public Health Act, that is to say we have succeeded in fanning the agitation into flame and attracting public attention to the question.

I am glad to say that the Carlton and Lofthouse people are also awaking to the fact that their interests are at stake. I am told that they are going to have the question discussed at a public meeting and I am persuaded that if the matter is clearly placed before them they will not hesitate to join the Rothwell people in contesting the Bill, and if this is done, the cost to the two townships will, even if we fail, be very moderate indeed. That the Bill if opposed will either be defeated or vastly modified I entertain no doubt at all. In my opinion this is one of the most momentous issues that has ever come before our governing bodies. Sir Frederick Bramwell, one of the greatest engineers of our time, only the other day proclaimed his conviction that in another fifty years the steam engine would be a thing of the past only to be found as a curiosity in our museums. The Otto Gas Engine is one of the greatest of our modern inventions, and it has now been shewn conclusively that the gas engine up to some 30 horse power not only possesses the merit of absolute safety and those other astounding features which have brought it so rapidly into use, (but which I cannot even enumerate here for want of space) but also eclipses the steam engine as an economical producer of power. Gas is now applied in a thousand ways undreamt of ten years ago, and promises ere long to be as indispensable to the manufacturer, as coal itself. The policy of parliament in granting protective gas Acts has inflicted such burdens on the inhabitants of our large towns, that people are beginning to see that it has been a gigantic mistake, and I have no doubt that with the growth of commerce and manufacture our legislature will be brought to repeal the enactments which press so heavily on our national industries.

I am, Sir,
Yours truly,
JOHN TURNER.

P.S. I must absolutely decline to be drawn into any correspondence with your anonymous contributor until he has thrown off his disguise and revealed to us who he really is.

AJAX AND THE GAS BILL OPPOSITION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times

Sir,

After the cowardly and unprincipled manner in which myself and others have been attacked in consequence of our opposition to the provisions of the proposed Gas Bill now deposited in Parliament, (cowardly, inasmuch as Ajax shields himself behind a fictitious name; unprincipled, because he in a most unwarrantable manner imputed motives) I feel constrained to break a lance in self-defence with this somewhat notorious self-opinionated whispering sage of Woodlesford. I would have the sage to know at the outset that if it had not been for this imputation of motives, namely, 'that those persons that have initiated opposition are agitating to serve their own crafty purposes, and that they were not conscientious opponents, &c.,' that all the rest of his abuse would have been treated by me in the manner that it deserves, namely, with contempt, because such men as Messrs. B Clark, J Sanderson, S Batty James Batty, G Lockwood, W Lawton, and others connected with the opposition, can afford to laugh at such bluster as 'loud mouthed demagogues,' 'self-constituted agitators,' 'cheaply acquired popularity,' 'presumptuous impudence,' &c., coming from an unknown contributor, who is evidently such an adept in the vocabulary of the braggart and the charlatan. Now I submit Mr. Editor, that it is Ajax who is guilty of 'presumptuous impudence,' because I have good reason to believe, after the great difficulty we had in procuring Bills, that Ajax has not seen one, and consequently is ignorant of the arbitrary provisions the Bill contains.

I also submit that if the opposition is to be censured by Ajax or anybody else, they must take their stand by the Bill and argue from its provisions that the opposition is a 'mistaken and short-sighted one.'

At the public meeting not one single person that spoke in favour of the amendment (except the solicitor to the Gas Company) attempted to defend the Bill on its merits, and now that the Bill is deposited, if it is to be modified, that can only be done by going to the expense of opposing, and by engaging counsel to appear before Committee in behalf of the ratepayers, and surely if it is worth the Company's while to spend £1000 in getting Parliamentary protection, it is the ratepayers', owners', and occupiers' interest to spend £400 or £500 in having their interests defended before the Parliamentary Committee.

What does Ajax mean by saying the better plan would be to allow the Company to proceed unopposed, and endeavour to have some of the objectionable clauses eliminated? It is evident Ajax for once is ignorant of what he is whispering about.

At present the Bill is condemned by a majority of the members of the Local Board, who have by a formal resolution requested the Company to withdraw it on account of its highly protective provisions, and exorbitant clauses in respect to dividends.

If Ajax will refer to Dec. 23rd issue of the Rothwell Times, he will find in the report of the meeting, 8th and 9th lines, that there were present most of the principal ratepayers, and if he will look over the report, he will also find about 12 persons voted for the amendment. I counted them and made a list of their names, and they were 14 in number, (the chairman said 10) 8 out of the 14 voting were shareholders, 4 not even ratepayers, and one the Company's collector.

I think after the above analysis it can be fairly said that the ratepayers are unanimous that the Bill should be opposed, and I for one should like to know what more is necessary before it is decided that the Bill shall be opposed. I suppose Ajax must be consulted, and if his advice is as accurate and trustworthy as his opinions in respect to the quality of Leeds and Rothwell gas, it won't be worth much, for if he will prove what he asserts, that our gas is double the illuminating power of Leeds, I will give £5 to the Leeds Infirmary.

In conclusion, the 'Whispers' of last week are so devoid of accuracy and common sense, as to suggest that the writer is suffering from the after effects of too much plum-pudding and XXX Timothy, and that before Ajax can be brought to a normal condition, he should take a course of Harrogate water and sulphur baths, and so get rid of the secondary symptoms of intoxication &c., which at present appear to besot his obfuscated faculties.

I am, Sir,
Yours truly,
BENJ. BATTY.

P.S.—If Ajax wants to raise a newspaper discussion, let him obtain a copy of the Bill, and try to defend its clauses, especially the 3rd, 27th, 28th, 61st and 62nd, and I have no doubt he will be accommodated; personally I refuse to be drawn into a discussion on any other lines.

THE ROTHWELL GAS QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

Your correspondent "Ajax," has, on many occasions, introduced into his 'Woodlesford Whispers,' several smart paragraphs, and pointed out evils which might be, and have been remedied, owing to his drawing attention to them, but his latest contribution respecting the gas question is simply ridiculous, insomuch, that not only is an amount of ignorance shown about the matter at issue, but he imputes dishonourable motives to gentlemen, who, for the benefit of all concerned, are wishful to thoroughly ventilate the question, and it is certain that had they not interested themselves in the affair, the bill would have been allowed to go without the ratepayers being conversant with the details contained therein, and also with the intentions of the shareholders who hope but to benefit and protect themselves.

In entering the lists against such a champion as Ajax, (who often boasts of the many conquests he has made) I must be ready to receive a severe onslaught from that worthy knight for my presumption, but remembering that the cause is a good one, I am prepared to do battle on this occasion, for in my opinion Ajax has shown 'many weak points in his armour' which I hope to be able to pierce in one or two places.

I shall endeavour to take up, to the best of my ability, the parts of his letter which to my mind are both unjust and misleading. In the first place, he commences by stating, 'the policy of the majority at the recent meeting on the Gas question seems to me to be a mistaken and short sighted one.' This may appear so to him, but in what way is it short sighted? Would it not be short sighted on the part of the ratepayers to accept the Bill as it now stands, seeing that the Company are to have power to keep away competition from other companies, to have the making of all artificial lights, electric or other, to charge 5/5 per thousand, when it is now only 4/2 and not only so, but they can increase or diminish such standard price under certain conditions (see clause 28). This being the case, because the consumers (who have their own interests at stake) oppose the measure, they forsooth, are short sighted in their policy.

I am glad Ajax used the word 'majority' as it evidently shows he was not present at the meeting, or if so, was entirely oblivious of the fact that instead of consisting 'of the more ignorant section of working men,' it was a thoroughly representative one of the principal ratepayers and consumers in the district. The statement respecting ignorance certainly speaks little for the mental capabilities of those who composed that majority, but also proves the weak judgment of their author in using such words. Are we to suppose that all the wisdom was concentrated in the 'valiant few' who voted for the non-opposing of the Bill? and out of which ten, it has since been proved four were ineligible to vote.

The residents of Rothwell must have sunk to a very low condition when according to Ajax they are deluded by 'loud mouthed demagogues,' 'self constituted agitators,' 'who have no interest in the village,' 'who only wish for cheaply acquired popularity,' 'who by twisting and turning their specious and unfair argument suit their own crafty purposes.' Can it be really possible? The above string of epithets must have considerably astonished the persons referred to, not by the high sounding terms used, but by their untruthfulness.

It may be right to make such statements but is Ajax prepared to prove them? In what way are the 'ignorant section of working men' deluded? Is it because it has been clearly shown to them that gas can be got cheaper than at present?

While on this point, may I ask, did the specious and unfair argument intended to delude come from one side only? What about the statements respecting prices of gas in other Companies and of dividends received, which were made by interested speakers on the other side, and were intended to be quite as misleading as any which Ajax imputes to the opposition.

The question at issue is not merely one of feeling, but one which touches the pocket, and because certain persons have been at great trouble and expense to bring it under the notice of the inhabitants they are unmannerly styled, 'loud mouthed demagogues' &c., &c. It is said they have 'no interest in the village' why the very fact of their agitation on the question disproves that statement, and by their services they are doing good to the whole community. It may be clever on the part of Ajax to impute motives to these gentlemen but let me tell him that his opinion is not shared by the majority of the people of Rothwell.

Criticism on any subject is often necessary, especially on public questions, but if indulged in, by all means let it be fair, just, and not too personal. If kept within proper bounds, it is beneficial, but if not, to use Ajax's own words, it becomes simply presumptuous impudence.

Yours &c.,
ONE OF THE IGNORANT SECTION OF WORKING MEN.

[In reference to the remarks used by Ajax last week, we must disclaim any sympathy with the strong phrases used, and ask all our correspondents, while giving vent to their feelings, to use adjectives of a less pungent character than appeared in our late issue.

One or two statements of Mr. Turner's we must at once correct. Though a regular correspondent, Ajax is not in any sense a member of our staff.

The meetings of the Gas Company are not open to the public or to the press, therefore the word 'suppressed,' in reference to the meetings since the September one can hardly be accepted as correct.

We are sorry Mr. Turner's communication arrived so late last Thursday evening as to preclude any possibility of publication. All correspondence on any side of this or other public questions is always acceptable if only in time. First come, first served, in this department; Wednesday is better than Thursday.—Ed.]

FOOTBALL.

ROTHWELL v. STOURTON ROVERS.

The above match was played at Rothwell last Saturday, and resulted in a tie, each club scoring 1 goal. For the first time this season Rothwell won the toss, but there was not much to choose, as the field was in a very bad condition, owing to the recent rains, etc. Stourton started the ball, and long kicks were freely indulged in for the first few minutes, but the home forwards soon shook themselves into their places, and a nice bit of passing enabled them to make the first shy, which proved a failure. Stourton retaliated by a shot at the Rothwell citadel, but with no better result, the ball being taken again into the visitors territory, but the ground was very treacherous and before a shy could be made, Stringer returned it into the home quarters, and the Stourton forwards following well up, a scrimmage in the goal mouth ensued, which ultimately resulted in the first goal being scored by the visitors. Nothing more of importance occurred during the first half. On the game being resumed, the Rothwell forwards took the leather into their opponents' territory, and very frequently shots were made which hit both the posts and crossbar, but were for some time unsuccessful; until M. Fowler succeeded in putting the leather between the uprights, which made the home team equal with their opponents. No more goals were secured by either side, although the ball remained in close proximity to the Stourton goal until time was called.

ROTHWELL HARMONIC v. OULTON.

The above clubs faced each other at Rothwell, last Saturday, for the first time since March, 1880, when they played a very keen game, which resulted in a tie, neither side scoring the coveted goal. The weather last Saturday was very unfavourable for football playing, and the field was in a frightful condition before half the match had been played. Rothwell won the toss, and the Oulton captain kicked off at 3·30, sending the ball well into the home territory, but it was quickly returned by the backs, and the forwards getting possession of the ball carried it close to the Oulton goal, but failed to score. The visitors now returned the compliment, as their forwards secured the leather from a six yards kick, and with better success than their opponents, lowered the Rothwell colours, thus scoring the first goal during the match. However, they did not maintain their superiority for long. Taylor set the ball in motion, and a splendid bit of passing enabled the home team to secure their first goal. After this, play became very fast, the Rothwell team playing well to a man, and showed their superiority by piling on other 3 goals, and when time was called Rothwell was victorious by 4 goals to 2, after one of the quietest games played between the two teams. The following were the players:—Rothwell. A Judson, goal; G W Blakey, T Swift, backs; T W Wright, G Harrison, A Green, half-backs; H Taylor, G Whitehead, W H Ward, W Jackson, G Adamson, (capt) forwards; J Woobank, umpire. Oulton:—R W Higgins, goal; W Wilmot, R Jowett, backs; W F Parkinson, W. Hutchinson, J Clarkson, half-backs; A Gosney, T West, G M Abbey, J Britton, E Boothroyd, (capt.) forwards; F Denison, umpire.

THE EAST AND WEST YORKSHIRE UNION RAILWAY.

We understand that the bill for the promotion of this Railway has passed the Standing orders, and that the usual deposit of 5 per cent. on the cost of the undertaking has been made, (£25000.)

A public meeting was held on Monday, at the George Hotel, Selby, for the purpose of laying the plans and general scheme of the above proposed railway before the inhabitants of the district, and for the purpose of obtaining their support in procuring the necessary parliamentary powers. There was a large attendance of farmers, and some of the principal landowners in the district were also represented. Mr. John Twigg, J.P., of Rusholme Grange, Drax, presided; and Mr. Patterson, one of the engineers concerned, was called upon to explain the scheme to the meeting.

The many advantages that would accrue to the inhabitants were pointed out; and other gentlemen spoke in favour of the scheme, it being stated that Mr. H. B. Firman, of Gateforth House, through whose estate it is proposed that the line shall run a considerable length, had been appointed a director In reply to questions, Mr. Patterson said at present it was not proposed to build a station at Birkin, neither was there any reason at present to give encouragement to the Church Fenton and Wistow Railway. Mr. White, engineer, spoke upon the coal workings, and the meeting passed a resolution in support of the scheme.

During the meeting a telegram was received from London, announcing that 53 memorials had been lodged, but none against the East and West Yorkshire Union Railway or the Hull and Barnsley Railway, so that the Bill will now be duly presented before a Committee of the House of Commons upon its merits.

The Parliamentary Committee of the Wakefield Town Council have unanimously recommended the Council to support the proposed Railway; the Mayor, we understand, being specially favorable to it.

As we go to Press, we are informed that the Examiner has fixed next Thursday, the 19th inst, for examination of proof of Standing orders in relation to the Bill.

The progress of the scheme hitherto has been all that could be desired, and the future is most hopeful of its ultimate success.

ROTHWELL MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

We are glad to hear of an improvement which is being effected in our Institute. A great want of space on the stage in the Large Hall has been keenly felt for some time, and the inconvenience thus caused has been considerably heightened by the absence of ante-rooms. The present stage is not even deep enough for concerts where concentration of voices is required as in choruses or part songs, while for entertainments of any other character it is totally inadequate. As a result, anyone wishing to give entertainments other than those of a very simple character have been obliged to enlarge the stage at their own cost, thus adding another item of expense to a list perhaps only too fully burdened already. To our own knowledge this consideration has prevented the production of several high-class entertainments.

The committee of the above Institute have at length determined to remedy matters, and at one stroke have sought to enlarge the stage and at the same time to provide means for the easy fitting up of temporary ante-rooms whenever occasion requires it. This is intended to be done by adding a front part to the present stage making the entire stage space about 28 feet by 11. The new front being moveable, the hall may, if preferred, be used exactly as at present so that for Bazaars or similar purposes no space will be lost. By the judicious arrangement of moveable posts and bars draped with curtains the stage can be arranged into three divisions, consisting of open stage space in the centre (filled with drop curtain), flanked on each side by an anteroom about 10 feet by 6. This arrangement will be of great service for concert or entertainment purposes, more especially with regard to the comfort of the performers themselves.

The matter has, we are informed, been thoroughly thrashed out by the committee before deciding, and we need scarcely say that the most important impediment was a want of funds, the Institute being still heavily in debt in consequence of recent improvements; but an offer having been made to give an entertainment to consist of a concert followed by a farce or comedietta, in aid of the enterprize, early next month, they felt justified in undertaking the task.

We feel sure the action of the committee is a praiseworthy one, and seeing that the improvement is one which will benefit all classes of concert givers, we trust that every section of our community will give its aid to the undertaking by making the concert, when it does come off, a pecuniary success, and thus shew the committee that their efforts are appreciated.

ROTHWELL DEBATING SOCIETY.

On Wednesday evening, the members of the above Society had the pleasure of listening to a very interesting and instructive address from one of the vice-presidents, (Mr. John Turner,) entitled, "Notes on the Paris Electrical and the London Smoke Abatement Exhibitions." Mr. Turner, at the outset of his remarks, stated that he would devote the evening to a chat on some of the objects which had most attracted his attention at months, had proved beyond doubt that it can be adapted for private dwellings. The two principal lights in use are the 'arc' and the 'incandescent.' Speaking of the different kinds of force, such as light, heat, sound, &c., he stated that no kind of force can be created, and that the causes which brought about many of the forces of nature, still remain undiscovered. The latter part of the lecturer's remarks were devoted to showing the great improvement that had been made in blast furnaces, and the invention of the gas engine. The black board illustrations, models, etc., made use of by Mr Turner, gave additional interest to the subject, which was listened to throughout with the closest attention. At the close a cordial vote of thanks was given to the lecturer, for his intellectual treat.

WOODLESFORD SCHOOL BOARD.

The ordinary monthly meeting of the Board was held on Monday evening, the 9th instant, Mr Jackson, chairman, the Rev. A. J. Irvin, Messrs Mason, Nowell and the clerk being present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. Mason asked if the late proceedings in the County Court had caused any improvement in the payment of school fees, in reply to which the clerk stated that there were several people who had avoided prosecution on that occasion by promising to pay their arrears by instalments and had since taken no steps towards reducing the amount owing by them and that others were falling into arrears also. It was accordingly decided to proceed at once against all those who owe 2/6 and upwards, and that instruction should be given to the teachers to report to the clerk every month the names of the parents who are in arrears in each department.

A draft form of agreement for letting rooms in the schools was produced and adopted.

The Rev. A. J. Irvin applied for the use of the girls' and infants' school rooms on Monday evening, the 16th instant, for the distribution of the Sunday school prizes and an entertainment. The Board resolved to grant Mr. Irvin the use of the rooms as requested on payment of 2s. 6d. for fire and gas.

The use of the infants' school room was granted to Miss Abbey on Tuesday evening in every week for a sewing class, on payment of 6d. per week. The proceeds of the sale of the work done will be devoted to the Leeds Infirmary.

It was resolved to charge the Rev. A. J. Irvin the sum of 5s. for the use of the Boys' and Infants' rooms for a Christmas Tree and sale of work which was held on the 23rd. and 26th of December, 1881.

The meeting not having been held on the usual date, the 2nd inst., the cheques for the teachers' salaries due on the first inst., had been signed by the chairman and the Rev. A. J. Irvin, the payment of the salaries was accordingly confirmed, and several small accounts were ordered to be paid, and cheques drawn for the same.

The clerk reported the receipt of £60 from the overseers, further on account of the precept for £250 which was issued on the 3rd October 1881, making £100 now received towards the total amount.

Instructions were given to Mr. R. J. Smith, to make a plan of the school premises shewing the position and depth of the various drains and water pipes

The schedules showing the result of the late examination of the schools were produced, together with an analytical summary of the passes, etc., in each department. As the inspector's report on the schools has not yet been received, particulars of the above are withheld for the present. A summary of the inspector's report, with the amount of grant earned, and analysis of the result of the examination will be duly made public. It it, however, satisfactory to remark that a larger percentage of passes has been obtained in each department, than in the previous year.

It was decided that prizes and certificates should again be given to the children who have passed the examination satisfactorily, in accordance with the resolution of last year, in addition to which it was resolved to give prize cards to those children in the infants' department, who have made 350 attendances and upwards during the school year.

POLICE NEWS.

WEST RIDING COURT.

(MONDAY).

THE CHARGES OF BURGLARY AGAINST AARON PRINCE.—Aaron Prince, who has been remanded from time to time, was again brought up on charges of burglary, and also on a charge of sacrilege. Mr Williams prosecuted, and Mr Lodge defended. It will be remembered that the prisoner was found in a chimney at Lofthouse on the morning of December 13th, he having intended to enter a butcher's shop. He was taken into custody, and subsequently, in consequence of inquiries made, it was resolved to charge the prisoner with the offence mentioned above. The first case taken was that in which Prince was charged with sacrilege by entering All Saints' Church, at Woodlesford, and stealing certain articles therefrom. The first witness called was Edward Jellyman, sexton at the church at Woodlesford, who spoke to having locked up the church on the night of Sunday, the 18th ult. Next morning it was found that the church had been entered by the vestry window, close to which, on the wall of the church, were some marks of toe-nails, while on the side in the churchyard were several footprints. The witness stated that in a cupboard in the vestry there were three bottles, two of which contained port wine, and one of the bottles was taken away; while a safe which had been standing in the vestry was found lying on the side of the Midland line, having been taken out of the church, and thrown down the embankment. Mr Lewis, butler for Mr Henry Bentley, of Oulton, spoke to giving the last witness a bottle of wine, and to the best of his belief the cork he placed in the bottle was the same as that produced—he took the cork for the bottle in question from a number of Schweppe's corks which were lying on a shelf. Police-constable Seal said that about nine o'clock on the evening of Sunday, 18th ult., he saw the prisoner standing on a bridge about 40 yards from the church. He watched him for some time, and saw him go up the road towards Leeds. Police sergeant Turton said that on Monday, 19th ult., about ten o'clock he visited Woodlesford Church, and saw the footprints on the ground and the toe marks on the wall already spoken of. Witness had compared the prisoner's clogs with these footprints and marks, and he found that they corresponded exactly. On charging the prisoner with having entered Woodlesford Church, and stealing therefrom one bottle of wine and an iron safe, he replied, 'Oh, I can clear myself of that.' Witness searched the prisoner's house on the 26th December last and found two bottles—one containing vinegar and the other empty. In one of the bottles was a cork produced—which had Schweppe's name on it; and this was similar to the one which had been given by Mr. Bentley's butler. Police-constable Clarke also spoke to the footprints corresponding with the clogs produced. There were two other cases against the prisoner—one of stealing a sheep belonging to Messrs Charlesworth, and the other of entering the Co-operative shop at Tingley—but as it was impossible to finish the case then, it was decided to adjourn the hearing till to-day (Friday).

BAD LANGUAGE AND ASSAULT.—Samuel Hoycard, a farmer, of Carlton, was charged with assaulting an elderly man named Thomas Swift, also a farmer of Carlton. Mr Walter Lister appeared for complainant and Mr Lodge for defendant. The complainant stated that on the 25th ult., he went to a shop kept by a relative, and there found the defendant. The latter began complaining about things in general, and finding fault with everybody, on which the complainant said he thought there were some honest people in the world yet. From this they got to words, and the complainant appeared to feel sore when the defendant said he owed some money to him. Mr Swift indignantly denied this, and said he owed nothing in the village. High words ensued, and complainant admitted that he called Hoycard the 'scandal of the village,' and other bad names. At last the defendant seemed to get enraged, and struck the complainant in the eyes. A witness for the defendant, named Ellis, said that the complainant called the defendant a 'thief' and afterwards sparred in front of the defendant. Mr Lodge admitted the striking, but urged the great provocation his client had received. The Bench dismissed the case, but cautioned the defendant that in future he must not take the law into his own hands.

HUNSLET WESLEYANS v. ROTHWELL HARMONIC.—Played at Hunslet, and a very fast game resulted in a tie—one goal each. For the Wesleyans, Kirkham, Holling, Broadley, and Kelly played a good game; for the Harmonic Taylor and Swift also played well.

OUR STREET ARABS.

AN APPEAL.

Only a 'Street Arab,' what does it mean?—
To busy wayfarers well used to the scene,
To gaily-dressed scions of fashion and fun,
To the thoughtless and selfish and pitiless one.

Only a 'Street Arab,' how does it sound?—
To scores in whom pity may often be found,
Who give of their means to acknowledged distress,
And fain would see suffering and poverty less.

Only an 'Arab,' the question's the same,
For those to whom home is not merely a name,
Who have children to greet them with rapture and glee,
And can draw self contentment from most that they see.

Such thoughts impress me too oft at the sight
Of those poor, puny starved waifs and strays of the night,
Those half clad and shrunken humanities small,
Who in terrible earnest solicit us all.

Poor little things, is it fitting or meet
Ye should traverse, in squalor, the purlieu and street,
Crying your small wants in tones sad [illegible],
Or asking for alms if you've nothing to sell?

Crying in voices not childlike and clear,
But hoarse from exposure and piteous with fear—
Fear, lest when back to your kennels, rebuff
Or kicks should await you for not doing enough.

Children of parents degraded and poor,
Too often from causes which lie at their door;
Children un-schooled, but with knowledge complete,
In arts of low cunning, and tricks of the street.

None of youth's brightness, none of its joy,
No home repose when small troubles annoy;
No moral guidance, firm, loving, and mild,
Grimly old-fashioned, tho' only a child.

No young ambitions to cherish or chase,
Thrown on the world's course but not in the race;
Cast on life's sea like a fragment of wreck,
In the great social system scarce seeming a speck.

Is there no remedy, no one to blame?
Is our philanthropy halting and lame?
Or is the law in this instance remiss,
Powerless to alter a grievance like this?

Be it or no thus, who says it is not
On our humanity 'scutcheon a blot?
If law or philanthropy either needs blame,
Why not at once try to lessen the shame!

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

"Angels and ministers of grace defend us."

REALLY the amount of indignation, and explosive eloquence, not to mention the quantity of pens, ink and paper consumed, which my remarks on the opposition to the Rothwell Gas Bill have called forth, is something alarming and fairly takes one's breath away. In the first place I did not allude to any person by name, but it appears that the cap fits one or two gentlemen to such a nicety that they have jumped headfirst into it, and appear to be standing upon their heads in the said cap for fear of losing the article. Mr. Turner's letter offords matter for consideration on the part of the supporters of the Gas Bill, especially that part of it which credits them with wilfully mis stating matters respecting the price of gas at other places, and on several other points; but I do like the manner in which Mr. Turner lays claim to a superior sort of knowledge than most people are possessed of, it is really refreshing to notice how he writes about ordinary people.

I see that Mr. Editor has taken the trouble to correct Mr. Turner in his assertion that I form part of the staff of this journal; instead of being part of the 'staff' I may be more correctly termed the "whip" which requires to be applied to unruly juveniles.

Mr. Turner's P.S. quite spoils his letter, which apart from its egotistic style is undoubtedly well written, as he vainly imagines that I shall be simple enough to throw off my impenetrable disguise, even for the purpose of engaging in a newspaper warfare with the redoubtable Mr. J. Turner, Jun.; oh dear no, Mr. Turner ought at least to remember that chaff is not the most suitable bait wherewith to capture patriarchal dickey-birds.

It appears that Mr. Benjamin Batty also is exercised in his mind about my assumed name, and after carefully adjusting the cap previously mentioned, upon his ambrosial locks, squares up at me in defence of the opponents of the Gas Bill, and as an opening shot fires off a most elaborate title for my distinguished self, "The somewhat-notorious-self-opinionated-sage-of-Woodlesford." Ahem! pretty, is'nt it? I wonder how long it took Mr. Batty to get it up. By the way; sage (and onions) suggests goose, does it not? Then again, what a blessing it is that I imputed motives, for had I not done so, we should have had the misfortune to be deprived of the benefit of the learned epistle under notice; after a reference to certain phrases of mine which appear to have speedily become famous, and a dark allusion to "the braggart and the charlatan," (two gentlemen of Mr. Batty's acquaintance, I presume) he goes on to speak of the Bill, and thinks that because I have ventured to put in a protest against the opposition, I have not seen the Bill; now I have seen the Bill and I consider on the whole that the Bill is a good Bill and I hope with a few modifications, the Bill will pass; dear me, after all this *bill*ing and cooing begin to feel quite *bil*lious, and if I have call in the doctor I shall get another bill from him.

Mr. Benjamin Batty is quite safe in promising to give £5 to the Leeds Infirmary if I will prove that Rothwell gas is "double the illuminating power of Leeds," the "illuminating power of Leeds" must be very great, especially when we recollect that the electric light is used in addition to "Woodall's mixture," and if Mr. Batty can inform me precisely what "the illuminating power of Leeds" really is, I shall no doubt be able to enter into the subject more fully.

I think after reading Mr. Batty's concluding paragraph, that my "imputation of motives" is quite as justifiable as his would be humorous accusation of intoxication. Does Mr. Batty speak from his own experience in propounding his nostrum for the removal of the after effects of inebriation? if so, I suppose he may be regarded as an authority, and his prescription should be carefully preserved by all who are in any way likely to form too close an acquaintance with "plum pudding and xxx Timothy," whoever that gentleman may be, probably another of Mr. Batty's friends.

THE gentleman who signs himself "One of the ignorant section of working men" makes the mistake so common to correspondents of Rothwell of adopting a nom de plume quite inappropriate, as anyone may know by reading the letter that he at least is not ignorant and therefore his appellation is incorrect. I like consistency in the choice of a name as well as anything else. After all that has been said I am still of opinion that it is a "short-sighted policy" to spend several hundred pounds in parliamentary opposition when the object aimed at might be gained in another manner, viz., by calm and collected conference between the directors of the Gas Company and intelligent and influential men of position on the part of the public; if this had been done, I have not the slightest doubt that the matter might have been satisfactorily arranged without the assistance of those finger-in-every-pie agitators who seem to be so busy.

With regard to the 'ignorant section of working men' let me ask if there is not in every community such an element as I have described, who can be led by the nose by anyone possessed of sufficient assurance and high sounding eloquence coupled with denunciation of those occupying higher and more responsible social positions than the section in question; and in these days of equality the influence of one man so far as voting power is concerned, is in many cases equal to that of another, even though one may be an occupier of a cottage at two shillings per week and unable to read a word for himself, and the other a wealthy landowner or manufacturer who will have to bear the greater portion of the cost of paying the piper for the tune to which his opponent chooses to dance.

I HAVE noticed several times lately when I have had occasion to be abroad after nightfall, (an occurrence which from my advanced age and consequently susceptible nature, I am always anxious to avoid as much as possible) in passing a certain detached villa residence situated within a thousand miles of Woodlesford Church, a figure, apparently that of a female, crouching under the shadow of an angle in the wall near the back entrance, and away from the glimmer of the gas light; being of a somewhat nervous and superstitious disposition, I have not yet summoned up courage to fathom the mystery and ascertain whether the apparition be mortal or otherwise but perhaps after this intimation some more adventurous individual will be able to lay the phantom so that my rest may be no more disturbed by its appearance.

SINCE the hint given by the writer of Plain Papers on Social Economy, all the employers of labour, working men, secretaries of clubs, Mechanics' Institutes, Friendly Societies and everybody else, have been anxiously looking out week by week for the further supply of wisdom and knowledge graciously bestowed by the talented writer; I trust 'that no evil hath befallen him' but that we may shortly be favoured with another of his masterly 'productions.'

On dit that my friend 'Freddy' of the Mason's Arms is troubled at my mention of his establishment last week, and that if he could have got at me would have felt inclined to 'peel,' in the ancient fashion of the P.R. Now I am sure that I did not wish to hurt my friend's feelings by what I said. Is it not usual for everybody to have their blinds carefully drawn after dark?

AJAX.

"EX FUMO DARE LUCEM."

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

After the vagaries of Ajax and the bursting forth of so much 'GAS' in your last week's issue, I really must protest against your publishing the Times so near the 'Match Works.' Also after such a history crowded into one week, is it at all surprising that Mr. John Turner should forget both what he told me and also what he told to the meeting at the Mechanics' Hall? His challenge about the 13¾ per cent dividend given by the Bill at the present price of gas, I must candidly tell him, is not what I disputed at the meeting, and his pinning that querry to his coat tail and defying me or any one else to tread upon it is rather too much like his second speech at the time referred to.

The very words as near as I can possibly reproduce them, that I disputed were these, Mr. Turner said—'We are asked to show gratitude to a Company that seeks powers in the proposed Bill to have the monopoly of supplying us with gas, and at the present rate of charges (4/2 per 1000 feet), to make a profit out of us of 13¾ per cent on the transaction.' In reply I explained that at the present value of shares £8, 10 per cent dividend was 6¼ per cent profit, and should the shares advance to £10 purchase, then the profit would be exactly half the per centage of the dividend. As already intimated Mr. Turner very cleverly fenced the question, for it did not suit his purpose to acknowledge the correctness of my figures. I do not dispute that the Bill gives 13¾ per cent dividend at 4/2, presuming that such dividend can be earned; and with the same series of figures and line of reasoning, the Bill gives 20 per cent at 2/1, as stated by Mr. Turner. I can, however, show by following the scale lower, that 5d per 1000 gives 25 per cent dividend, also as a climax that at nothing per 1000 feet, 26¼ per cent dividend by the 10 per cent and sliding scale of the Bill. The prejudice exhibited at the meeting swallowed both impracticable schemes, impossible figures and Tommy's Pudding, almost refusing to listen to reasonable suggestions made by the chairman and myself. The opposition carried a proposition to oppose the whole bill, and seems now to be waking up to the fact that they cannot do it. Some few saw that at the time, and smilingly submitted to the inevitable. Trusting to your being more considerate toward me than the assemblage referred to, I take the liberty of giving my opinion of the situation, hoping that it may lead to some practical solution of the difficulty.

First then, the Gas Company must be aware by this time that the presence of gas in the Local Board district at 1/10 makes 5/5 a very high standard, which to satisfy the public at all must be materially reduced. Also, they have been able to steadily reduce the price of gas and increase their dividend for some years past, and why? because lower prices induce freer consumption, and larger production materially reduces its cost. Further, with the substantial dividends declared, another reduction will be expected. I am informed also by a gas engineer, that considerably more gas can be got per ton of coal by using a gas engine and exhaust fan to take the pressure and consequent waste off the retorts. The Company were probably advised to ask for plenty so that they could graciously withdraw that which they could not expect to get; electric light clauses included.

On the other hand, the Company are no doubt confident that the Leeds Corporation Gas Company will not intrude upon Rothwell Gas Company's territory or assist any new adventure to do so., Further, that the Parliamentary Committee are very considerate to country companies who have their mains extended over a large area with a limited consumption. Also that the unreasonable demands of Local Boards have in instances very near us completely defeated their purpose and saddled townships with very heavy expenses both of opposition and defence. The Company may also tell us that many large companies have a higher standard price with the same maximum dividend and sliding scale. Yet they dont charge half the price, or declare any more than 10 per cent div. Then, we answer, why run the risk and cost of opposition for such clauses? I here ask Mr. Turner if the Gas act referred to in the Bill does not render it compulsory to declare no more than 10 per cent dividend, and lower the price when that is reached? Then what becomes of his 13¾ per cent idea?

In conclusion I hope that if even a narrow majority on the Local Board can be got in favor of opposing the Bill, they they will very carefully consider what more they are at all likely to get by employing counsel and witnesses at Westminster, than by employing themselves at Rothwell. Temporary triumphs please certain people, whilst 'a prudent man foreseeth the evil, and hideth himself; but the simple pass on and are punished.' My personal interests both in having gas at a reasonable price and rates as low as is consistent with needed improvements, are identical with the larger ratepayers, and although it may please some parties to give the legal profession a profitable excursion, I trust that wiser counsels will prevail, both on the part of the Gas Company and our local magnates, and also that mutual concessions will be made and matters settled reasonably.

With the compliments of the season to all concerned.

Yours very respectfully,
J. R. SEANOR.

THE GAS BILL OPPOSITION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

Though I may run the risk of being dubbed as too cowardly to sign my name to this communication, I shall go on the same line as your correspondent Ajax who by his sharp hits has been the cause of producing such a furore in the minds of the oppositionists as to inflict on the impartial Editor of the Rothwell Times the enormous length of letters which filled the columns of your paper last week.

I shall just take up one or two items in the discussion which affect me most seriously as a gas consumer and ratepayer.

Our friend Mr Turner intimates the possibility that the opposition to the Bill will not cost more than £500, which I fear would be very much below the real sum, as the Gas Co., having gone in for a Bill, must have incurred a good half of their costs already, and it is not likely they will withdraw (as requested by the stupid resolution of a late Board meeting). It may be put down as certain that the Co., having once put their hand to the business, will not now withdraw their Bill, but will do their utmost to secure its being passed. Very well, we will suppose £500 is to be spent by the Board in opposing the Bill, (though £1000 is much nearer the mark) that will cost every person who pays rates 5d more in the £ for rates, so that a £20 ratepayer will have 8s 4d more to pay, and £100 ratepayers will have to pay £2 1s 8d more. 'Yes,' says friend Batty, on behalf of tenant ratepayers, 'But I'm a ratepayer, I have a vote, I shall have my proportion to pay.' Will you? How? Will you submit to your landlord putting on higher rent? My word! what a row there would be in our cottage homes if all the rents had to be advanced say 2d a week for the sake of opposing the Bill. How many of those to whom the collector came would say, 'I don't burn gas myself, why should I pay?' If everybody voting for the opposition of the Bill is willing to pay his fair share direct to the Board, then my argument is met, and the cause for complaint on that score will cease; the £500 or £1000 will be subscribed by all, imposing no heavier burden on the larger ratepayers than is their proportion. If the occupiers who composed the majority of the public meeting will do this, then go on with the opposition.

It is rather remarkable, however, that those who oppose the Bill are all of them small consumers of gas. Mr Turner, the principal opponent, never pays a penny for gas to the Rothwell Gas Light Co., or to the Local Board for rates in his life, what does it matter to him about the cost? How much gas does Mr B Batty pay for, (No 2 opponent) and what amount of rates has he ever paid. Mr James Batty is one of the two worth listening to, as far as personal interest is concerned, but when he spoke at the public meeting what did he say? Echo answers 'What?' and Tommy answers 'Pudding.' Mr Lawton is quoted as another opponent; I have an impression he burns no gas at all. Mr Sanderson seems to be wavering which side he should take, but I would warn him about the increased rate an opposition would mean. I shall no doubt be pointed to Mr Clark as an interested opponent: and so he is, but why? Has he not used every means possible for securing popularity, and a seat on the Board; what a splendid opportunity of making himself an election cry.

On the other hand, Messrs Charlesworths' and Seanors', who are the largest consumers of gas, and consequently most affected by the price, strange to say, agree in supporting the Bill; what does common-sense say to the question? Who are the most likely leaders in the matter, men and businesses like these, or persons who hardly know what it is to pay rates and gas bills at all.

Let the Local Board carefully consider this matter at their meetings, and not be caught in the rush of mere popular feeling, and find in the reaction "the little bill to pay."

Yours respectfully,
A CONSUMER.

THE GAS BILL AND THE RATEPAYERS.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times

Sir,

Perhaps you will permit me to point out to property owners in the Rothwell Local Board's district the issue at stake in the matter of opposing the Gas Company's Bill out of the rates.

I take it there can be no disputing the fact that the Company are entitled to some Parliamentary powers to protect their plant and mains; this principle is universally admitted, save perpaps by a few extreme radicals, whose practical experience in such affairs is nil.

If the Gas Company ask for unreasonable powers in their Bill let those who think so point out the unreasonable clauses and arrange with the Gas Company's directors for an interview, when, I have no doubt, amendments will be arranged and introduced into the Bill making it fair and just.

Everybody who knows the present directors of the Gas Company must admit they are not men likely to prove unreasonable if met by reasonable argument, but so far as I can make out the opponents of the Bill take no steps to approach the directors, alleging the directors ought to go to them. Fancy the grave and portly men, the directors of the Rothwell Gas Light Company, accompanied by their secretary, groping their way to the Liberal Club, and, when once inside, amid the fumes of tobacco smoke making terms with these irrepressible leaders of public opinion. The thing is preposterous. There are two distinct classes concerned in the contemplated opposition to the Bill; on the one hand the property owners, on the other the compound householder.

I am merely recording my own opinion, and I may say this opinion is derived from inquiries industriously made, that the main body of property owners are not favourable to contest before the Parliamentary Committee the Gas Bill. If any modifications are needed the prevailing opinion is, that the Gas Company's directors would concede to a proper representation as much, if not more, than would be gained by a costly contest. In case the Local Board decide to fight the Bill, out of whose pockets will the money be drawn? Why, from the property owners!

The compound householder would not be called upon to pay a penny; he pays a regular weekly fixed amount, rent and rate included. The rate may be shifted from 3s in the pound sterling, to 5s, and the compound householder is not affected, that is to say not immediately. I quite agree that if we had to oppose a Bill every year and the average cost of such opposition was say £500, that the consequence would reach the compound householder in the end—in the shape of higher rent—the risen rent representing the extra rate. Happily, Parliamentary opposition to legalising local improvements are not likely to be of yearly occurrence with us, and so the cost of this one, if persisted in, will fall principally upon property owners, while the compound householder goes scot free. The men who packed the public meeting recently held at the Mechanics' Institute, and who put up their hands to oppose the Bill were principally compound householders, and lads, moreover; I am told by persons who should know, that the majority had been drilled for the duty of that occasion, night by night, for a week or two previous, at the Liberal Club. It was looked upon as good fun on the part of these persons to badger the chairman of the Gas Company and his fellow directors, especially seeing they were in no wise likely to be called upon to pay for the frolic.

There were two or three persons at that meeting who took sides against the Bill, for whom I entertain feelings of admiration and respect for their conscientious motives, but these persons, I feel persuaded, would much rather get some of the (to them) obnoxious provisions of the Bill amended amicably, than go to the expense of contesting the Bill as a whole; when I say this I have in mind Mr Samuel Batty's remarks especially.

This being, as already stated, a property owners' question, it behoves them to look after their interests. Let the persons who are in favour of opposing this Bill open a subscription list, and get funds to oppose it at their own cost.

That will be a fair test of the sincerity of the opposition, especially the more prominent agitators, who have lighted, and who now so frantically fan the flame of discontent. If we put the costs upon the rates, Messrs Charlesworth, who pay, I am told, nearly half the rates, will have to pay half the cost of opposing the Bill, and that, too, in spite of their publicly declared opinion that the Gas Compopy are entitled to Parliamentary powers. I hear the whole subject is to be considered at a special meeting of the Local Board next week; on the Board there are sober-minded men capable of understanding the question, and these, I think, may be relied upon to put the cost of opposing the Bill, if it is to be opposed, upon the shoulders of those who clamour for opposition.

In the hope that those who make the quarrel shall be the men to pay,

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
A PROPERTY OWNER,
January, 1882. Rothwell Haigh.

THE ROTHWELL GAS QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

The following short paragraph copied from the Leeds Mercury of last Saturday will have some significance for those of your readers who are interested in the above question. Its insertion in your paper to-morrow will oblige,

Yours truly,
A GAS CONSUMER.

LEEDS GAS.—The report of Mr C Buckley (Magistrates' Inspector) shews the average illuminating power for the past month, 17.34, a candle and one-third more than the Act requires. When tested at the office in Wharfe St., 26 tests shewed the average of illuminating power to be 17.22.—Leeds Mercury, Jan. 17th, 1882.

MR. KIRKBY'S CONCERT.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

I feel confident that the perusal of the notice and graceful remarks in your last issue relative to the now infirm and old, though warm hearted, Mr. H. Kirkby, will have given much genuine pleasure to a great many of your readers.

For over forty years in Rothwell the venerable Handelian expert has plied his needle and interwoven his silken thread in miles of good Yorkshire broad cloth; for the same period he has ever been ready and willing to impart knowledge, musical and otherwise to anyone, and I need have no hesitation in affirming that he has always taken an active part and a fatherly pride in seeing the musical mind of the embryo musician who may at any time have sought (and not in vain) his kindly advice and pleasing information on any subject.

Who is he that loveth not music; that pleasurable and emotional art which knoweth neither nationality nor decay, the comfort and [illegible] of the [illegible], the [illegible] (music is everywhere; be it in the difficult [illegible] or the simple chorale, the sublime chorus or the [illegible] anthem, the religious hymn or the sympathetic ballad, the blithesome glee or the rustic song, be it wandering within the aisles of the ancient abbey or the sacred walls of the modern chapel, the Mechanics' Hall or the Working Man's Club Rooms, in the open street or at [illegible], it is ever welcome.

And now that the "Father of Rothwell music" (a graceful title honourably earned) has run past the allotted three score years and ten, and the inexorable nature thrusts upon him her inevitable old age infirmities, I think I may rest assured that the audience of the forthcoming concert for the benefit of the aged musician in question will be both appreciative and numerous, and that the performers both vocal and instrumental will devote their best energies in favour of promoting a successful issue to so worthy an object.

Yours faithfully,
C. GIBSON,
London.

WOODLESFORD CHORAL SOCIETY.

Re Ajax's suggestion "Free Concert."

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times

Sir,

On behalf of "The Brethren of the Guild of Calcined Cork," in connection with the above Society, I am requested to state that we are perfectly willing to give a Free Entertainment as a treat to all those in the township and neighbourhood, who cannot afford the expense of attending concerts, &c., in the ordinary way; providing that a guarantee fund of, say thirty shillings, be subscribed beforehand, to cover the necessary extra expenses.

It is proposed to allow subscribers to this fund the privilege of recommending a proportionate number of the audience as candidates for free tickets, the committee reserving to themselves the right of veto in cases which in their opinion do not come under the class for whom the treat is intended, each ticket will be endorsed with the name of the bearer. The tickets will not be transferable, and they must be obtained before Saturday the 28th inst. Subscriptions towards the expenses fund may be paid to the secretary or any member of the company.

I am Sir,
Yours faithfully,
WALTER LOCKWOOD, Hon. Sec.

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." MR. GLADSTONE ON AGRICULTURE.

Mr. Gladstone attended a dinner at Hawarden on Thursday in last week, in connection with his rent udit, and, in responding to the toast of his health after some personal allusions, said: It is now about 40 years since I first began to attend these dinners, and certainly I have seen many changes in that time. The first of these years were years of very considerable trial and pressure, and they followed or accompanied the introduction of that legislation known as Free Trade legislation. All those years, which were marked by some severity in the seasons and by some other trying circumstances, were followed by a quarter of a century which, as far as I know, was a period of greater and more general prosperity to agriculture than was known in this country for a long time before, and the test of that prosperity was to be found in this—that almost every article of agricultural produce went up greatly in price. Of that there is no doubt whatever. Wheat, of course, which is of great importance here, is an exception. But, still, there has been no very great fall in the price of wheat. Other produce, barley and oats, meat, wool, butter, and almost everything else that the farmer is interested in, went up in price, and in a manner which showed that it would not go down again to former levels; and even in this period of distress, if we take that as an example—a period during which a great deal of pressure has been felt—notwithstanding that, as you know perfectly well, at the worst the prices for which stock have been sold and the prices which the butcher has obtained for his meat have been, I believe, very much higher than they used to be forty, fifty, or sixty years ago. I hope that these facts are quite sufficient to arm you against a delusion that is attempted to be pressed upon the agriculturists of this country by some persons who ought to know better when they have endeavoured to teach you that you ought to look for the improvement of your condition to the restoration of what was called protection. Now, I have placed in your view this fact, that, as I have said wheat on the average fetched very few shillings per quarter more in the time of protection than in the time of free trade, and every article which is of the smallest consequence to agricultural production has fetched much higher prices, steadily, solidly higher prices, since freedom of trade has been introduced than under the old system by which prices were kept up by refusing admission into this country of the food upon which the people have to depend. Now, by the system of perfectly equal justice we are under, no impediment is offered to the introduction of provisions from all parts of the world, with this result, that the trade of the country has been increased five-fold, the population of the country meantime increasing with great rapidity; and there is not only a larger population, but a much richer population, and, being a much richer population, it has had a great deal more to spend in agricultural products, and, in consequence of there being more buyers for every article, it has been possible to sell more of the articles and to get a deal more for them. (Hear, hear.)

In proceeding, Mr. Gladstone said he believed that most of the farmers of this country were a great deal too rational to be likely to share in any of the gross delusions—he might say impostures, except that he did not wish to use a word which to some people might seem harsh—which some political characters were endeavouring to make appear as if they were remedies for the really very serious evils from which they had suffered. He contended that the evils from which the agricultural community had suffered were bad seasons and bad trade. It might be that the prosperity of the country required the chastening hand of Providence, that they should be taught to suffer and struggle, so that they might not be too proud of the great power and wealth to which this country had attained. After a period of this kind great benefits might arise from the pressure that it put upon them and the cause it gave them to examine the condition in which they stood. There was, in the first place, the question of rent, and that was a matter which would be settled by the natural operations of supply and demand. The Act passed for Ireland was a very remarkable and a very exceptional remedy for a very remarkable and a very exceptional state of things, and he did not at all believe that it was desired by English farmers any more than it was desired by English landlords that a court should determine how much rent should be paid by one to the other. He hoped that they would be able to manage these matters for themselves. Changes, however, would have to be made in our laws in matters that did not directly affect the tenancy. The transfer of land must be made more free, easy, cheap, and rapid than it is; and whether by leases or whether by security for the unexhausted improvements of the tenant, or whether by any other other means, he gave a confident opinion that they would have nothing to complain of as to the willingness of the existing Parliament to do what was just and reasonable.

Mr. Gladstone then proceeded to refer to proposed legislation, and said—There is a subject which must come before Parliament in this Session about to commence, in which you have a great interest, and that is the local government of the country. Provision has been made for a local government upon representative principles in the towns and cities of the country, but it has not yet been made in the counties. (Hear, hear.) The desire of the present Administration is to propose a thoroughly efficient measure of local government, which shall give to the inhabitants of the counties an effective power of controlling the county expenditure with the same principles of freedom and of representative government which belong to our central Legislature, and these principles shall be carried into effect under the local government of rural districts, just as much as they are now in the cities of the country. (Cheers.) There is another subject upon which you will no doubt wish to hear what I have to say—what is to be done for you with respect to assisting local taxation from Imperial sources? We are most desirous that you should have in the first place the means of controlling local expenditure and authority over the sources from which local taxes are raised; that you should have the means of controlling expenditure, and that matters should be so arranged as to give no temptation to waste, but that you should have every inducement to economize the outlay of money. But it is a very important question whether and in what measure you may receive further assistance from the Imperial Exchequer. You receive a great deal of assistance now, but, in my opinion, in a bad form. The expenditure for the police and the gaols of the country and some of the poor-law charges are borne either entirely or in part by the Imperial Exchequer, but they are borne in such a way as in general not to contribute to economy, but rather to introduce a great deal, and I think, probably, too much of central interference, or what is called centralization, into local government, and rather to draw us away from that old English principle which lies at the very root of our institutions—viz., the principle that the local population should have the management and control of local affairs. But, apart from that, the demand for assistance from the public exchequer might not be an unreasonable demand. It is based upon several considerations. One of them is that at the time when the present charges were fixed upon land the personal property of the country was comparatively small, and it was felt that it would be reasonable that personal property should bear a larger share of the charge. That may be so. Another consideration is, that changes are introduced by Parliament in the relative liability of the different districts of the country. For example, there are some parts of this parish in which the liability to rates has been very considerably altered by the Legislature during the past few years; and, again, the law places upon the shoulders of the occupier the immediate charge which presses severely upon him at the time when new rates are introduced or when old rates are increased. (Cheers.) Now, these are all matters, gentlemen, which, in the opinion of her Majesty's Government, deserve and call for great attention. The mode of meeting the public emergencies in these matters is much too complicated a business for me to enter upon at the present moment. We are devoting our attention to it with all our energy, and we hope to bring it under the early attention of Parliament. I say the early attention of Parliament because we are obliged now, if we speak of introducing anything into Parliament, to speak with great reserve, inasmuch as you know that the forms of Parliament have of late been used for purposes the very reverse of those for which they were intended. They were intended for the purpose of providing and effecting such legislation. They are used very much for the purpose of preventing any legislation at all. (Hear, hear.) The matter is, I may say, of such magnitude that Her Majesty's Government will have to deal with it in the coming Session. (Cheers.) Before bringing on great legislative measures of reform, it will be necessary to put the House of Commons in a condition satisfactorily to perform its duties. I earnestly hope that in the efforts we may make towards that end we shall receive energetic support of public opinion while we are endeavouring to put the House of Commons in a position to perform those duties. When that matter is disposed of I do not know of anything that will stand between us and the endeavour we intend to make to deal with the questions of local government and the expenditure of local taxes, in such a way as I hope will be found to meet reasonable expectations. (Cheers.) Now, with respect to measures, I am not aware of anything else that I ought to say unless I ought to make a confession and administer a caution. (Laughter and cheers.) It is all very well, it may be all very right, perhaps, to provide that the incidence of the rating should not be borne exclusively, as it now is, by the farmers, and when we speak of prospective arrangements it may be very right to provide them assistance in bearing the charges of these rates such as I have already glanced at. But if we are to look at the permanent interest of the occupier of the land, it must be borne in mind that whatever is the case the rates in rural districts will ultimately come back to the landlord. (Hear, hear.) You may get a great deal of benefit from it in the meantime, but you know perfectly well that if the rates upon the farm are £50 in the year and these rates are reduced by public measures to £25, and eventually the farmer and his family disappear altogether and a new tenant comes in, that new tenant will give £25 more rent for the farm than he would otherwise have done, because every tenant who puts to himself the question what amount of rent he can afford to pay will put against himself any rates he will have to pay, and will reckon in his own favour any reduction in those rates. In the case of new tenancies, the reduction of those rates will tell for the benefit of the landlord. Therefore, as one interested in the land, I should be very sorry to say that a reduction of the rates alone would sufficiently provide for the benefit of the tenant farmer through all time. For the benefit of the existing farmer I hope it will provide, but as to the benefit of the successor on the farm, as to the new tenant who comes to the farm, the reductions of the rates will be one the exclusive benefit of which will probably be found to be only felt by the landlord. Do not suppose me to say that that is a reason why the thing should not be done; but it is certainly a reason for considering whether, if the landlord is ultimately to receive a great benefit at the expense of the general body of taxpayers, that would not be a reason for taking away some of the advantages which the landlord now enjoys in respect to the taxes. Because, as you are probably aware, whereas personal property, which includes farming stock, is taxed very heavily upon the death of the owner, or when it passes to a successor landed property is on the contrary taxed very lightly, and I give it as my opinion, my personal opinion, that if the landlord is to be a receiver of great ultimate benefit by the reduction of rates at the cost of the general public, it would be right that some account should be taken of that by the landlord when he comes into his property on the death of the previous possessor. Well, now, gentlemen, there is a variety of subjects upon which I do not wish to detain you at any length, because I should feel myself guilty of impertinence if I were to attempt to make recommendations to you upon the manner in which you are carrying on your business. But this I may venture to say, that although I have spoken of two great causes operating upon agricultural prosperity—namely, the state of the seasons and the state of the general trade of the country, which determines whether you are to have rich customers or poor ones, and thereby determines what you are to receive, in a great degree, for your products—there is one other subject more important than either of these, and that is the skill and capital of the farmer himself—the capital he possesses and the way in which he uses that capital. I, for my part, have always felt that one of the great facts of this subject is that the agriculturist is called upon to undertake, and he does undertake voluntarily, a task of very great difficulty. The skill that is required to enable a man to get out of £1,000, £2,000, £3,000 or £4,000 in agriculture the same profit which he would get out of a retail trade, or even out of many descriptions of manufactures, is a far greater degree of skill. He has many more contingencies to consider. He has a wider and more varied knowledge to acquire. His profession, although it is probably the most agreeable of all professions, yet is also, on account of the demand which it makes upon his knowledge and skill, the most difficult of all professions. There is another thing. Manufacturers are continually deriving fresh benefits from the introduction of machinery. You are aware that manufactures in this country have been completely transformed by the introduction of machinery, and the career of improvement in that respect seems to be boundless. (Hear, hear.) Farmers have derived some advantage, but only a limited advantage, from machinery, and my hope is that they will derive more and more. (Cheers.)

After some further observations, Mr. Gladstone concluded by saying—I think the farmer ought to bear in mind that there is in this country unbounded capacity for consuming luxuries, and now the ordinary cottager has his poultry and vegetables that are commonly grown in gardens. These are all, more or less, in the nature of luxuries, and wherever the circumstances of the farmer enable him advantageously to devote any portion of his land to purposes of this kind, in my opinion it is no irrational thing to say that he should examine carefully, and ascertain whether he can derive advantage from it or not. There may be cases where fields may be divided, where vegetables not commonly grown by farmers might be raised or fruits reared, and, where access to market is available, may be found a source of no inconsiderable profit. It is a great mistake to suppose that the climate of this country is a reason against undertaking any steps of that kind, for if the climate of this country were against it, the climate of Scotland would afford a much stronger reason; and yet, bearing in mind this fact, large quantities of strawberries are supplied to the London market from the north of Scotland and from some of those parts of Scotland which are commonly considered to have a most unfavourable climate. This is not a matter on which I venture to do more than make suggestions, which may be of use here and there, and particularly on those holdings where farmers are supplied with plenty of labour to join in the work of cultivation; but as to any wholesale scheme of renovation or improvement, I do not think any such can be found, and I certainly should not look for it from that quarter. And now, gentlemen, that is about all that occurs to me to say upon these matters. I quite admit that in my public capacity you have a right to expect that such exertions as I can make shall be used to do what the law can do towards improving your condition. But after the law has done all that it can possibly do, those two causes to which I first referred will be of much greater consequence than anything that the law can do—the seasons that God may send us, and, secondly, that trade of the country on which you depend for a good, brisk, and profitable market. The advantage in coupling your own skill, your own industry, your own study to find out modes of improving your operations, modes of introducing new processes where they are defective—what lies in this is the main matter of all; and I can only hope that it may be given to you so to enjoy the benefits of just legislation, so to witness the bounty of Providence from year to year, so to see all classes of the community flourishing around you, that you may assure your prosperity, and so develop your own energy and industry; that as you meet in this room from year to year you may meet under circumstances ever growing brighter and brighter, ever diminishing your cares and increasing your hopes, that your calling may prosper for the honour and profit of yourselves and the advantage of your country. (Loud cheers.)

GREAT INCREASE IN EMIGRATION.

It appears that during the twelve months ending the 31st December last the total number of emigrants who left the Mersey for foreign parts was 228,813, being 45,274 more than for the year 1880, the figures for which were 183,539. The month showing the largest total was May last year, which was 38,263, against 29,292 in May, 1880.

The official returns of emigration from Liverpool during the month of December just closed were issued on Wednesday. These show that 77 vessels left the Mersey during the month, with 6,449 passengers, of whom 3,981 were English, 25 Scotch, 384 Irish, 1,826 foreigners, and 233 whose nationalities were not known.

To the United States 44 ships sailed, with 5,858 passengers, 3,662 being English, 23 Scotch, 352 Irish, and 1,821 foreigners. To British North America, 6 ships, with 274 passengers, 263 being English and 11 Irish.

There were no Scotch emigrants to Canada, which is an unusual circumstance.

To Australia, 1 ship, with 14 passengers, 9 being English, 2 Scotch, 2 Irish, and 1 foreigner. To South America, 7 ships, with 97 passengers, 47 being English, 19 Irish, 4 foreigners, and 27 not known; East Indies, 7 ships, with 127 passengers; West Indies, 4 ships, with 15 passengers; China, 3 ships, with 10 passengers; Cape of Good Hope, 1 ship with 5 passengers; and to West Coast Africa, 4 ships, with 49 passengers.

The total for last December is 1,206 in excess of December, 1880, but 6,803 less than November, 1881.

RELIGIOUS CENSUS OF GLASGOW.

Last Sunday a census was taken, at the suggestion of a few gentlemen interested in Christian work in Glasgow, with the object of ascertaining the actual attendance at the various Evangelical churches in the city and suburbs. As a general rule, the census was taken in the afternoon. There were in all 33 districts, and the number of Evangelical churches was 324, with an aggregate attendance of 115,292; there were besides 20 Roman Catholic churches, with an aggregate attendance of 15,871. The population of the city and suburbs included was at the last census 704,436.

The census-takers decline to give the denominational figures, as they might be used for political purposes.

A Bull-Fight at Lisbon.—A bull-fight on a scale of unusual splendour, in honour of the visit of the King and Queen of Spain, took place on Sunday afternoon in Lisbon, all the more distinguished Portuguese amateurs officiating. The Portuguese national sport is a prettier pageant and less cruel than that of Spain, the bull's horns being tipped with brass balls. The horses are not gored nor is the bull killed in the ring, as is done at Spanish fights. Hours before the arrival of the royal party every seat in the ring was filled. The performance passed off without accident, and the public were of opinion that the bulls and the caballeros equally distinguished themselves.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH IN 1881.

The Morning Post, in a leader, says:—

It seems pretty clear that 1881 will stand out as beyond comparison the most healthy year since the institution of civil registration nearly half a century ago. The statistics of mortality are not yet complete for the whole country, but it is almost impossible that those which have yet to be published will invalidate this very satisfactory conclusion. Nor is the amount of improvement by any means insignificant. For thirty years before 1870 the death-rate was maintained with tolerable uniformity at about twenty-two-and-a-half per thousand. In the next decade it fell to about twenty-one-and-a-half, a reduction equivalent to the gain of something like a quarter of a million lives. Only seven times since 1837 has the rate hitherto sunk as low as twenty-one, and it is noticeable that of those seven years of low mortality no less than four occurred from 1875 to 1880. The most healthy year of all was 1877, when the rate was just below twenty and a half. In 1880, however, it actually fell to between nineteen and nineteen and a half—a reduction equivalent to the addition of about five per cent. to the mean duration of human life. It is difficult to estimate the enormous reduction in human suffering which these figures represent. If people had died last year at the rate at which they died between 1840 and 1870 something like eighty thousand more deaths would have had to be registered; and if, adopting a calculation made in a striking passage of the last report of the Local Government Board, we assume that twelve cases of serious but not fatal illness may be reckoned for every death, it follows that little short of a million persons were saved from a sick-bed by some influences at work in the year 1881 which had not been at work previously.

What were those influences? The weather was not particularly favourable to longevity. In January and February it was exceptionally severe; and the continued hard frosts killed off an immense number of old people and largely increased the number of deaths from lung diseases. It resulted that in the first two months of the year the mortality was not exceptionally low. Then followed a succession of east winds that were unpleasant if not unhealthy, and lasted from March till May, with scarcely any rain. June was cold, but not wet, and it was not until after going through almost tropical heat that we were assailed with the rains that did so much damage to the harvest in August and September, but no doubt had much to do with making the Autumn quarter nearly the healthiest on record. Then came a few weeks of unusual cold in October, after which the year, having come in with a lion's ferocity, went out with a lamb-like mildness that even yet has not turned into ordinary winter weather. Three or four times the rains have been so heavy and so sudden as to cause extensive floods, and there is no doubt that such inundations, unpleasant and expensive as they are, perform a very useful office in washing and scouring away filth. But, reviewing the weather of the entire year, we can scarcely say that it was distinguishable from that of all previous years in its character, or that it was especially favourable to health. We believe that there is little reason to doubt that the main cause of the low mortality of 1881 is to be found in the fact that we are now reaping the fruits of modern progress, and are becoming more healthy because we pay more regard to sanitary conditions.

HAYMAKING IN THE COLONIES.

The beautiful climate enjoyed by our Southern grazing Colonies, where pasture is available, in the majority of cases, all the year round, relieves farmers from the necessity of "making hay while the sun shines," and of providing during their "glorious summer" for the wants of their flocks and herds during that "winter of their discontent" which farmers at home have to reckon with. But if the Australasian and South African Colonies are deprived of their pasture neither by the uncertain weather of an English climate nor by the prolonged snows of a Canadian winter, they have, says the Colonies and India, a corresponding evil to combat in the droughts with which they are visited at uncertain intervals. During these droughts, when the earth becomes so parched that all semblance of vegetation is destroyed, the cattle, deprived of both meat and drink, perish miserably. The construction of water reservoirs and the multiplication of wells have been strenuously urged as the only remedy for such an event, and in many parts of Australia and South Africa practical schemes for water conservation have been adopted with the best results. Irrigation is also practised in some cases, but it is impossible to irrigate the surface of a land as big as Europe, and the mere storing of water will not save the grass crops. Haymaking, as a part of the regular work of every farm, should supplement all such measures. Even if the runholder himself should fortunately not require to feed his own animals upon his store of hay, the commodity has a certain market value in towns, and as horse food is always in request. In Australia its price is about £4 per ton. In the case of runs situated beyond the reach of urban markets the condemnation of the older haystacks to the flames, as they become too parched to be of much value, would be of little moment compared with the possible condemnation of whole herds and flocks to starvation during the next drought. "A good store is no sore." The principal precaution to take would be to see that the grass did not become too dry and brittle before being stacked. It had better be stacked too green than over-parched. The method adopted in France and Italy of tying up the grass in bundles as soon as it is cut, and allowing it to dry thus, instead of entirely exposed to the hot sun, should be adopted in warm climates. Careful stacking, and the provision of ample ventilation by leaving an opening in the centre of the stack from top to bottom, would obviate the chances of overheating and its attendant risks.

THE ARMY RESERVE.

Some interesting statistics relative to the army reserve show that this year the services of 2,063 men of the 1st class will expire, 3,785 next year, 4,245 during 1884, 4,065 in 1885, and 4,082 in 1886.

In 1869 the reserve was represented by 17,948 men; in 1877 it had increased to 29,776, and gradual additions brought it up last year to the highest total which has been reached, 41,796, namely, 20,126 in the 1st class reserve of 1870, 535 in Class 2 of the reserve of 1867, 1,300 in the reserve of 1869, and 19,835 enrolled pensioners.

The last statistics of the ages of the men belonging to the 1st class show that 15,531 were under 30 years, 3,307 30 to 35 years, 780 35 to 40 years, and 508 over 40 years. In the 2nd class, which includes the enrolled pensioners, only 39 men are shown as being under 30, and 204 between 30 and 35, while 20,025 were over 40 years.

THE POPULATION OF HUNGARY.

The last census having proved that the population of Hungary only increased three hundred thousand within the last ten years' period, while that of Austria had increased nearly two millions, the contingent which Hungary has to supply to the Austro-Hungarian Army has been reduced from three hundred and thirty-two thousand nine hundred and eighty-eight to three hundred and thirty-one thousand four hundred and seventy-four men.

The number of recruits to be supplied by Hungary every year has also been reduced to thirty-nine thousand five hundred and fifty-two, while both the Austrian contingent to army and number of Austrian recruits will be increased.

RECORDING THE BLOWS OF A STEAM HAMMER.

Some years ago Mr. Coleman Sellers, a well-known mechanical engineer of Philadelphia, noted the difficulty of counting the blows of a quickly-striking steam hammer when the strokes were near 300 per minute, a very wide discrepancy always accruing between the figures of those who attempted to count them, the tendency being to over-count rather than under-count. He found that three careful observers, counting the blows at the same time, made a variation of from 275 to 235 in the same count. This wide discrepancy caused him to devise the following simple and ingenious method of making an accurate and automatic register of the strokes. He connected a recording telegraphic instrument to the machine, placing two keys in the circuit. One key was closed by each blow of the hammer, a wire from this being attached to a rock shift in the valve motions, the other key being closed by hand. When the hand key was closed, dots were recorded on the paper ribbon—one dot to each blow of the hammer; and by keeping the hand key closed for a definite time—say one or two minutes—a row of dots representing the number of blows made in that time were recorded, which dots could be counted afterwards at leisure. Many experiments says Iron, have been tried with this apparatus attached, and it has been found that very seldom the count of any observer tallies with the count of the instrument, the rule being, as above stated, that the observer almost invariably over-counts.

"Mrs. Ramsbotham is studying the history of Literature, and goes on with her teaching in the Sunday School. She gets a little mixed now and then. 'My dears,' she said, the other day, 'don't forget what I told you about Esau. You recollect he was a Dairyman who wrote fables, and sold the copyright for an MS. on potash.' The children couldn't follow her, and the Vicar put it all right."—Punch.

RELIGIOUS CENSUS OF LEITH.

The Edinburgh Daily Review has published the result of a census of the attendance at the churches in the Leith division. The result shows that out of a population of over 58,000 little more than one-third attended church. The three leading Presbyterian churches ran close in the number of worshippers. The Established, with eight churches, including one at Granton, had 5,855 worshippers; the Free, with seven churches, 5,095; and the United Presbyterian, with five churches, 5,008. The United Presbyterians had, therefore, the best average.

Another way of contrasting the statistics shows that while 5,585 people attended two services in eight Established churches, 10,108 attended twelve Free and United Presbyterian churches, and that while 5,585 worshipped in the Establishment, 14,151 were present at two services in other churches.

FATHER IGNATIUS ON THE SALVATION ARMY.

Father Ignatius held a service on Sunday at the concert hall in Coleshill-street, Birmingham, the Bishop of the diocese having refused to allow him to conduct a mission service in St. Peter's Church, Dale-end. In the course of his sermon Father Ignatius said: How is it that the Salvation Army has such power? It was because its members believed what they talked about, because they had taken Christ at His word; because they had a mighty love of souls, and would go through fire and water to win a soul. Therefore he said, "God speed the Salvation Army." Let them have such men as Wesley, General Booth, St. Francis Xavier, St. Francis of Assisi, and then the Gospel would be a different thing from the cut-and-dried, fashionable, worldly formality which it too often was in our midst.

ASSYRIAN DISCOVERIES NEAR BAGDAD.

In London on Monday evening, during a discussion which took place on a paper read at the Victoria Institute by the Rev. H. G. Tompkins, on Biblical proper names, Mr. Rassam, the well-known discoverer of Assyrian relics, who had been called upon to address the meeting, made the following statement in reference to his recent researches in the neighbourhood of Bagdad. He said:—

Mr. Tomkins has alluded to the discoveries I have been enabled to make among the ancient cities of the East. I am sorry I cannot at present say much about what I have recently been doing, or I should have given the account elsewhere. Indeed, with one exception, I have not very much to tell you since the lecture I delivered here two years ago. I will, however, offer you a brief statement of what I have lately discovered. In March last I went out again to the East as you know I am always doing, for the purpose of finding out the old cities which lie buried there. As I was journeying on one occasion in pursuit of this object, I met with an Arab who told me that he knew of an old ruined city, the remains of which were to be found within five hours of Bagdad—that is to say, taking the computation at three miles an hour, the place he knew of was fifteen miles from Bagdad. As I am one who never refuses to act on any information likely to lead to some practical result, I said I would go with him to the place indicated. I therefore accompanied him; and as we were travelling along the route pointed out by the Arab, we came at a distance of four hours' journeying upon an old ruin that I had never seen before—a ruin of great magnitude—so large, indeed, that it must be about three miles in circumference. I at first thought that this was the place of which my guide had spoken, and I said to him, "Oh! this is the place?" He replied, "No; that is not the place I told you of, it is further on." Then I said, "What is this place?" He answered, "I do not know." However, I made up my mind that I would certainly explore it when I came back. We consequently went onwards, and at last the Arab showed me a most wonderful ruin. I set to work and excavated there, but I found nothing of any antiquarian value. I afterwards went back to the place I had first seen, and commenced a thorough search there. The result was that after digging for four days we came upon the top of some walls. This induced us to persevere with increased ardour, and we soon found that we had come upon an enormous building, in which we began to find inscriptions. I may here say that I am not an Assyrian reader, I am only a discoverer of Assyrian relics, which I send to the British Museum, where those who have made Assyriology a study interpret the inscriptions I find. We first of all discovered four rooms, and then came upon a fifth. They were what I should call generally of the Assyrian or Babylonian order, and paved with bricks or stones; but the fifth room was paved with asphalte, the discovery of which brought to my mind Solomon's saying—"There is nothing new under the sun." Previous to this I had always thought that asphalte was a modern invention. Singular as this discovery was, we dug through the asphalte, and in a short time we were rewarded by coming upon a coffer on which we found inscriptions. From this coffer we took two cylinders. These were covered with inscriptions, which are supposed to be the most important records of the oldest city in the world, founded, as historians tell us, by Noah after the Deluge, and where, according to tradition, Noah buried the antidiluvian records. (Cheers.) Well, I had to come home; but I left some workmen continuing the operation at the spot, and I have ascertained that they have found, after a few days' more digging, that in one of the rooms there was a channel, and inside that channel there were records inscribed on nearly ten thousand tablets. (Cheers.) These tablets are all coming to England, but we cannot of course as yet say what they contain. They may contain something of even greater value than anything that has hitherto been discovered in the course of our Eastern researches. It may be, indeed, that we shall really find on them the antediluvian records of which I have spoken. After I have been out there again I shall be happy to give you further information as to this interesting discovery on my return. I hope to be going out in another month, and then I trust I shall be able to make still further advances on what we have already discovered. (Cheers.)

THE IRISH SUSPECTS.

The Times of Tuesday said:—"We understand that the case of the Irish suspects who are members of Parliament has been under the careful consideration of the Government, and that the decision arrived at is that the position of the leaders of the Land League does not call for exceptional treatment. It is said to be the intention of the followers of Mr. Parnell in the House of Commons to move separate motions relating to the suspects immediately Parliament reassembles. The first motion will be as follows:—'That this House disapproves the arrest and imprisonment of Charles S. Parnell, and censures the Government for the policy of the Irish Executive.' As there are between 400 and 500 suspects, the Irish members will, if they carry out their present intention, occupy a considerable portion of the time of the Session."

ANCIENT SCHEMES FOR CUTTING THE PANAMA ISTHMUS.

A number of interesting articles are being contributed to the boletin of the Geographical Society of Madrid, by Don Justo Zaragosa, on ancient canal schemes between the Atlantic and the Pacific in Central America. The Spaniards, as early as the sixteenth century, pitched upon three places for these schemes—the isthmus of Tehuantepec in New Spain, now Mexico; the river of San Juan, or the Lake of Nicaragua, in the republic of that name; the Chagres river, and other parts of the isthmus of Panama. The first-named scheme was abandoned, to be mooted again in the present century; those of Nicaragua were actively pursued in the seventeenth century, and were on the point of being executed in the eighteenth, under the reign of Charles III.; while the scheme of a canal through the isthmus of Panama, also abandoned, has been renewed by M. de Lesseps. In his last paper, Don Zaragosa furnishes some information on the little-known scheme of a canal vid the Lake of Nicaragua, which scheme appeared in the year 1548, with a map of the land prepared by Arias Gonzalo.

THE KIND OF WIVES MEN NEED.

It is not to sweep the house, and make the bed, and darn the socks, and cook the meals, chiefly that a man wants a wife (says an American paper). Of course these accomplishments are highly desirable and promotive of domestic comfort. If this is all, when a young man calls to see a lady, send him to the pantry to taste the bread and cakes she has made, send him to inspect the needle work and bed-making, or put the broom into her hands and send him to witness its use. Such things are important, and the wise young man will quietly look after them. But what the true man most wants of a wife is her companionship, sympathy and love. The way of life has many dreary places in it, and man needs a companion to go with him. A man is sometimes overtaken by misfortune, and meets with failure and defeat; trials and temptations beset him, and he needs one to stand by and sympathise. He has some stern battles to fight with poverty, with enemies and with sin, and he needs a woman that, while he puts his arm around her and feels that he has something to fight for, will help to fight: that will put her lips to his ear and whisper words of counsel, and her hand to his, heart and impart new inspiration. All through life—through storm and sunshine, conflict and victory, through adverse and favoring winds—man needs a woman's love. The heart yearns for it. A sister's or a mother's love will hardly supply the need. Yet many seek for nothing further than success in housework. Justly enough, half of these get nothing more. The other half, surprised beyond measure, have obtained more than they sought.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH TREATY OF COMMERCE.

Writing on Tuesday, the Paris Correspondent of The Times says:—

The Cabinet discussed to-day at great length the Anglo-French Treaty of Commerce. The negotiations, as is known, are being carried on just now at Paris alone between Lord Lyons, M. Gambetta, and the Minister of Commerce. It was thought the matter could thus be expedited by avoiding the delays necessarily resulting from carrying on the negotiations from a distance. Lord Lyons knows perfectly well what are the extreme concessions he can agree to, and on their side the members of the French Cabinet conducting the negotiations know that the British Ambassador, coupled with his desire to bring this important question to a satisfactory conclusion, possesses all the necessary elements for doing so, down to the signing of the Treaty. As to the latter point, I think it may now safely be said that a treaty will be signed. The ill-considered prophecies which, since the 1st inst., notwithstanding your repeated assertions, have represented the hopes of concluding a treaty as chimerical, fortunately thus fall to the ground. I say again, what you have said before—viz., that as soon as it appeared to the statesmen of the two countries that the signing of a treaty was for both nations a paramount political necessity, before which considerations of an inferior order ought on both sides to give way, the treaty could be regarded, difficulties of detail notwithstanding, as certain of being concluded after a more or less prolonged interval, but an interval which could not be prolonged for ever. This is not the place to discuss which country the conclusion of a treaty most benefits. What is certain is that, despite all pretences, the treaty is essential to both nations, because the two nations are essential to each other and because there is an enormous difference between the relations of two nations making an amicable exchange of their products and the relations of two nations combating each other on the field of industry by every means at their disposal and seeking rather to injure each other than to benefit themselves. Governments must place themselves above narrow passions when international relations are in question. It is, therefore, to be supposed that the members of the two Governments have obeyed this duty; that they have put aside the selfish considerations of those who think only of their personal advantage, and that in the diplomatic negotiations relative to the treaty, they are looking only to the absolute necessity of the good and cordial relations which may be established between the two nations, economic conflicts being avoided.

Both sides seem just now disposed to make concessions. The difficulties of detail still existing in the question of cottons, woollens, and leather are every day diminishing through compromises and the adoption of new categories; and it is hoped, as I said on Saturday, that it will not be necessary to have recourse to a fresh prolongation, however short, of the present treaty. All that is possible will certainly be done to avoid it, for in the advanced state of the negotiations the demand for a fresh prolongation would necessitate either delicate explanations or uneasiness as to the final result from a refusal of explanations. As, however, there is a desire to arrive at a settlement, but as, despite the utmost goodwill on both sides, all the details might not be adjusted, an application for a prolongation not going beyond the 15th of March at farthest would in that case be submitted as urgent without giving detailed explanations, but foreshadowing almost a certainty of agreement.

THE OLD SERGEANT.

He had been lying very still for the past hour, and the weary nurse dozed and nodded—struggled to keep awake—nodded again—and finally slept in her chair.

Then the old clock began calling: "Tick! tack! tick! tack!"

The sleeping man moved uneasily, and the thin, bony hand on the coverlit was lifted as if in protest.

"Tick, tack! tick, tack!" called the clock in louder tones.

The sick man opened his eyes and stared about him in surprise. His hair was thin and gray, his face wasted and pale, and death had stolen silently in as he slept and placed its seal on his brow.

"You were a soldier?" said the clock.

"Aye! that I was!" responded the man as he gathered sudden strength and half rose up. "Company G. fall in! Right dress! Front! Attention to roll-call! Adams, Ansil, Artman, Averill, Allport, Amsden——"

"They do not answer," said the clock as the sergeant paused.

"No; they lie buried in the trenches at Manassas!" solemnly answered the old man. "Barnard, Baxter, Buchanan, Burton, Bloom——"

"I do not hear their voices," said the clock.

"I had forgotten—they died at Fair Oaks!" whispered the sergeant. "Carter, Claxton, Coleman, Curtiss——"

"And what of them?"

"We laid them side by side in the same grave at Malvern Hill. Davis, Denton, Dougherty, Danforth——"

"Absent without leave," said the clock.

"Absent for ever!" answered the sergeant. "The green fields at Sharpsburg drank their life blood. Enright, Eberman, Eckliff——"

"On guard," said the clock.

"Then the dead guard the dead!" whispered the soldier. I saw them lying stark and stiff on the field of Spottsylvania. Fenton, Fairfax, Forbes, Foster——"

"Dead!" said the clock.

"Dead!" answered the sergeant. Graham, Gorman, Gosport——"

"Where?" queried the clock.

"In the thickets of the sombre Wilderness! Hurlburt, Hill, Hanford, Hanover, Halman, Harker, Hooper, Henderson——"

"And those, too?"

"Aye! They answered no more to roll-call after Gettysburg!"

"Your lines are but the shadows of the dead!" said the clock. "The dead and buried can make no answer. Under the trees at Chancellorsville—under the sod at Fredericksburg—in the meadows around Winchester—no roll-call can awaken them!"

"Ingalls, Irving, Isham," called the sergeant.

"Dead at Kernstown!" answered the clock.

"James, Justin, Jordan."

"They sleep at Petersburg!"

"Lampton, Ladue, Larkin, Lavering, Lumly——."

"Call no more! Only when the angel calls the roll of the unnumbered dead at the last great day will the dust answer! You alone are left!"

The sergeant fell back on his pillow and the shadows marched by the right flank into the darkness of midnight. The nurse started up with a shiver, looked at the clock, and then walked softly to the bedside and whispered:

"Sergt. Grim, it is time!"

"It is past time!" whispered the clock.

"Sergt. Grim, awake!"

"It was the last roll-call," said the clock, "and he has answered to his name at the gates of eternity."

THE PROPOSED SUBMARINE TUNNEL BETWEEN ITALY AND SICILY.

From the project presented to the Italian Ministry and proposed to the Venetian Society of Construction by Signor Gabelli, the following particulars are taken:—

The length of the submarine tunnel between Italy and Sicily will be 13,200 metres. The maximum depth of the sea above the line of tunnel is 110 metres. The thickness of rock between the roof of the tunnel and the bottom of the sea 35 metres. The direction of the tunnel from St. Agata to Punta del Pizzo is almost due north-west to south-west. The two inclines descending to the tunnel will first run parallel with the shore and then descend to the lowest level by spiral tunnels. The length of these inclines is each 4,500 metres, and the area occupied by each spiral tunnel 350 metres. The degree of inclination will be 35 per 1,000, about that of the tunnel between Busalla and Pontedecimo, which has been found by experience to be perfectly practical.

The centre of the submarine tunnel will be on a higher level than the two ends. Wells and subsidiary tunnels will be constructed to drain off the percolating water, and the most difficult part of the line will be first commenced, which will at once show the geological construction of the ground, and the difficulties to be overcome.

According to the opinion of all geologists, the bottom of the Straits of Messina consists of crystalline rock (granite gneiss and mico schists). Neither in Calabria nor in Sicily can the upper strata that cover this crystalline rock be so thick as to reach the level of the bottom of the descending inclines. Geological and hydraulic considerations agree in the conclusion that the submarine isthmus between Punta del Pizzo and St. Agata cannot consist of material that is compact or easily corroded.

THE FATAL ACCIDENT AT A MUSIC-HALL AT BRIGHTON.

At the Lewes assizes, Ali Ling Look, a Chinaman, described as an acrobat, aged 43, and Caroline, his wife, were placed on their trial, the indictment charging them with feloniously killing one George Smythe, at Brighton, on the 27th of December last.

Mr. Gates, Q.C., and Mr. Merrifield conducted the case for the prosecution; Mr. Douglas Kingsford and Mr. Gill were counsel for the prisoners; Mr. E. Clarke, Q.C., and Mr. Willoughby were for Mrs. Botham, against whom the Grand Jury had thrown out the bill.

The prisoners, who were out on bail, being called upon to appear and take their trial, both appeared and were placed in the dock. The male prisoner, a powerful, athletic man, had his head shaved, but his physiognomy was not at all Chinese. When called upon to plead, he said nothing, on which his wife, a little woman, said he did not hear, and she made motions with her finger as though writing something on which he said, in a loud voice, "Not Guilty." His wife also, in a very distinct tone of voice, said "Not Guilty."

Mr. Gates, in opening the case to the jury, said the circumstances had been so recent and notorious that it was hardly necessary to enter into them at length. The prisoners had been engaged by Mrs. Botham to perform for twelve nights at her place of entertainment, beginning with Boxing-night. The death of the boy occurred on the next night, the 27th. The charge against the prisoners was, in substance, this—that they took part in a performance dangerous to human life, without taking due and proper care. The performance consisted in the man's balancing the cannon on a sword in his mouth and the woman then firing it off. The concussion caused by the explosion on the first night was such as to put out several of the lights, and the man was spoken to about it. On the first night the powder was put, as was proper, into tissue paper, which would fall to pieces on the firing of the charge; but on the second night the man put it into a piece of newspaper and made it up into a pellet or ball, and thus the cannon was loaded. The man, before the cannon was fired, waved his hand to the audience as though to warn them to bow their heads (which would indicate, on his part, a consciousness of danger), but it did not appear that he waited to see that they had done so before the cannon was fired. However that was, the woman having fired the cannon, a boy in the gallery was hit with the strong paper "wad" or pellet, and the top of his head was blown off and he was killed on the spot. The facts were not in dispute, and the question would be whether the firing off the gun in that way, without due and proper precautions for the safety of the audience, was such culpable negligence.

Lord Justice Cotton here interposed to say that it must be more than culpable carelessness—it must appear to have been reckless.

Mr. Gates quite assented in this, and quoted a sentence from a recent judgment of Lord Coleridge:—

"If a person, without taking proper precautions, does an act in itself dangerous (though not in itself unlawful), and if in the course of it he kills another person, he does a criminal act, which in law constitutes the crime of manslaughter."

Lord Justice Cotton observed that this was so if the party knew or must be taken to have known that it was dangerous.

Mr. Gates acquiesced in that, and said he thought the circumstances of the case in the present instance brought it within that rule or definition. Evidence was then given of the facts thus stated.

A witness proved that the male prisoner, before the cannon was fired, came forward and waved his hands, as though to make the people go back, and there was a cry of "heads down," and most persons put their heads down, but the boy killed did not, and when the gun was fired the top of his head was blown off.

It appeared in cross-examination that there were bills of the entertainment circulated, containing a representation of the particular performance of the cannon. The surgeon who was sent for stated that he found close to the boy's body a hard pellet, a wad which had the hardness almost of wood. It weighed almost five drachms, and was so solid and hard that it seemed as though there was something in it, but on cutting it through he found it was only paper rolled up. It was covered with blood, and would have caused such a wound as the boy sustained, blowing off the top part of his skull.

Another witness proved that the male prisoner put the powder in with a spoon and rolled up some paper in his hand to make up a pellet, which he rammed down into the cannon.

Another witness said the cannon was pointed in the direction in which the man had waved his hand.

The cannon being produced, appeared to be about 3½ft. long and 2½in. in the bore. It was apparently of wood, encased in tin. The wad was also produced, or what remained of it, and appeared to have been about 2in. in diameter.

The son of the proprietress stated that he was present when the gun was first fired, and observed pieces of paper floating about afterwards, and, in consequence of what then occurred, he gave the prisoner instructions, through his wife, to point the cannon in a certain direction. This referred, it was explained, to the blowing out of the lights—from the fear, the witness said, of a panic; but the witness stated that he had no apprehension of danger from the performance. The boy, it was stated, was about 21 feet from the cannon. The performance had taken place before on other occasions and in other places.

No witnesses were called for the defence, and in effect the facts were not in dispute. The Lord Justice observed that there was no express evidence as to how the cannon had been loaded on the first night, and for aught that appeared, it had been loaded as on the second night; to which counsel assented.

The counsel for the prisoners having addressed the jury on their behalf,

The Lord Justice summed up the case to the jury, and in doing so said they had to decide whether the prisoners or either of them (and their cases, he thought, differed) had been guilty of criminal and reckless negligence. They must consider the nature of the instrument which was not like a rifle, in itself a deadly weapon, but something only intended for the purposes of public entertainment, and it could hardly be said that the mere use of it was criminal negligence, as it had been used before without injury, and what the jury had to consider was the way in which it was used on this occasion, that it was loaded with a hard wad or pellet, as to which, however, he must observe that it had not been proved (though it had been stated) that there was any difference in the way in which the gun was loaded on the first and second night. Was there, then, criminal negligence in the loading on the night in question? It had been urged that the male prisoner waved the people away, and that this showed a sense of danger; but perhaps that was a strained inference, and, even if it were so, he might have supposed that his warnings had been attended to. Certainly if he knew there was danger and waved his hands for that reason, and did not wait to see that his warning was attended to, there was evidence of criminal negligence. But were the jury satisfied of that? And, even if so, and assuming that there was such negligence on the part of the man, was there such negligence on the part of the woman? It did not appear that she was a party to the loading, even supposing it was criminally negligent, and she might naturally suppose that what had been done the night before without injury to any one might be done again. On the whole case it was for the jury to say whether the prisoners or either of them had been guilty of criminal negligence.

The jury, after a short consideration, found both prisoners Not Guilty. When the result was explained by the female prisoner to her husband he seized his hat and held it up, and exclaimed in a loud voice, "I thank my Lord." He then gave his hand to his wife and led her out amid some applause, which, however, was checked by the Lord Justice.

It was stated by the prisoners' counsel that there had been some sympathy shown on their behalf at Brighton and that assistance had been given to them in their defence.

ARMY STATISTICS.

The annual return of the army, just issued from the War-office, by direction of his Royal Highness Commander-in-Chief, contains some interesting statistics. It shows that in 1881 the proportion per 1,000 non-commissioned officers and men serving under 20 years of age was 104, between the ages of 20 and 30 it was 667, whilst above the age of 30 the proportion was 229.

The return shows that there are more soldiers in the British army between 20 and 23 years of age than of any other age. Out of 1,205 of the household cavalry, half that number are 6ft. and upwards in height, the larger number of the remainder very nearly approaching that stature.

In the infantry of the line, out of 114,861 there are only 1,105 men who have attained the height of 6ft. The chest measurements are also given, showing that there are in the army 11,882 men measuring from 39 inches to 40 inches round, and 7,373 who measure 40 inches and over.

Getting Rid of the Cause.—Dr. Mead, calling one day on a gentleman who had been severely afflicted with the gout, found, to his surprise, the disease gone, and the patient rejoicing on his recovery over a bottle of wine. "Ah!" said the doctor, shaking his head, "this Madeira will never do; it is the cause of all your suffering." "Well, then," rejoined the gay incurable, "fill your glass, for now we have found out the cause, the sooner we get rid of it the better."

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

On Monday evening, the above Board held the usual fortnightly meeting; present, Messrs. W. Hargreaves, J. Hargreaves, Holmes, Sanderson, Batty, Newsome, Oliver, Bramley, and the clerk and treasurer.

The minutes having been read, were confirmed, on the motion of Mr. Bramley and Mr. Newsome.

VALUATION.—Mr. Brown, of Spring Head, having desired an interview with the Board, wished to know what had been done in the matter of valuation for damage caused by the sewagepipes passing through his field, &c. He was the more anxious to have the question settled, as he understood from a Leeds case, that if the account was not settled during the term of the Board incurring the expense, the following Board might decline to pay it.

The chairman informed Mr. Brown that Mr. Haley had not stated to the Board what was his estimate of damage done in Mr. Brown's land, and the Board was therefore unable to reply. All the claims had been settled at a meeting held some weeks ago, except Mr. Brown's and Mr. Bramley's, who did not attend.

Mr. Brown intimated that his principal purpose was to ascertain whether all his rights had been considered by the valuer, not only the damage done to the crops, but also the breaking up of the coach road, the carting across his field, etc.

The chairman expressed his complete satisfaction with the impartial manner in which Mr. Haley had done his work hitherto, and although he was quite unknown to him previously, he thought he was the best man he knew for such matters.

Mr. Brown, having been assured that an early opportunity should be taken for going into this matter, then retired.

There was a short passage of arms between Mr. Bramley and other members on the matter of his valuation, Mr. Sanderson expressing his opinion that the valuations ought to be got done with. The matter then dropped.

HIGHWAYS.—Mr. Farrer, in reply to the clerk's application, intimated his willingness to send copies of the separate valuations of the different roads belonging to the Board, if the several contracts were specified.

It was then proposed by the chairman—That the clerk furnish Mr. Farrer with lists of the several roads, streets, etc., included in each contract, so that he can supply to the Board a statement of the value of material on the sides of the road, and the depth of the metal on the road; in order to apportion the valuations to each contractor; also asking for a copy of the award. Seconded by Mr. Batty, and carried.

AGREEMENTS.—The clerk then proceeded to read a lengthy agreement, as regards no. 1 contract, let to Mr. Jowitt, which, after a few alterations, was approved, on the motion of Mr. Holmes, seconded by Mr. Newsome; Mr. Jas. Hargreaves and Mr. Bramley neutral.

The clerk also read a similar agreement with Mr. Bulmer, which was approved, on the motion of Mr. J. Hargreaves, and Mr. Holmes; Mr. Bramley neutral.

The clerk was instructed to draw up an agreement for No. 3 contract.

STREET LAMPS.—Mr. Newsome reported that a person had complained to him that a certain lamp was put out at 10.35 p.m. and another lamp was extinguished on Saturday at 11.30. Mr. J. Hargreaves had also to report that several of the lamps in Wood Lane were oftener out than in.

Mr. Holmes understood the arrangement was to commence extinguishing at 11 o'clock, and at 12 o'clock on Saturdays.

Mr. Batty stated that he himself observed that the lamp at the top of Butcher Lane was out early on Sunday evening.

Mr. Bramley added other evidence to the same effect as regards the lamps. The lamp in Sandy Lane, he thought would not burn more than a pennyworth of gas in a fortnight.

Mr. Newsome insinuated that that would be for the special benefit of "courters."

The Chairman believed the Company were quite ignorant of these faults, and suggested a letter specifying the different complaints.

It was moved by Mr. Holmes, seconded by Mr. Batty, and carried:—"That the clerk draw the attention of the Gas Light Company to the time at which the lamps are extinguished.

LEADING.—The tenders for leading having been opened, it was proposed by the chairman, seconded by Mr. Newsome, "That Thomas Marshall's tender be accepted for leading 200 tons of dross from York Road Iron Works to any part of Leeds and Wakefield Road at 2s per ton." Carried.

HIGHWAY FOREMAN.—The Highway Committee reported that they had appointed John Wilson as foreman on the Wakefield Road.

Mr. Newsome asked if the roads were any better.

Mr. Batty and Mr. Holmes said there had been very great improvement during the fortnight.

FINANCE.—On the motion of Mr. Bramley seconded by Mr. James Hargreaves, the accounts and salaries were passed.

ROTHWELL SEWAGE.—Mr. Parkinson asked instructions what he should do in regard to the progress of the work, only two or three men being engaged sometimes. He also had to complain that only two out of the 13 or 14 air shafts at Stourton, are open for ventilation.

Messrs. Thompson and Stead having signed themselves out of the contract, Mr. M. Brayshaw stated he was now prepared to complete the contract himself, having made arrangements with a friend, on receiving the necessary documents securing the Board; the Board intimating a willingness to allow Mr. Brayshaw to carry on the work himself.

HEALTH.—Mr. Worth, the inspector, being ill, and unable to attend to his duties, Mr. Jowitt agreed to undertake his work as far as possible. In reply to the chairman, as to the scarlet fever, of which their has been one fatal case, Mr. J. Hargreaves and Mr. Batty stated that they believed every precaution had been taken for preventing its spread. Mr. Jowitt promised to see the medical officer and assist him in guarding against any further extension of the epidemic.

RATES RECEIVED AND PAID.—The collector has received and paid to the treasurer during the fortnight—

Water Rents...............	10	0	8
Total	£291	13	8

ROTHWELL GAS LIGHT CO.'S BILL.—A letter was read from the secretary to the Company, stating that they cannot comply with the Board's request, to withdraw the Bill, now being promoted in Parliament.

The clerk having been asked to read the replies to the several questions ordered to be put to Mr. Warren, last meeting, respecting the voting power of the Board, on the Gas Company's Bill, he gave the following answers in the order in which they were put.—

1.—An absolute majority of the governing body under the Borough Funds Act is an absolute majority of the whole members of the Board, not merely of the members present at the meeting.

2.—Whether the members of the Board who are shareholders in the Gas Company are allowed to vote on the question of whether the Bill should be opposed or not is somewhat difficult to decide; the question is governed by the 64th rule of the second schedule to the Public Health Act, 1875, and thus if the Resolution to be brought before the Board is one in which the Gas Company as a Joint Stock Company is interested, the three members of the Board who are shareholders are not allowed to vote upon the resolution without the prohibition be dispensed with by the Local Government Board, which that Board has power to do. We should advise that the circumstances be immediately explained to the Local Government Board, and if that Board think it necessary to give consent for the three to vote, that it should be asked to do so, if such members wish to vote.

3.—In our opinion, the majority of the governing body is five or more, if the whole Board is nine only, and no less, whether the three shareholders are precluded from voting or not.

4.—The Board is in order, in proceeding under the Borough Funds Act 1872, to ascertain whether the Bill shall be opposed or not.

The meeting shortly after concluded.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps, has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. MR. KIRKBY'S BENEFIT CONCERT

By the kind exertions of the Rothwell Model Brass Band and the Harmonic Union with other friends, a very presentable programme was got up in a remarkably short time, for the concert given in the Mechanics' Hall last Monday evening, on behalf of Mr. Henry Kirkby, for many years choir-master in Rothwell Church, and also connected with other musical associations and choirs.

There was a large attendance, and while the programme was good we believe we rightly interpret the general feeling when we say, the object of the concert was the principal attraction, for the benefit of "the old man musical."

The Band was considerably augmented by friends from the neighbourhood, and opened the concert by playing Hemmerle's overture "Confidence" in a very pleasing and careful manner.

Mr. Brown followed with Braham's well-known song, "The Death of Nelson." The singer was in good voice, and fully earned the applause which followed his song.

The piano accompaniment of the interludes was greatly heightened in effect by the cornet and the drum.

The Harmonic Union next gave the beautiful part song, "Softly fall the shades of evening," and sustained their reputation by the careful manner in which they rendered it, the light and shade being very artistically marked.

A warm reception was accorded to Miss Jennie Winkworth, her professional reputation having raised the expectations of the audience to a somewhat high pitch. For some reason the young lady changed her programme song "My dearest Heart," and gave instead, "Won by a Rose." Miss Winkworth has a voice of rare brilliancy, and rendered the song with a piquancy which delighted the audience, and secured loud and continued applause to the artiste at its close.

Mr. G. F. Birkenshaw, the celebrated cornet of "Meltham Mills Band," was down for the next number on the programme, and he secured the warmest approbation of all classes of the audience by his clever rendering of the variations on "Weber's Last Valse." In response to an enthusiastic re-demand, he repeated the variations in the last movement.

Mr. T. Walker next gave "Why chime the Bells," in a correct but rather quiet manner.

A serious hitch in the programme arrangements now occurred. Mr. Charles Ward appeared on the platform, and announced that Mr. Slater, the piano soloist, had not turned up, and that Mr. James Dobson was suffering from a very severe cold, so that he could not appear. On behalf of the Management Committee, Mr. Ward expressed his regret, but was glad to say Mr. Brown had consented to sing instead of Mr. Dobson. To the great surprise of many of the audience, Mr. Brown sang, "Tell me, Mary, how to woo thee," the song he was down for in the second part of the programme. It was very fairly rendered, but owing to the unfortunate combination of circumstances above mentioned fell very flat, and brought the first part of the programme to a somewhat unsatisfactory and abrupt termination

Mr. John Batty, F.R.H.S., took the opportunity during the interval, to give a sketch of the useful life and career of the old gentleman whom the audience in such good numbers had assembled to honour. The speaker stated that, though not a native of Rothwell, Mr. Kirkby had resided and been connected with Rothwell for about fifty years, which justly entitled him to be considered as a citizen—so to use the phrase.

He was born at Heodn, near Hull, in Holderness, (a very ancient municipal town, and formerly a Parliamentary Borough) on the 25th July, 1808, and consequently is in his 74th year.

He sprang from a highly respectable and well-to-do family, one member at least of which has been an alderman, and Mayor of the place.

His first visit to Rothwell was on the 14th March, 1832; being a good hand at his business as a tailor, he was invited over to assist a master tailor, Mr. Milestone.

On August 19th, 1834, he married Amelia Gibson, daughter of John Gibson, the well-known Parish Clerk of Rothwell.

He accordingly settled down here, and commenced business on his own account, and from that time up to a few months ago, he continued to ply the needle, but dim sight and increasing infirmities obliged him to give up for a time, if not altogether.

At Rothwell, he found scope for his musical talents. For upwards of twenty years he sang in the church choir, including 9 years during which he efficiently conducted it as choir master. When in his prime, he possessed a remarkably good bass voice, which must have sounded to great advantage in the grand old church.

Afterwards he was choir master at the Wesleyan Chapel, and through his instructions a more scientific mode of singing was adopted, and the choir wonderfully improved. His excellent services were acknowledged by the presentation to him on August 31st, 1870, of a well bound copy of Wesley's Hymns. Other neighbouring choirs have received valuable aid and suggestions from him. In short, many musical amateurs have had reasons to be grateful to him for advice readily and freely given.

He did not however, exclusively devote himself to the art of music. Having a retentive memory, and a well-stored mind, and possessing withal a good grasp of his subject, he was able to discourse on almost anything to advantage.

It was delighted in his homely and humble way to encourage every effort for the furtherance of education amongst young men. In 1846 he was chosen as the first president of a mutual improvement society, which consisted of a number of respectable tradesmen and artizans, to whom he gave useful and instructive lectures. This society was broken up, but probably it is not too much to say that from its ashes, Phœnix-like, sprang the present Mechanics' Institute.

In 1873 he was solicited by a few young men to become the chairman on the formation of a debating society; he was here in his right place, and for several sessions ably occupied this honourable position. The instruction he so pleasantly imparted bore fruit. The class was for a time in abeyance, mainly on account of the inability of Mr. Kirkby to continue to act as its presiding genius, on account of old age, etc., to the regret of all. The lively recollection of benefits received, induced a few of the original members to try to revive it once more. In this they suceeded, and, under the excellent chairmanship of Mr. Kirkby's successor—Mr. Harms—the class has greatly increased in numbers, and proves one of the best means of intellectual enjoyment in Rothwell. A short while ago the members of the class gave Mr Kirkby, their old president, a small present of money, as a token of esteem and proof of sympathy with him in his straitened circumstances.

The second part of the concert was introduced by Mr. Birkenshaw, who performed Hartman's "Tehnsucht" in his own wonderful manner; in response to an encore, he even surpassed himself in the way he played an old well-known air with variations, the effect being as though another cornet were accompanying him, so dexterous was his manipulation of the keys.

Little Miss Brown did veay nicely in the pretty song, "Let the Angels in," and promises well for the future.

The Harmonic Union managed the part song, "Soldier's Love," capitally, the "di-di-di-di-dum" accompaniment of the bass singers provoking considerable amusement among the juniors. In response to a well-earned encore, they gave "

The reception given to Miss Winkworth was again most hearty, and her crisp brilliant voice was exactly suited to "Thady O'Flinn," which she sang with the "rale" Irish brogue. Her re-appearance would not be denied, and she gave "A Summer Shower," to the evident delight of all present.

The position of Messrs. Blackburn and Harrison in "Love and War," was rather against their success, following Miss Winkworth, and adopting a duett which had been so well given a few weeks ago; they, however, succeeded pretty well, especially in the latter part of the duett.

The audience were well pleased to see Mr. Slater come on to the boards, and the way he made music out of that piano was something astonishing. The lightning-like digitation reminded one of the story told by an American of the effect produced by Rubenstein's playing, and everyone sat intent till the last note had died away. No wonder he was vociferously recalled, when he gave "God bless the Prince of Wales," with variations.

The rendering of "Little Billee" by Mr. A. Batty was excellent, his care in enunciating the words being the special feature in him, as it should be in all comic or sentimental songs. Being warmly applauded, he reproduced the song "Chillingawollabadorie" as an encore.

The concluding number was from the "Pirates of Penzance," by the band, the variations of time and key, of light and shade, being carefully marked; some of the solo parts were also worthy of special note.

The concert closed with the National Anthem.

The nett result amounts to £6 6s., which has been handed over to Mr. Kirkby, with the best wishes of his many friends.

Mechanics' Institute.—We are pleased to observe that the enlargement of the platform is already in progress, so that advantage may be taken of the improvement during the present session.

Rothwell Band.—During the last week the boxes which have been in public-houses of Rothwell, for the purpose of obtaining funds towards a new uniform were opened, and the sum of five guineas were found to have been contributed. Several handsome donations also have been received, and seeing the uniform is needed and the Band always willing to help forward any good cause, we feil sure their want only needs to be known and the necessary funds would be at once forthcoming.

Wedding Rejoicing at Stourton.—Last Saturday night twenty-six top men employed at Beeston Pit, sat down to supper at the Queen Hotel, Stourton, to do honour to the marriages of George Field and Henry Westmoreland. After full justice had been done to the things set before them they retired into another large room and when all were seated, a vote of thanks was passed to the landlord and landlady, Mr, and Mr. Sharp, for the manner in which they had provided the supper. The health of the brides and bridegrooms was then drunk with demonstrations of pleasure. A vote of thanks was also passed to all those who had kindly subscribed towards the event. The rest of the evening was spent in singing and playing, and several recitations were given. The enjoyments were brought to a close by singing the National Anthem, all returning home highly satisfied with the evening's pleasure

CARLTON.

Almanack Show.—On Saturday and Monday evenings, a Show of Almanacks was held at the Lord Nelson Inn, Carlton. Upwards of 100 specimens were exhibited. The 1st prize, a copper kettle, was awarded to Mr. Barrass, Rothwell, for "The Primrose Gatherer;" the 2nd prize of 4s. in money, to Mr. Jackson, Stourton, for "Tired after a day's sport;" and the 3rd prize, 2s. 6d., to Mr. Clayton, Rothwell, for "Tender Memories." (Mr. Beattie, Artist, of Rothwell, acted as the judge.

Having made arrangements with Mr. Nicholson, opposite the Reading Room, for the sale of papers in Carlton, we shall be pleased to publish any events of interest or correspondence on current subjects in the village and neighbourhood. Mr. Nicholson will forward any communications to this office, if sent by Wednesday.

The Land League.—We are informed that "The History of the Irish Land League, impartially reviewed," by F. M. Holmes, will be published (price 1s.) in a few days, by F E Longley, 39, Warwick Lane London, E.C.

NOTICE.—Next week we purpose publishing an interesting account of 'how several Leeds men spent Christmas Day in India;' Mr. Kirby, of Stourton, being one of them and taking an active part in the day's adventures.

Holloway's Pills.—Teachings of Experience.—The united testimony of thousands, extending over more than forty years, most strongly recommends these Pills as the best purifiers, the mildest aperients, and the surest restoratives. They never prove delusive, or give merely temporary relief, but attack all ailments of the stomach, lungs, heart, head, and bowels in the only safe and legitimate way, by depurating the blood. and so eradicating those impurities which are the source and constituent of almost every disease. Their medicinal efficacy is wonderful in renovating enfeebled constitutions. Their action embraces all that is desirable in a household medicine. They expel every noxious and effete matter; and thus the strength nurtured and the energies stimulated.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

I wondered how it was that there was no report of a School Board meeting in this journal a fortnight since, but I now begin to see the reason—Christmas time—the 2nd of January was too near the festive season for our gay and frolicsome School Board to settle down to the grave duties of educational legislation, so they put off "the evil" day for a week.

There seems to be very little to excite public interest in the report of the meeting beyond the fact that the Wakefield County Court is in danger of being again invaded by my friend Mr. Smith and his trio of backers.

Well done Miss Abbey, I like that idea of a sewing class for the benefit of the Leeds Infirmary, and hope it may meet with the success which it deserves; there is far too little assistance given by the people of Oulton and Woodlesford to the funds of that institution, and anything tending towards a better state of things, ought to be warmly welcomed and actively supported.

I notice that there has been an improvement in the results of the annual government inspection of the Board School, but beyond stating that it is satisfactory the report leaves us in ignorance; however we are promised a further supply of information at a future date, so I shall bottle up my curiosity for awhile, but I must confess that I have a particular desire to be possessed of the information promised.

I am glad to see that the School Board intend to continue the practice of giving prizes to successful scholars, I dont suppose that the cost of such rewards will be very great, and I know that the youngsters think a good deal about them and are induced to work harder when there is hope of some tangible proof of success, than they might otherwise be disposed to do.

Some thoughtful friend has sent me a copy of the annual statement of accounts published by our churchwardens, but I received it unfortunately too late to give more than a passing notice of it at present; next week I intend to submit the document to a critical supervision, as I see there are a few points upon which I think most people will agree with me that the expenditure is rather of an extravagant nature, but of this more anon. I am heartily pleased to see that there is this time a balance in hand, although it is but small, still it is a surplus, and it is well known that such a thing as a surplus is as great a curiosity at Woodlesford Church, as it is in the budget of a Conservative Chancellor of the exchequer. Do I hear a jocular individual remark that surplices are rather plentiful at Woodlesford Church? Very good, my friend; but dont come within reach of my horsewhip, after such an atrocity as that.

There are several rumours afloat in Oulton and Woodlesford which if not contradicted might possibly give rise to misunderstanding on the part of the general public. I therefore take the liberty of giving the following official denial on behalf of those concerned.

It is not correct that at the recent Oulton choir supper the health of a former choir master was proposed in eulogistic terms, and it is not a fact that the gentleman was present on that occasion.

It is not a fact, that the boarding round the houses in Heap lane is shortly to be removed.

It is not correct, that the tallest individual in Woodlesford, has not been known to ask anybody a question during the last fortnight, or to stare anybody else out of countenance.

It is not a fact, that the Oulton goal-keeper in the late match with the Harmonic, considers himself responsible for the defeat of his team.

It is not a fact, that it took Mr. J. Turner jun., four days (including a Sunday), eight hours, thirty seven minutes and a quarter, to write that letter about the Gas Bill.

It is not a fact, that Mr. R. J. Smith has written another "poem."

It is not a fact, that Mr. Longbottom will occupy the position of interlocutor or "boss" at the coming nigger concert, neither is it correct that this gentleman has in the press an essay on the peculiarities of the feline species.

"Where was Moses when the light went out?" was the universal question in this locality about ten o'clock on the evening of Tuesday the 10th instant.

I was much pleased to see such a numerous audience at the "Kirkby," concert last Monday evening. It must be very gratifying to the feelings of the beneficiaire to find that so many friends responded to the summons to do honor to the name of the "father" of Rothwell music, and this recollection will doubtless often prove a source of pleasure to the old man during his declining years

As a detailed report of the concert will no doubt appear, it is unnecessary for me to give more than a brief notice of the performance.

Although the Harmonic Union does not now appear very frequently in public, the vocal organs of its members do not seem to have become at all rusty in consequence; the two part songs given quite sustaining its reputation, an encore being demanded in the case of the second one. Miss Jennie Winkworth, as might be expected proved a decided acquisition and scored a distinct success, as was also the case with Messrs. Birkenshaw and Slater, the latter gentleman being unfortunately absent during the first part. Little Miss Alice Brown sang her song very nicely indeed, and no doubt with careful training will develop into a good vocalist; and Mr. J. Brown gave the time-honored, but withal somewhat hackneyed "Death of Nelson" with effect, being evidently in good form. Messrs. Harrison and Blackburn's "Love and War" duett was very decently done but having so recently heard it given by Messrs. Harms and Longbottom, one is naturally inclined to draw comparisons, whereby the latest exponents of the piece are not gainers. The band gave the selection from "The Pirates" at the close of the second part, and a fitting finale it proved to be, to a generally excellent entertainment.

As is usually the case with church enterprises at Woodlesford, there were only a few people present at the distribution of Sunday School prizes, the proceedings throughout being of an exceedingly mild description; I am sorry that so little interest should be taken in the Sunday school at Woodlesford by church people, as unless they wish their children to grow up little better than heathens, they ought to encourage the school more than they do at present, as it is the only opportunity the little ones have of gaining proper religious knowledge, the so-called religious instruction given in Board schools being a mere sham and an imposition and utterly unworthy of the name of religion; this being the case it is the duty of the people to encourage that which is genuine, otherwise the morals of the rising generation are not likely to become of a remarkably high character.

I thank the "Brethren of the Guild of the Calcined Cork" most heartily for so promptly responding to my hint about a free concert, and I trust that their goodwill to the poorer section of the population will not go unrewarded. There are people in Woodlesford who would have deprived the people of the proposed treat simply because it was first proposed by Ajax, but fortunately there are not many of these narrow-minded, mean-spirited humbugs.

Who says that the Rothwell Times is not a popular newspaper? Did I not see our gentle "bobby" reading the Woodlesford Whispers, about eleven o'clock last Friday night by the aid of his "bull's eye"? Of course I did.

People are wondering about the apparition which I mentioned last week, but if they only keep their eyes open they will see it for themselves.

AJAX.

ROTHWELL GAS COMPANY.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

Having little time for letter writing at my disposal it was not my intention to take any further part in this matter than that which I undertook at the meeting held on the 22nd ultimo.

My attention has, however, being called to a letter of Mr. John Turner's, inserted in your issue of the 6th instant, (who appears to have plenty of time for letter writing) in which statements are made relative to myself which I cannot allow to pass unnoticed, as I find that these statements are misleading many people. I will ask you to allow me to reproduce at some length the words used in that letter, and the words actually used by myself at the meeting. Mr. Turner in his letter says. "Sir, we demand that those persons "who have come forward as the mouthpieces of the "Gas shareholders should at least understand their "own Bill, and we maintain that it is highly improper "that they should propagate statements in favour of the "Bill from ignorance which cannot but be considered "culpable. We must admit that we have been able "to examine very few of the particulars advanced by "our opponents, but in the few cases where we have "examined them, we find some startling discrepancies. "Mr. T. Hargreaves is reported to have said, the "price here is 4/2, while at East Ardsley they pay 7/6, "at Pudsey 6s. (only 10 candlelight) and other places "similar prices. You, Sir, have assured me that you "were yourself surprised at these words, and that you "reported them most carefully, moreover, Mr. Hargreaves has already had an opportunity of correcting "the report, but has not done so." Now Sir, I beg to state that I did not use the words "they pay" italicised in Mr. Turner's letter, but the words bearing upon the subject which I did use were these.

"I have a number of statistics here and of statutory charges. We will take one near to us; that is, East Ardsley, their statutory charge is 7/6, that is a place very much like Rothwell; Penistone 6/; Pudsey 6/; and they (Pudsey) give you an illuminating power of 10 candles, whereas, the Rothwell Company intend to give you 14, which I believe is as high as anything except Todmorden, Leeds and Rotherham."

Further, I am quite aware that Mr. Turner uses the words "Mr. T. Hargreaves is reported to have said" but let me remind you, that the supporters of the opposition were rather noisy, and that Mr. Turner was much nearer me than your reporter was, consequently in a better position to know what I actually did say, and I therefore, submit, that he has no right to put in print and bring before the notice of the ratepayers a statement which is not correct, under the cloak of is reported. Now Sir, I will refer to the other paragraph in the letter in which my name is mentioned, the paragraph runs thus "As bearing upon something "else which Mr. T. Hargreaves said, I may state that "I have been informed on the very best authority that "the Shipley contest, (which was of three or four-"fold greater magnitude than ours) did not cost the "opposition more than £500."

Mr. Editor, I never referred to Shipley at all; what I did say upon the subject was "That Castleford, Normanton, Mirfield, &c., spent considerable sums of money in opposing Gas Bills connected with those places, in one case as much as £1000, and scarcely gained a single point."

Possibly Mr. Turner did not wish it to appear that I had made any misstatement in this matter with respect to Shipley, but I contend that after reading the above extracts, the conclusion might fairly be drawn that I had stated that the opposition to a Bill at Shipley had cost more than £500; and, if even that impression were not given and the Shipley contest did not cost £500, it does not in anyway alter the facts and figures given by me to the meeting, and I beg to submit, that the figures and statements which I gave at the meeting are facts, and can be proved to be such, and the impropriety and culpability is not in my stating them, but in other people misstating and distorting them.

I will notice one other statement of Mr. Turner's which was to the effect "that Mr. T. Hargreaves was a shareholder in the Rothwell Gas Company;" this is another of Mr. Turner's misstatements, as I am not a shareholder in this company.

Yours truly,
THOS. HARGREAVES.

Lofthouse, Jan. 18th, 1882.

THE GAS QUESTION.

(A REJOINDER).

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

After the number of letters you have received on the above subject, I have no doubt you will be pretty nearly exhausted by the perusal of them, and I can fancy that on looking at the heading of my letter you will exclaim, another infliction! 'The cry is still they come.' Dont be alarmed however, for although the words are used, the subject is not the Gas question, but an answer to the remarks made by Ajax in his Whispers of last week, respecting the choice of titles.

I had fully expected to receive a severe castigation at his hands, but was agreeably surprised to find that the principal point on which he took me to task was that I signed my epistle 'One of the ignorant section of working men.' I feel greatly honoured by the opinion Ajax has of my abilities, and must thank him for such, but he went on to say, 'I like consistency in the choice of a title.'

This led me to consider, well, if there is anything in the title of a letter, (I always had an idea the matter was most important) why does the writer of Woodlesford Whispers use the nom de plume of Ajax.

I must confess that until your last issue I was not fully conversant with the history of the real Ajax, and had intended to ask your correspondent to kindly furnish particulars, but on looking into the 'Dictionary of Phrase and Fable,' (an excellent reference book) I found the information required, where allusion is made to two, namely Ajax the Greater, and Ajax the Less. It is not to be doubted for a moment with which your contributor would naturally wish to bear comparison, so if you will allow me I will give a verbatim statement respecting 'Ajax the Greater' 'Was king of Salamis, a man of giant stature, daring, and self confident. Generally was called Telamon Ajax because he was the son of Telamon. When the armour of Hector was awarded to Ulysses instead of to himself, he turned mad from vexation and stabbed himself.'

Was the author of 'Woodlesford Whispers' aware of the above when he made choice of the title? From it I can gather no reason why he adopted the same, unless it was that it contained the term self-confident, then there may be some consistency, that is, if we may judge from his writings.

In my former letter reference was made to 'armour,' but I little thought that for want of a 'new suit' Ajax was so foolish as to go mad from vexation and also make such a sad termination to his career. I sincerely hope if anything should ever occur to upset the feelings of the present Ajax, (still it is possible for much learning to make one mad) such an untimely fate will not be his, as we should greatly miss him, in fact it would be 'a great and perhaps irreparable loss.'

Yours &c.,
ONE OF THE IGNORANT SECTION OF WORKING MEN.

P.S.—If on any future occasion I should furnish correspondence I will endeavour to use a more appropriate title than the one complained of, altho' Ajax himself furnished the same in a previous issue.

THE GAS COMPANY'S BILL.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times

Sir,

Being deeply though not financially interested in the present discussion on this Bill, I have taken considerable pains to ascertain the exact state of things as regards two or three points referred to in previous letters.

There appears to be an idea, which, of course may come to be considered as a fact, that as Mr. Batty states, the Bill can only be modified by going to the expense of opposing and by engaging counsel to appear before Committee, &c. This I find is incorrect, the standard price of gas and other alterations can be made in the Bill, and can be modified in its passage through the House (if the Directors allow an undertaking to this effect to be given.)

As regards the monopoly so much feared, although a Bill gives a Company power to break up roads, &c., yet those parliamentary powers will not prevent other persons selling gas or any other light precisely as the present company now does, opening roads by permission of the surveyors, so that any other company may still supply gas or other light, but would have no compulsory powers of breaking up the roads.

Mr. Turner says "if the works should be badly managed or residual products become worthless, and coal, labour, plant, &c., should rise to such a price that the company could not sell gas at 5/5 without loss." What is sauce for the goose is surely sauce for the gander. Mr. Turner must see this; in your Almanack under Jan. 11, you will find "great dearth of coal in England, the price rose to 51s. per ton in London." What happened 10 years ago might happen again and Mr. Turner admits the possibility to serve his own side of the argument; and as the company are bound to keep up the supply of gas, and supply any person within 25 yards of the mains, if this happened, what would become of the shareholder's dividends? Echo answers "what." Ask the writer of the three letters.

I have observed that a committee is to be formed as soon as Parliament meets for the purpose of examining the whole question of electric lighting, so that if this clause is inadmissible, it will be struck out.

While Mr. Hargreaves may have, and I should say has been, incorrectly reported in his statements as to the price of gas in various places. I have made some enquiries of friends living in Leeds, and of other persons, and it appears that at Churwell, close to Leeds, the price is 4/7; why don't they ask Leeds to supply them when their town almost joins the Borough? A Morley gentleman told me that the price there is only 3/9, one remove below Rothwell; and they are close to the collieries, the population is some 15000, and there are many mills, all tending to cheapen gas. Some Leeds friends tell me that although the price of gas now is only half what it used to be, their bills are just as much or more, the pictures and paper on their rooms are quickly spoiled and the light is not near so good as formerly; in these houses there had been no change of meter, lights or style of burners.

I do hope for the sake of those living in Rothwell, where I understand the rates are already very high, that the Local Board will come to some resolution to propose certain alterations in the Bill to the directors of the Gas Company, and so avoid the expense of legal opposition and the consequent ill-feeling which is sure to arise, which ever party wins the day. From remarks made at the meeting, and from the letters of Mr. Seanor and also of Mr. Turner, it seems to me that such a compromise may be effected as will satisfy both parties, and while reducing the price of gas they will also be saved from inflicting heavier penalties on the long-suffering ratepayers.

Yours respectfully,
AN OLD FRIEND.

THE GAS QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

Some time ago, I heard that Carlton and Lofthouse were very warm about the Gas Bill, and expected seeing some proofs of such feelings in your paper. Are they willing to let well (a very poor well) alone, or are they purposing to join the opposition?

Yours respectfully,
ROTHWELLIAN.

THE GAS QUESTION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

It is exceedingly refreshing to the opponents of the Gas Bill to peruse the contents in reference to the above question in your last week's issue, each contributor demonstrates how difficult a matter it is to make an empty bag stand upright, inasmuch as one and all of them do not attempt to defend the Bill, or argue from its provisions, although each in his own way is combating in favour of the Gas Company's interests, by tendering conditional support if the Bill is modified, (for all are agreed that the Bill must be modified, even Ajax himself.) So say the opposition, and is it not remarkable, that this was not found out before Mr Turner and others took up the matter, and requisitioned the Local Board to call a ratepayer's meeting and have the Bill discussed before that meeting, where were Mr J R Seanor, a consumer, and a property owner? Borrowing a phrase from a 'Consumer's' epistle 'Echo answers where.' I have before me at the time of writing a copy of the Rothwell Times; in which the chairman of the Gas Company Board of Directors is reported to have said that 'the Bill was popular, as it had frequently been mentioned both publicly and privately, and was generally held to be a necessary protection.' This is the kind of chaff that was used to prepare the public mind for the reception of the Bill, and it appears to have been successful in J R Seanor's case, and that he and a few others cannot get rid of the early impressions created by the above startling quotation, and that those that refuse to be lulled into insensibility by this kind of chaff 'are not prudent but simple minded men, &c. Well! subsequent events will prove whether this prediction is the result of prophetic inspiration or not, but at present it appears to your humble servant, so much commonplace cant. But Sir, it is not my intention to deal with the apparent apathy of 'J R Seanor' 'A Consumer' and 'A Property Owner,' but to shew up the fallacies and misrepresentations their effusions contain.

Starting with 'J. R. S's' fallacious statements in respect to the sliding scale contained in the Bill, he, with an attempt at humour, tries to shew there is no need to be alarmed at the exorbitant rate of interest defined in the Bill, for by giving gas away the shareholders would be entitled to a 26¼ per cent dividend &c. By a similar process of reasoning suggested in J R Seanor's' communication, it can be shewn that nobody need to be afraid of high dividends, and that there is no need to alter the Bill at all, for by supposing that £5 shares sell in the market for £100 or more, then the shares would scarcely bear any interest at all; but such fallacious similes only shew how prejudiced minds can be perverted, for it requires very little study of the clauses in question to demonstrate that if gas at 4/2 per 1000 feet won't pay 13¾ per cent dividend, the consumer must not expect a reduction in the price of gas.

Mr Seanor seems much exercised in mind because he could not get a patient hearing at the public meeting. Personally I was not surprised, because when he rose to speak he asked the Chairman's leave to alter the amendment proposed by Mr T Hargreaves as follows, 'That the Bill be not opposed,' by adding to it the following words, 'if modified by the directors' The chairman ruled the suggested alteration inadmissible.

Yet Mr Seanor spoke so strongly in favour of the amendment in its original form, as to appear inconsistent and devoid of principle, (I do not say such was the case) but to everybody in the Hall there appeared in his conduct such inconsistency, that it has been the general theme of censure and comment in the village ever since.

To the opposition it is perfectly amusing to see such an exhibition of ignorance, in respect to the principles of political economy contained in the letters by 'A Consumer' and 'A Property Owner' It does not seem to have ever entered their somnolent craniums, that it is labour, and labour only, that pays rates; for example, if a man without means won't work he cannot pay rent, and if a landlord cannot get his rent, he cannot pay rates. But pardon this digression, Mr Editor, and I will come more closely to the reasoning contained in the communications under notice; the writers seem to lose sight of the fact that it will be the Gas Company's fault if one single penny is spent in opposing the Bill; the onus of the expense incurred (if any) will fall on the Company, from the fact, if there was no Bill, there could be no oppositino, hence no expense; and under the circumstances to argue that small householders and small consumer ought to have no voice in the matter is preposterous (and such reasoning springs from that want of sympathy with the toiling portion of the population of this country, characteristic of a century ago.) Take the working man in the aggregate, and then consider who it is that pays rates and consumes gas; with the writers in question wealth is to be the avowed test by which the gas question is to be adjusted; how strange this sounds in this the 19th century. Because working men do not live in dwellings of £20 rental they are to be gagged and not even considered in respect to cheap gas. Nay, they are to be sacrificed in the interests of large owners, as if all honesty, virtue, and patriotism depended upon a £20 rental, or the occupancy of a small farm. 'A Consumer' and 'A Property Owner' can rave about the rights of property as long as they like, but the compound householders have spoken out in this matter, and are prepared to insist on their demands being respected, inasmuch as the power is in their hands whether the Bill shall be opposed or not, and that depends entirely what concessions are made in the Bill.

'A Consumer' says the Bill has got the support of Messrs Charlesworth's and Seanor's, who are the largest consumers of gas; I think this support is conditional: Mr Seanor in his letter suggests that the Company are asking for plenty, so that they could withdraw what, they did not expect to get (by the way, is that honest) and he also says that the Bill must be modified. The chairman at the public meeting told me when leaving the platform, that the Bill would have to be modified, and that electricity and all other artificial light would be knocked out quick by the Parliamentary Committee, so I think I am justified in inferring that Messrs Charlesworths' and Seanors' support is conditional.

'A Property Owner' alleges that the ratepayers' meeting was a packed one, and consisted principally of compound householders and lads, and that the majority of those present had been drilled night by night at the Liberal Club; a more false statement could not be made. I suppose this assertion is made as a set-off against the analysis given by Mr John Turner in his letter, of all the supporters of the amendment. I beg to inform 'A P. O.' that the opposition anticipated that the Local Board would appoint persons to stand at the doors of the large hall, to prevent anyone from entering that was not on the rate-book, and that the opposition at the Club advised those that did not possess a vote not to attend the meeting, so that an accurate expression of opinion on the part of the ratepayers should be recorded. The letter in question concluded with the hope 'that those that make the quarrel shall be the men to pay.' That I endorse, because if that principle is adopted, the cost will fall on the Gas Company.

Before concluding, one word in respect to my friend Ajax. You will remember that I stated in my previous communication that I thought something had gone amiss with the whispering sage, and it occurred to my mind, with it being so near Christmas, that he might possibly be suffering from the effects of too much plum pudding and XXX ale. This the sage repudiates; but in last week's 'whispers' he confesses that his nervous system has received a severe shock through the apparition of some hideous phantom, in the vicinity of Woodlesford Church. Poor fellow! I am waiting in suspense for the signs of returning sanity; and would suggest in the meantime that Abernethy's principles of medicine be applied without delay, viz., washing, ironing and hanging out to dry. Washing means purging, ironing means the administration of a tonic medicine, and hanging out to dry means plenty of fresh air and exercise. There is no doubt that such treatment would under the circumstances have a salutary effect upon the mind and body for poor Ajax. Angels and ministers of grace restore him, and oblige,

Yours truly,
BENJAMIN BATTY.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

A special meeting of the above Board was held on Friday evening last, "to consider whether or not it was advisable that the Board should oppose the proposed bill for incorporating and conferring powers on the Rothwell Gas Light Company, Limited, which the said Rothwell Gas Light Company, are seeking to have enacted in the session of Parliament, 1882, and if it should be deemed advisable to oppose such bill, to pass a resolution of the Board to oppose such bill," as advertised in our late issues.

All the members were present:—J. Charlesworth, Esq., (chairman); Messrs. W. Hargreaves, Holmes, S. Bramley, H. P. Newsome, J. Hargreaves, J. Batty, J. Oliver, J. Sanderson, and the clerk and treasurer.

The clerk read the reply of Mr. Warren to the several questions propounded by the Board as to the meaning of an absolute majority, and whether the three members who are shareholders are counted in a division. These replies have already appeared in full in last week's issue; we need not therefore repeat them here.

Mr. Sanderson said that it appears there must be a majority of five out of the whole Board of nine; he thought this was a departure from the general rule; it would not matter, it seemed, whether the three shareholders in the Company voted for the Bill or remaining neutral, there must be five voting against it, to secure an opposition.

The chairman agreed that this was a special case, and that if an opposition was to be held, it must be on behalf of all the ratepayers.

Mr. Holmes thought the proper course to take would be to go through the objectionable clauses, previously considered, and amended by a Committee of the Board.

Mr. Newsome pointed out that they must be guided by the law, and the law said the motion must be carried by a majority of the entire governing body.

Mr. Oliver believed the question would be settled by a majority of five votes on one side or the other.

Mr. Sanderson held that this a was departure from the ordinary rule, and would go against the opposers of the Bill; supposing four voted against the Bill out of six non-shareholders, that would not meet the explanation of the law as laid down.

The chairman replied that supposing such a course were taken, and a majority of 4 to 2 were recorded, and they went to the Local Government Board as opposing the Bill, they would be asked if the Board had conformed to the clause of the Act referred to; their reply would have to be in the negative, and the cost of the opposition would have to be paid out of their own pockets.

Mr. W. Hargreaves remarked that there were always shareholders in Town Councils, Local Boards, &c., and the decision on such questions must go by law.

The chairman referred to the recommendations made some time ago by the Board for certain modifications in the Bill, and was surprised they had not been carried out. He believed if the Company was prepared to make these alterations, that the Board would be quite satisfied. Instead of carrying out these recommendations, the Board had asked the Company to withdraw the Bill. As a large ratepayer, he thought the most sensible way was to say, we shall oppose the Bill unless these clauses are modified. At the public meeting, he thought this was the undercurrent of feeling, not to oppose, if modified. If any gentlemen wish to oppose, they can do so, anyone can do so out of his own pocket; but if we can get the clauses altered why dip into our pockets.

Mr. W. Hargreaves, as the chairman of the Gas Company, was sure the directors would be happy to meet the Board at any time to go into the question. He thought it was quite time to "bury the hatchet," and not be like some people who seem to care for nothing so long as it does not affect them, and that Messrs. Charlesworth's have to pay half the cost, and who say if certain clauses are not struck out, we will oppose the Bill; he thought the rates were heavy enough already, and feared they might reach 7s. by and bye.

Mr. Oliver thought it would be the best thing to go at once into the clauses; he was a large ratepayer himself and represented many others.

Mr. Holmes proposed and Mr Oliver seconded, that the several objectionable clauses be considered.

The chairman asked whether the chairman of the Gas Co. was acting on the Company's authority; Mr. Hargreaves replied "No."

Mr. Sanderson said the first question was to decide for or against the Bill. Everyone knew it was a very obnoxious Bill, he believed the people were very much against it; it had been attempted to usher it through without anyone knowing.

Mr. Newsome wished to know what portion of the Bill he objected to (Mr. Sanderson "What did the majority at the public meeting say?) Mr. Newsome "We have nothing to do with the public meeting, it was informal."

Mr. Bramley detested some of the clauses in the Bill; he considered the introduction of the "electric light" clause one of the worst points he knew.

The chairman pointed out that while he thought the Company ought to strike out that portion of the Bill, that the "electric light" was protected by patent, and if the Co. used it, they would have to pay for it. He thought if electricity came into use for lighting purposes, it would be done more cheaply and better by the Gas Co. than any new company.

Mr. Bramley was sure the Local Board would be glad to assist their own townsmen in such an enterprise, but objected to its insertion as a part of the Gas Bill. He would also like to have an additional clause to enable the Board to purchase the Gas Works on advantageous terms within a certain number of years.

Mr. Newsome was sorry to hear Mr. Bramley say he detested the electric light clause, but he believed the whole matter of electric lighting was to be discussed in Parliament this session, so that there was no need to bother about that.

The chairman intimated that the Board was already discussing the clauses; there was a proposition moved and seconded. He thought they were nearly agreed on what they should do, and that it would be best to put the motion and go through the clauses.

Mr. Batty wished to say that the chairman had just put the matter in a nut shell. If they went through the obnoxious clauses, they could then take out what they objected to.

Mr. Sanderson still held to the fact that they were out of order in discussing the matter at present. According to the notice advertised, the meeting was called to decide for or against opposing the Bill.

Mr. Holmes' only object was to open the question, so as to see what the Bill was, and discuss its merits before voting on it.

The clerk ruled that the Board could not pass any resolution except that for which the meeting was called, for or against the Bill.

Considerable discussion ensued in which Mr. Sanderson stood out for the resolution "That the Rothwell Local Board do oppose the Bill of the Rothwell Gas Light Co., now sought to be promoted in the next session of Parliament" but failed to get a seconder.

Mr. Holmes held that if such a resolution were passed, there would be no opportunity of considering the clauses at all.

The chairman suggested an amendment to adjourn, so as to give the Co. a chance of discussing the Board's proposals.

Mr. Sanderson thought that if the resolution was carried, the Co. might make some modifications, and if agreed to by the Board, rescind the resolution to oppose, as people said the Co. would do nothing except under pressure.

Mr. Holmes wished they could have a resolution to oppose unless modified.'

Mr. Batty.—That's what we want.

The chairman.—But the clerk says we cannot pass such a resolution according to law.

Mr. Sanderson still pressed his resolution; and then the amendment could be put after; he would be glad if it was carried, as it would then be brought before the shareholders.

Mr. Newsome had come expecting to hear what the objections were.

Mr. Sanderson mentioned that the Co. sought a "monopoly."

The chairman explained that should the Bill pass, if he had any private property, he could still supply himself or his tenants with gas or other light. He was looking forward to Rothwell increasing; he expected the residual products of the Co. would enable them to reduce the price of gas more and more He held that the Gas Co. had been a great benefit to Rothwell and neighbourhood Personally he experienced the advantage and the saving of having his own house lighted with gas compared to the cost and trouble of lamps. He thought the most common sense way was to consider the clauses and say what they objected to.

Mr. W. Hargreaves repeated his previous assertion that the Gas Co. would be prepared to meet the Local Board and discuss any questions which might be proposed; but as the matter stands now, the Gas Co ask for certain powers; the Board is asked to say, we wont accept your Bill; but the Board will not say what are the objections. The Rothwell Gas Light Co. is prepared to pass the Bill, and will obtain the powers asked whether there is opposition or not.

The chairman thought if Mr. Sanderson would say what clauses he objected to, they might get on. As a large ratepayer, he wished to discuss the question fairly, and save the rates as much as possible.

Mr. Holmes, as representing "Stourton-cum-Rothwell and Royds Green" was trying to look after all their interests; but if they at once opposed the Bill, there was nothing further to do. The Stourton people have nothing to gain by the Gas Bill, but they have something to lose if the Board oppose it. He was in favour of opposition as the Bill now stands, but urged his resolution to point out objections and give the Company a chance of modification.

Mr. Jas. Hargreaves thought it was a pity nine of them should be sitting there all this time, and nothing done. If the company can get the Bill as it now stands, they will no doubt try. Hitherto they have heard of no objection officially; they have heard people talk; they have seen the correspondence in the Rothwell Times, but they have heard nothing from the Local Board.

Mr. Batty.—We are going very slow, Mr. chairman; painfully slow.

Mr. Holmes.—You can't say we're going too fast now, then, Mr. Batty.

Mr. Batty.—No, not so. Cannot we pour some oil on; if I second Mr. Sanderson's resolution, and it is carried it shuts the meeting up, and we have to spend a lot of money. He thought it would be more satisfactory to go on with the clauses.

The Board then went into the several clauses of the Bill, without resolution.

STANDARD PRICE.—This is specified at 5/5 Mr. W. Hargreaves said that the standard price at Featherstone is 5/6, at Normanton 4/7, and at Leeds 3/9. Featherstone price is now 5/-, the Rothwell Bill is an exact copy of their Bill obtained last year. He was also able to say on good authority that Leeds would not sell gas at less than 2/2 and it would cost 2/8 to bring.

The chairman differed from some speakers, he thought the Rothwell Gas Company had acted very reasonably, having reduced the price of gas without being asked from 7/6 in 1875 to 4/2 in 1881.

Mr. Oliver proposed that the standard price be 4/3. Seconded by the chairman.

Mr. Batty moved an amendment that the price be 4/-, seconded by Mr. Sanderson, which was carried, Messrs. Batty, Sanderson, Bramley and Holmes voting for it, while the chairman and Mr. Oliver supported the resolution.

ELECTRIC LIGHT.—Mr. Bramley moved that all the clauses relating to the electric light be struck out; seconded by Mr. Holmes and carried. Mr. J. Hargreaves neutral.

PRESSURE.—It was unanimously agreed that 5/10ths and 10/10ths be substituted for 4/10ths and 8/10ths of an inch pressure.

Mr. Batty enquired what was meant by giving two hours notice of intention to test the pressure.

Mr. W. Hargreaves explained that this referred to the pressure and quality of the gas and it required that time to prepare the apparatus for testing the quality.

Mr. Holmes proposed that two hours notice be struck out as regards the pressure: the chairman seconded it. Carried.

ILLUMINATING POWER.—Mr. Batty moved that the illuminating power be 16 candles instead of 14; seconded by Mr. Sanderson, Messrs. Batty, Sanderson, Holmes, Bramley, and Oliver voted in favor, the chairman being neutral.

TESTING.—The clause relating to testing, it was stated, would probably be altered by the Department in all gas bills.

PURCHASE OF WORKS.—The chairman thought it was an important matter that a clause should be inserted whereby the Board would have power to purchase the works at an advantageous rate.

Mr. Bramley was very anxious to have a clause in providing for their purchase by the Board

Mr. Newsome had suggested £8 a share at a previous meeting.

The chairman proposed that a clause should be inserted providing that if the Board desired at any time to purchase the Gas Works, a maximum price of £8 a share be fixed, or less if the market price were lower.

Mr. Bramley would like to purchase gradually, but this, the chairman pointed out, would not be allowed by the Local Government Board, from whom they would have to borrow money.

Mr. Bramley proposed an amendment that a maximum price of £7 10s for 10 years be inserted, unless the market price be less.

Batty seconded the motion, which was d, the chairman being neutral.

OTHWELL DEBATING SOCIETY.

On Wednesday evening, a capital and highly teresting paper was read before the members of e Society by Mr W Wright, entitled 'Some art ocesses.' It was anticipated that an intellectual eat would be given, from the fact that the lecturer s for some time made art a special study, and this pectation was more than realized. The able manner which the subject was dealt with, together with e vein of humour which ran through the whole of e lecture, called forth the hearty appreciation and arm applause of all who had the pleasure of listen- g to the lecturer's remarks. Mr Wright felt that, owever willing he might be to do full justice to so rand a subject, he would only be able to give a general otion of 'Pictorial Art,' and that it would be im- ossible to go into the details of the various re- roductive processes, in the time at his disposal. Having stated that the past 100 years had seen the rth of 'Art Processes,' and that their wonderful evelopment was greatly due to the aid of science, Mr Wright then proceeded to deal with some of the productive processes of to day; viz., wood, steel, ching, lithography, woodbury-type, photography, rench photogravure, and some other processes eriving aid from photography. Steel engraving and ching were dealt with together, and the difference tween real acid etching and 'dry point' clearly own and illustrated by copper and zinc engraved es, with several splendid etchings. The rise of ood engraving and its growth from the earliest forms crude work, up to the fine work of the magazines to day, was gone into. The remarks upon wood graving were especially interesting. As to its tiquity, it has been stated that the sons of Seth ere adepts in this art, but the earliest wood-cut own bears the date of 1423, and from that date up the 18th century, little or no real progress was ade in wood engraving. It is pleasing to think that e honor of reviving and developing this art fell to the lot of an English youth in humble circumstances, no other than a Northumberland collier 'laddie,' named Berwick, who in after years became, as the lecturer fitly termed it, a prince in his profession, and whose name has been immortalised by Wordsworth. Specimens of Berwick's work were shown, also several modern examples, including some of the best American wood cuts.

The lithographic process was fully explained and illustrated by specimens in black and white, also of chromo-lithography. The advantages of the Woodbury type photographic process, as a cheap means of reproduction was discussed at length, and its peculiarities shown by some very fine specimens. The French style of photo engraving or photo-gravure was touched upon incidentally. The fineness of style and nice effect, was exemplified by three photo gravures executed by Goupil and Co. The last process mentioned was the prumptrutype, or ink photograph process, the close imitation of ordinary silver prints by this style was commented upon. Mr Wright in his concluding remarks strongly set forth the advantages of art as a means of popular education, showing that pictures could by their attractiveness to the eye, often fix attention, where literary matter, on account of its quieter mode of appealing, would altogether fail. At the close of the lecture, the chairman, (Mr Harms) in a few choice remarks, alluded to its excellency, stating that of its kind, he had never listened to a lecture which had afforded him so much pleasure as the one just delivered. Mr H Thompson, in moving the vote of thanks, felt that the members of the Debating Society were greatly indebted to Mr Wright for his kindness in not only giving them the benefit of his art study, but also in procuring the many valuable specimens, illustrative of his subject, thereby greatly adding to its interest. Mr James Armitage, in seconding the vote of thanks, fully endorsed what had already been said as to the excellency of the lecture, and thought that all present had been greatly benefitted by listening to it. Mr John Turner, in supporting the motion, regretted that he was unable to be present during the earlier part of the address. He felt sure that the Society in encouraging papers of this kind, was taking a step in the right direction, and would thus be greatly benefitted. Mr Wright, in reply to the hearty vote of thanks accorded to him, said that he had been amply repaid for any trouble he might have had in getting specimens, &c., by the patient and attentive hearing that had been given him. It was to him a labour of love in the truest sense of the word, and he hoped that the outcome of his remarks would result in inducing some to become art students.

LOFTHOUSE CHURCH CHOIR.

On Wednesday evening last, the members of this Church Choir, numbering 22 men and 20 boys, were entertained by Joseph Charlesworth Esq., at his house to an excellent supper consisting of roast beef, mutton, ham, goose, chickens, potatoes and other vegetables, plum pudding, tarts, mince pies, cheese, celery, blanch mange &c. On the ham was very tastefully written "Mr and Mrs. Charlesworth's compliments to Mr. Marshall and his Choir wishing them success and happiness."

After the loaded tables had been considerably relieved of their burden, Mr. Marshall proposed the healths of Joseph Charlesworth Esq., Mrs. Charlesworth and the little visitor who had arrived since our last year's supper—young Master Joseph Charlesworth. The healths were drunk and ringing cheers given with musical honours.

The Choir then adjourned to the Billiard room, where they were received by Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Charlesworth. Mr. Charlesworth presented each of the four best attenders, amongst the men, during the past year, with a copy of "Mendelssohn's Elijah," and the four best attenders amongst the boys with a suitable book each.

Mr. B. Marshall then proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Charlesworth for the splendid supper the Choir had had the pleasure of sitting down to, and for the beautiful prizes, and to Miss Charlesworth for her kind gift to the choir of a set of copies of "For unto us a Child is Born" and "Worthy is the Lamb." The vote was seconded by Mr. Moorhouse and supported by Mr. Harrison.

Mr. Charlesworth thanked the choir for their good wishes and wished them all a happy and prosperous New Year, and gave them some good advice. Several pieces were sung, and the rest of the evening was spent in a convivial manner.

Dessert was supplied at a later hour, and after a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Cherry, the butler and cook, and to the rest of the servants, for the splendid manner in which everything had been served, the party broke up a little after eleven.

FOOTBALL.

Rothwell v. Hopetown.—This match was played at Hopetown, last Saturday, and resulted in a victory for the home team by 3 goals to nil.

Rothwell Harmonic v. Hull Town.—This match was not played last Saturday, owing to the Hull Town Club sending back-word.

Rothwell Board School v. Oulton Victoria.—This match was played at Rothwell on Saturday last, in the Harmonic field, kindly lent by the Committee. The Oulton captain won the toss, and chose to defend Carlton Lane goal. The ball was quickly put in motion, and taken into the visitors' territory, where it stayed for a considerable time, and some good shies were made by the Rothwell forwards, but without result. The ball then got out of the scrimmage, and was taken up by the visitors' forwards but they were stopped by the Rothwell backs, whose play was excellent throughout the game. The ball was now taken back again into the visitors' quarters, and a goal kicked by H. Harrison. The ball was soon set in motion by the Oultonians, and travelled into the home territory, but did not stop there long, owing to the good play of the backs, but was taken down the field by some good passing, and J Rawling put it through the uprights, thus making two goals for Rothwell. After a bit more play in the Oulton goal-mouth, half-time was called. The sphere was soon set rolling again, and taken into the visitors' territory, when it was put through by H White. Oulton now took the ball down the field in fine style, and a dispute arose in the home goal, which was settled by the umpire throwing up the ball, when it was quickly put out of danger. Nothing more was scored by either side, and at the close of the match, Rothwell were declared victors by 3 goals to nil.

POLICE NEWS.

WEST RIDING COURT.

(Friday).

An Unhappy Home.—A Man who Doesn't Make the Pot Boil.—William Dobson, labourer, Carlton, was charged with assaulting his wife Mary, and threatening to cut her throat, and she asked the bench to bind him over to keep the peace toward her. The parties have been married nearly fifteen years, and have three children, aged 14, 13, and 6. The woman said her husband would not work, sent the children to beg, and frequently assaulted her in a savage manner, and this was the fourth time she had been compelled to summon him. He had both threatened to shoot her and cut her throat, and his language was unfit for the children to hear. As her husband pined her and the children she would prefer to be parted from him as he was too idle to work.—The defendant said he worked when he could get any work to do, he did not drink, and his wife wished to be parted from him so that she could live with another man.—As the complainant's witness could not attend, the case was remanded until Monday.

Monday.

William Dobson, labourer, Carlton, was charged on remand with having assaulted his wife Mary Dobson, and with having threatened to kill her. The facts are as reported above, when the case was adjourned for complainant to bring a witness. The evidence of complainant was briefly as stated below. The defendant, who, his wife stated, was a lazy, blackguardly fellow, struck her, on the 15th inst., and made her mouth bleed, and threatened to take her life. She asked for a separation order. Her husband would rather sit in the house, starve, and send the children begging, rather than work. A woman named Mary Gomersal, who lives next door to the defendant and his wife, gave evidence to the effect that she had often heard the defendant threaten to take the complainant's life. Police constable Taylor, called by the bench, said that the parties lived very uncomfortably together, and that defendant was a 'very bad hand at working.' The defendant urged that his wife sent the children out begging, and that she was never at home, and didn't want him at all. Dobson, who had been before the court three times previously, and had been bound over to keep the peace, was ordered to go to prison for two months, and the Court also made an order for judicial separation of himself and his wife.

MESSRS. CHARLESWORTH'S WORK PEOPLE AND THE LEEDS INFIRMARY.

We have pleasure in recording the fact that Mr. James Hargreaves has just paid over to the treasurer of the Leeds Infirmary, the sum of £41 2s. 7d. on behalf of the employes of Messrs. J. & J. Charlesworth. We trust, with the harvest Thanksgiving collection and the effort of the Odd-fellows last September, that Rothwell will have much more nearly paid for the benefits received last year, than has hitherto been the case.

WAKEFIELD BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

At the fortnightly meeting of the above Board on Wednesday, the clerk read a letter from Mr. Heaps (formerly of Rothwell, at present at Southport), medical officer for the townships of Lofthouse-with-Carlton and Thorpe, resigning his post. Mr. Heaps said that he took the step in consequence of having been obliged to relinquish his professional practice through ill-health, and stated that Mr. Glaister, who had fulfilled his duties for some time, intended making application for the post whenever the Guardians thought well to fill up the vacancy.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

Five more explosions of gas last week! I really begin to think that the atmosphere about Rothwell is rapidly getting into a very dangerous state and I would recommend all nervous individuals, and those who are not possessed of such strongly constituted mental organisations as Mr. Benjamin Batty and a few of his friends, to seek fresh quarters without delay as I fear there will ere long be such a "bust up" that poor old Roddill will be scattered to the four winds of Heaven, and there will be no one left to tell the tale, but the aforesaid Mr. Benjamin Batty and 'Ajax' who will then perhaps join in dancing the can can in the midst of the ruins, in celebration of the havoc for which posterity would hold them responsible.

Although some people may find fault with my method of dealing with this inflamable question at the outset, they must at least give me the credit of having ventilated it and given both sides the opportunity of expressing their opinions; and now that my original object has been attained I will leave the matter in the hands of the public and turn my attention to home affairs.

I alluded last week to the annual statement issued by the Woodlesford Churchwardens. I have no doubt that many people will be somewhat astonished to see that the expenditure during the year just closed has reached the large total of £225 (leaving out the balances.) This certainly seems a large sum to be disbursed in connection with a small country church like ours, but it will also be noticed that there are several items included in this amount, such as inner doors, rent of Sunday school, organ repairs, hymn books, hassocks, asphalting, and donations to religious societies and the Leeds Infirmary, which together amount to about £90, so that the nett expenditure on what may be regarded as annual requirements is actually £135. This is in my opinion far too much when it is seen that over £65 or nearly half of the above nett expenditure is devoted to bell-ringing and music. It will perhaps be remembered that I drew attention twelve months ago to the large sum paid in this direction, and I will ask anyone to point out a country church with accommodation for less than 300 people where anything approaching the sum above named is disbursed. It is well known that the vicar occasionally gives his congregation a talking to on the subject of close fistedness, but when they know that there is such an amount of lavishness practised in the matter of church music and its concomitant expenses, it is scarcely to be wondered at that they hesitate to fork out as much as is expected of them. It appears to me that Woodlesford Church has gone through the same stages of existence as everything else in the village; when it was new, everybody gave large subscriptions and the churchwardens launched out into extravagance in the shape of large salaries, but now that the subscriptions have dropped off or become less in amount, and the offertories smaller, is it not time to make a corresponding reduction in the salaries? £20 seems to be a very large salary for a village organist; I believe that the organist at Oulton receives a considerably less amount, and out of which he has to pay his travelling and other expenses from Hunslet twice a week. I think £12 would be quite sufficient to pay for this purpose. Again if £15 per annum was sufficient remuneration to Mr. Towler, who in order to perform his duties as choirmaster at the church was obliged to be away from his home and family the whole of the Sunday, I am quite satisfied that £10 is as much as the office is worth to a resident in the village, and if we are to value by results, even £5 per annum would now be too much to pay. The bell-ringing costs £5 per annum more than it ought to do, and a charge of £5 15s. 4d. seems a very excessive one for washing surplices. Probably some people may term me an impertinent meddler on reading these remarks, but that will not trouble me in the least, my object being to endeavour to effect an improvement in this as in other matters, and I am certain that if the gentlemen most concerned, are the good churchmen which they profess to be, they will not hesitate a moment in agreeing to a reduction which is so abundantly justified by the state of the finances of the church. It is at all times an unpleasant duty to have to reduce salaries but it is no less a duty on that account, and I am strongly of opinion that unless the churchwardens make some considerable reduction in the expenses above alluded to they will not remain faithful to the trust reposed in them by the parishioners.

I see from the programme of the ministrel concert announced for Monday night that Mr. Flockton is down for a topical song of his own composition. I feel rather curious as to the subjects to be dealt with and shall listen attentively to it. I hope that Mr. Flockton will have made the best of a good opportunity as I am sure there is material enough to work upon in the neighbourhood. The notion of Mr. T. Jackson setting up as an impersonator of female character has tickled me muchly, and I shall look forward with considerable interest to the appearance of my young friend as a "feminine."

THE GAS QUESTION AT CARLTON.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir

One of your correspondents asks what Carlton and Lofthouse are doing in the matter. I have no very definite information on the subject, but my opinion is that Carlton will oppose the Bill, and unless Lofthouse is well trained in the way that a not very small part of Rothwell is, Lofthouse will oppose. On a very fair consideration of the subject, I have come to the conclusion that the interest of the inhabitants will suffer materially if the Bill should pass in its present form. It gives a monopoly and that is an evil for both Company and gas consumer. It is an evil for the Company because it gives the power of charging what they like if under the maximum, it renders them careless, uneconomical and unenergetic, and thus in the end restricts their consumption and reduces their dividends. It is an evil to the consumer because he cannot buy what he wants at the cheapest market, or at the market that suits him best, he is oppressed and cannot operate to the best advantage for himself or for those about him.

Now it is very evident that monopolies ought not to be created unless the companies working them are under very severe restrictions.

The Rothwell Company is applying for an act which will be much wider in its operation than many people think. It refers not only to carburetted hydrogen (common gas), but to oxyhydrogen and the electric light; and I think it will include hydrogen for either lighting or heating purposes; and for the latter of these uses hydrogen can be made at an exceedingly low rate say 1/- to 1/6 per 1000 feet to the customer.

If the Company want a monopoly and to be able to charge 5/6 for illuminating gas, they should be compelled to supply 21 candle gas, and so to regulate the supply to each consumer that he shall have an equal light from each burner, and no more to pay for an equal number of lights than he would have in the same time in any other district. The maximum charge for gas for heating purposes should not exceed 1/9 per thousand feet, and the customer should have no more to pay in the whole than he would have for coals or coke or any other fuel to do an equal amount of work; this of course would be difficult to work, but if the Gas Company wish to have an advantage let them do something to pay for it.

I fail to perceive any reason why the inhabitants of Rothwell should not be allowed to go to the cheapest market for their light whether it is electric or gas light. As far as the electric light is concerned, there are places in both Rothwell and Carlton from which it can be supplied at a cheaper rate than the Gas Company is ever likely to be able to do.

CARLTONIAN.

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH, WOODLESFORD.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

In justice to our Sunday School, allow me to say that the remarks of your correspondent Ajax are untrue. I am happy to say our school is flourishing and increasing in numbers.

On the evening of the distribution of the prizes, the boys' department of the Board School was filled to over-flowing. There were not quite so many of the parents of the children present as I could have wished, but I attribute their absence more to the dense fog prevailing at the time than to any want of interest in the welfare of their children.

The proceedings passed off most satisfactorily.

Mr. Bentley gave an excellent address to the parents and children which was listened to with marked attention; and on the whole I never remember to have presided at a more successful gathering on any similar occasion. This is, I find on enquiry, an opinion shared by others besides myself.

I hope in future your correspondent will hesitate before making comments on hearsay relating to our Sunday School, which are likely to lead to false impressions.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
ARTHUR J. IRVIN.

WOODLESFORD CHURCH SUNDAY SCHOOL.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times

Sir,

I noticed in last week's budget of 'Woodlesford Whispers' a somewhat slighting reference to the distribution of prizes in connection with the above Sunday School. The proceedings throughout are stated to have been of an 'exceedingly mild description' and the impression is conveyed that church people generally in Woodlesford take little or no interest in the work of their own Sunday School. In justice to our church people, and in the interest of the Sunday School I think it is necessary to contradict this assertion.

The proceedings on the occasion in question, were of a most interesting character, and the attendance of parents and friends of the scholars, was so numerous as to call forth a hearty expression of gratification, both from the Vicar and from Mr. Bentley in their respective addresses to the scholars. Several Christmas carols &c., were very nicely sung by the children, under the direction of Mr. Longbottom. The prizes (in many cases, valuable books) were distributed by Mrs. Irvin, oranges, Christmas cards, texts &c., were also freely distributed amongst the scholars present.

Proof that the church people are not so apathetic concerning the religous instruction of their children, as our friend and mentor, Ajax, would lead us to believe, may be found in the fact that ten pounds annually is subscribed to pay for the use of the Board School for that purpose; and in addition to that, money is liberally subscribed to provide suitable prizes for the encouragement of good conduct, attendance, and attention, amongst the scholars. The number of scholars attending the school has nearly doubled since the occupation of the Board School, and the school and class-room used is already found to be much too small for their convenient accomodation.

Ajax's further remarks, show that he strongly feels the necessity for supplementing the 'so-called religous instruction given in the Board Schools' and also that he possesses a very proper sense of the 'duty of the people to encourage that which is genuine' this naturally leads one to suppose that he would be an invaluable addition to the teaching staff of the Sunday School, where I need scarcely assure him, he would find ample scope to give practical effect to his notions on this subject.

I am, Sir,
Yours faithfully,
WALTER LOCKWOOD.

P.S.—I am at a loss to understand how Ajax arrives at the conclusion that church enterprises in Woodlesford are 'usually' unsuccessful. An exceptional case such as he may have had in his mind, of course only goes to prove that the reverse is the rule.

ROTHWELL FOOTBALL CLUB.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

I expect that you will have received a report of a match which was played at Hopetown last Saturday, in which the visitors suffered defeat to the tune of 3 goals to nothing, and having heard a good deal of talk about it amongst the members of the Club, I should like to make a few remarks, which you will greatly oblige by inserting in your very interesting paper, so that the Committee will see who is to blame for the blot on the 'card.'

In the first place, players who have grumbled before at not being chosen, and who were amongst the team picked to travel to Hopetown, failed to put in an appearance, for some unaccountable reason or other, but I hear a whisper that the chaff which was freely bandied about at the club-house, relating to second team, and going to meet a club that was not worth playing, etc., had a good bit to do with only six players turning up, and only one of the forwards who were picked, consequently four lads and a man had to be pressed into their service when they arrived at their destination, and it soon became evident that only one of them had played before, as the other four did not appear to know the rules of the game.

Another thing which was against the visitors was the peculiar formation of the field, which dropped about six or seven yards a short distance from one of the goals, and of course the home team knew best how to take advantage of it. For boundary flags they had gutters, and the 'grand stand' for the spectators appeared to be in the middle of the field. Of course I am aware that our committee could not control all these things, but I think that more care wants exercising in the choice of a team to play away, that is, to pick men who can and will go. But some may ask, 'How is it that the Rothwell Football Club turned out such a team?' Perhaps it was on account of its being a paltry match, and some of the 'cracks' could scarcely be expected to condescend to make up the number. As Hull Town did not fulfil their engagement (?) with the Harmonic, it would have been a good plan to have borrowed some of the men from the village premier club, if their committee would have permitted them to help us.

I am, Sir,
Yours respectfully,
A COMMITTEE MAN.

TO-DAY'S POLICE NEWS.

More Thieves.—Last night, as P. C. Clarke was going his rounds in Woodlesford, he observed a light in the Station office, and on going to the place found three panes broken. He at once got through, and found a man in the office with a pair of boots, trousers, and about 2s. in money ready for taking away. The officer at once apprehended him, and brought him on to P. S. Turton's house at Rothwell, whence they conveyed him to Wakefield for trial to day. The thief is evidently an old offender, about medium height, 37 years of age, and giving the name of Wm. Walker. The prisoner was brought up to-day for trial and was remanded for a week.

HOW A PARTY OF LEEDS MEN SPENT CHRISTMAS DAY IN 1861, IN LOWER SCINDE, WESTERN INDIA.

In 1861, a party of men from one of the large engineering works in Leeds, were engaged doing some work at a place called Keamarree, near to Kurrachee, about 500 miles from Bombay. Ten or twelve miles from Keamarree, there is a place called Muggur-peer-Muggur-Talao (or alligator's pool), a collection of hot springs. These springs are situated amongst rocky and barren hills, and run out of the bottom of a small fertile valley, thickly wooded with date, cocoa nut, and acacia trees. At this place there is the tomb of a Mahomedan saint, to which a number of Fakeers have attached themselves. When travellers or strangers visit the place, these Fakeers are ready to beg or make money by feeding or showing the alligators. The springs vary in temperature from 98 to 130 degrees. A few hundred yards from where the springs run out of the rocks, they form a pool about 100 yards long by about 50 or 60 yards broad, and several feet deep. This place swarms with alligators. They are of all sizes from one to eighteen or twenty feet long, and from a few inches to about three feet broad across the back. They come out of the water and bask in the sun with their mouths wide open and their large white tongues lolling out, just like old cocoa nut trees. Upon the banks of the pool sometimes there are as many as forty alligators all out together. Sometimes Europeans go to this place to see the monsters, and frequently they purchase goats from the Fakeers, (a goat costs about two shillings) for the purpose of seeing the brutes feed.

It was on the 24th of December, 1861, that this Leeds party agreed to visit the alligators on the morrow. Seven camels were engaged. The camel drivers were ordered to be ready by four o'clock in the morning. Punctually at the time appointed, the workmen started from the Airedale Bungalows, at Keamarree, to go to the bazaar, where the camels had been waiting since the night before. When they got to the bazaar, all the camels were laid down ready to receive their respective riders. Every camel had to carry two men, a native driver and an Englishman. After much amusement they all got fairly started about five o'clock. The party arrived at Muggur-peer about half-past seven o'clock in the morning; took possession of the travellers' bungalow, got some breakfast, and then stayed to see the alligators. Two of the party strayed away a considerable distance up the valley, and above the alligator's pool, shooting birds, squirrels, &c., catching butterflies and other insects. In crossing a small stream of water they saw a young alligator about three feet long, with its mouth wide open. One of the party handed his gun to the other, and told him to stand on one side whilst he tried to snare the little brute. He then took off his garter, which was about four feet long, made a running noose at one end and got astride the reptile. Holding the noose about the same height as the alligator's head, he brought it right over its upper jaw. If it had run forward it would have been caught safe enough, but instead of going forward as was expected, it ran backward, and the garter being a knitted woollen one, it did not slip so well, so the brute got away and ran into a large hole under a bush, some twenty feet distance. On putting a staff into this hole, some four or five feet, it came in contact with an older monster inside, who made such a thundering howl that they ran away very much frightened. On returning the same way, several hours after, the small alligator was in the same place as in the morning. One of the party was very anxious to secure it, and, after considering the matter over for a short time, he came to the conclusion that there was not much danger from one so small, and that he would venture to seize it by the thick part of its tail. Giving his gun to a companion, with instructions not to let the reptile escape in the hole, he again strode across the small run of water, and grasped hold of the tail. He had miscalculated the strength of the little brute. It darted forward, quick as lightning; opened its mouth wide and turned round, its eyes sparkling like small diamonds, looking as much as to say, "Come on, I'm ready; what have you to do with my tail." He then took the gun, and struck it with the end of the barrels right over the head. The blow turned it right over, but it was up again in a moment, and over the bank, making for its hole. It was knocked over two or three times, but it managed to escape again, so they were obliged to leave it. When the two men got down to the pool again, they found that another party of Europeans had arrived. They had brought a goat or two, and were having some fine fun. They had got a rope from the natives, tied one end to a tree, and the other was made fast to the shank end of a leg of goat, which was then thrown amongst the alligators. The flesh was immediately seized by one of the largest of the alligators, who then made for the water. On finding that its prey was held fast by the rope, it became quite excited, shook its head violently, threw itself on its back, then on to its legs again, and seemed determined not to let go. At last the meat slipped off the bone, and the monster plunged into the water, and was seen no more. The same person that had tried to capture the small alligator, now thought he could improve upon the last performance. He sent one of the natives for another rope, which was about ten yards long, and about two inches thick. He made a noose or slip-knot at one end, coiled the remainder over his left arm, then took a stick in his right hand, and put the rope over the end of the stick, leaving the loop hanging down about two feet. He then gently approached one of the alligators, which was laid upon the sand, and was from twelve to fourteen feet long, and from one to two-and-a-half feet broad. Its jaws were about eighteen inches in length, and the teeth one and-a-half or two inches. It was lying with its jaws apart. All watched with some excitement the hunter, as he stole quietly up to the animal. When he got within two or three feet of its head, he dexterously slipped the noose right over its upper jaw into its mouth. As soon as the alligator felt the rope in its mouth, it made for the water. The loop of the rope tightened at once, and the monster was caught fast enough, the noose tightening in the centre of the upper jaw, right amongst the large teeth, so there was no chance of its slipping off. The rest of the party, numbering about ten Englishmen, now came to take hold of the rope to pull the brute high up on to the bank. The alligator became enraged, and struggled very violently, resisting with its utmost strength, and rolling over several times, whilst it was being pulled up the bank. It seemed to have no idea of attacking its captors, but it pulled back with all its strength. It lashed its tail about in great fury. One of the party got another rope, and slipped a noose over its tail, jumped over its body, and passed the other end of the rope betwixt its open jaws. As it gave another turn over, its tail was drawn towards the head, and the brute laid upon its back. It now gave in, and laid as if it were dead. The natives became excited, as they look upon the alligator as sacred. They began shouting, "Boat crabb! sahib!" "Boat crabb!" "Murgehi, sahib!" "Murgehi!" meaning "Very bad, sir!" "Very bad!" "It is dead, sir!" "It is dead." After all were satisfied with looking at the monster as it lay upon its back, some putting their feet upon its body, and some poking it with their walking sticks, its tail was liberated. It was then able to turn over, but it seemed very weak, nor was it at all disposed to resent the injury it had met with. Some twenty or thirty yards from the spot where the alligator had been landed, was a long narrow pool, eight or ten feet wide, and of the same depth. In this narrow pool—the natives informed people—the rajah, or king of the alligators, had his abode. Every year or two there is a terrible battle amongst the alligators, as to which of them is to have possession of this favourite retreat. It was agreed to drag the captured alligator up the bank, to turn it into the King's pond, with the expectation of seeing a royal battle. Eight or nine men now got hold of the rope, which was still fixed tight round the alligator's jaw, and began to pull it up the bank. When the foremost man had got within a few feet of the small pond, and all were pulling hard at the rope, it broke short off, close to the alligator's nose. Several of the men fell, and the first was nearly pitched into the pond. The rope end was still fixed to the alligator's jaw. It crawled slowly over the bank, however, and just as it was making a plunge one of its assailants gave it a kick into the pool. It was expected there would now be a fight, but we were disappointed. All was quiet for some time, and it was proposed to fish for the king with a large piece of meat made fast to one end of a rope. The other end was thrown over the arm of a tree. The meat was dropped into the water, and was seized immediately, either by the king or some one of his household. As soon as it was discovered that the bait had been taken, several men got hold of the rope, hauled up with all their might, and were not a little surprised to see the meat in the jaws of a very large alligator. It appeared determined not to loose its hold. Its eyes glared savagely; it shook its head just like a dog when it has a rat in its mouth. The men kept pulling away, and when they had drawn the monster's head two or three feet out of the water, the meat parted, and the alligator dropped back into the water, with one portion in its mouth. The party engaged with the alligators got quite excited, and one of them declared that he would like to draw some of the teeth of one of the largest alligators which was laid on the bank, with its head away from the water, and he actually went within three feet of its open jaws He had a stick in his hand about three feet long. He took steady aim at some of the largest teeth, and then struck with all his might. He missed the teeth, the stick passing swiftly through the animals open mouth. This did not seem to disturb it much, and the man tried again with the same result. The third time the stick struck one of the largest teeth, but instead of the tooth being knocked out, the stick was split. The alligator turned sharply round, and plunged into the water.

This closed the day's proceedings. This excitement cooled down, and the party prepared to return home, every one being satisfied with the Christmas trip to visit the alligators.

Epps's Cocoa.—Grateful and Comforting.—"By thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps, has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette—Make simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in Packets labelled—"James Epps & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence for afternoon use.

LIBERALS & CONSERVATIVES UNITED!—This may sound strange, but it is nevertheless true, that Liberals and Conservatives alike are unanimous in declaring that "BUDDEN'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND AND COLTSFOOT" is the best remedy for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and, in fact, any Affections of the Chest and Lungs. One dose relieves, one bottle cures. Ask for "BUDDEN'S BALSAM," and take nothing else.—Bottles 1s. 1½d. 2s. 9d. Agent for Rothwell, A. Marshall, Stationer and Patent Medicine Dealer.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoas? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

KAY'S LINSEED COMPOUND Asthma and Bronchitis immediately relieve dy it Sold by Chemists.

Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills are now acknowledged by our best physicians to be the only sure and safe remedy for all diseases arising from impure blood, such as scrofula and scrofulous humours. Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s. 9d.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and tarchy compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

One Experience from many. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s 9d.

Holloway's Pills.—Teachings of Experience.—The united testimony of thousands, extending over more than forty years, most strongly recommends these Pills as the best purifiers, the mildest aperients, and the surest restoratives. They never prove delusive, or give merely temporary relief, but attack all ailments of the stomach, lungs, heart, head, and bowels in the only safe and legitimate way, by depurating the blood, and so eradicating those impurities which are the source and constituent of almost every disease. Their medicinal efficacy is wonderful in renovating enfeebled constitutions. Their action embraces all that is desirable in a household medicine. They expel every noxious and effete matter; and thus the strength nurtured and the energies stimulated.

Brandreth's Pills cleanse and purify the blood, strengthen and invigorate the nerves, and secure the perfecting of digestion and prevent the creation of those humours to which we owe erysipelas, scurvy, gout, and those slimy dregs out of which the stone and gravel within us are formed. The timely use of Brandreth's Pills has saved thousands of valuable lives. As an antibilious pill they are unequalled.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

The usual fortnightly meeting of the Board was held on Monday evening, present:—Messrs. W. Hargreaves, (chairman); Holmes, J. Sanderson, S. Bramley, J. Batty, H. P. Newsome, and the clerk, medical officer, treasurer, and inspector.

The minutes of last ordinary meeting were read and confirmed. The minutes of the special meeting were also read, their confirmation being delayed till after the adjourned meeting of Wednesday.

HEALTH.—Dr. Glaister read the following report for the month ending January.

To the Chairman and Members of the Rothwell Local Board.

Gentlemen,

I have to report that during the past 4 weeks, 14 births and 8 deaths have been registered in the district; during the corresponding period of last year there were 20 births and 4 deaths.

The causes of death were, one male, 75, bronchitis; one female, 72, heart disease; one male, 51, phthisis; one male, 67, found drowned; one male, 3, scarlet fever; one female, 14 months, convulsions; one male, 20 months, convulsions; and one male, 2 hours, from inanition.

I have to report that scarletina has been imported into the district, and one fatal case has resulted. Prompt measures, with the vigorous co-operation of the people of the house were at once taken, and hitherto I have heard of no other case in the village, though several reported cases have been visited and enquired into.

Three cases of measles have come under my notice in the village, and at Stourton it is at present epedimic. On Saturday I visited over 20 cases. So general is the disease, that school-work in the district must be much interfered with, and it becomes a question whether it would not be better to close the school for a time. I also visited a case of reported scarletina, which turned out not to be that disease.

I have been called in to examine the supply of water at Mr Lawton's farm, Rothwell Haigh. The water shewn to me, and which was stated to be the only supply within reasonable distance, was perfectly unfitted for domestic use, and insufficient in quantity for the requirements of the people.

JOHN GLAISTER,
Deputy Medical Officer of Health.

Mr. Holmes understood that the doctor has warned the people of Stourton against going into each other's houses, whereby the infection of measles might be carried, and had also intimated that by so doing they were liable to a penalty of £5.

The doctor also urged that the utmost caution should be used, as the contagion was generally caught from those who were just convalescent.

After further conversation, it was resolved on the motion of Mr. Holmes, seconded by Mr. Bramley,—That bills be printed and posted throughout the district, cautioning persons against carrying infection by any means, and warning them of their liability to be prosecuted.

It was also resolved—That the School Board be recommended to close the Rothwell Haigh Schools for a fortnight, or longer if necessary: proposed by Mr. Bramley, seconded by Mr. Newsome,

In reply to a question as to any other cases of scarlet fever, Dr Glaister stated that he had had several reported to him, but that he had not seen or heard of any other actual cases of scarlet fever, except the one fetal already mentioned.

HIGHWAYS.—Mr. Holmes reported that last Sunday evening, while getting his tea about six o'clock, he was called away in the pouring rain and storm to look at a large hole in Wakefield Road, some three or four feet deep. He sought some time for a man to repair it, and eventually persuaded Richard Hutton to get out of bed, (having been working all night before,) and the place filled up. Some men remarked to each other as they passed—"Sithee, t'Local Booard workin' on Sunda." The members expressed their thanks to Mr Holmes, who had so faithfully watched over the safety of the public, at such inconvenience to himself.

Mr. Farrer wrote from London, promising to forward the separate valuations for the roads as soon as he returned.

The inspector reported the state of Gillett Bridge, where several coping stones had been removed; he was instructed to have it repaired.

Mr. Holmes also spoke about a piece of road near the Toll-bar, which required "rounding,"—referred to the Highway Committee.

Mr. Bramley reported the dangerous state of Cinder Ovens Bridge, the wall of which is so low, a person might fall over. Mr. Holmes thought the posts and rails also wanted repairing very much:—referred to the Highways Committee.

Mr. Sanderson also mentioned a piece of repairs required near the bottom of Butcher Lane.

Mr Lawton's fortnightly account for team labour was passed and ordered to be paid.

Mr. Elliott's account for extra work is referred to the Highway Committee, who arranged to meet on Wednesday afternoon, to examine this and other matters previously referred to. A suitable conveyance was ordered to be secured.

SEWAGE OF ROTHWELL.—The clerk had received an intimation from Mr. Thompson and Mr. Stead, that they had resigned their interest in this contract to Mr. M. Brayshaw. The matter was left over for Mr. Brayshaw to produce such legal documents as are necessary.

Mr. Jowitt read his tenth report on the sewage scheme, in which he stated that the work has proceeded very slowly during the past four weeks, having only laid 64 yards of nine inch pipes and one shaft. There were too few hands, and the depth is also great, 21 feet. It is hoped under the new arrangement, greater progress will be made in future.

Mr. Brayshaw asked for an extension of time, and the matter was referred to a future day, when Mr. Parkinson can be consulted.

ROTHWELL GAS LIGHT CO.'S BILL.—The clerk read a letter from the Local Government Board enclosing a letter from Mr. B. Batty, who asked "what was an absolute majority of the governing body" whether 5 out of the entire number of members, (nine); or, seeing that three members are shareholders, four out of six. The matter is adjourned till Wednesday's meeting.

Mr. Sanderson said that he might read a letter from Mr. John Turner, headed "Rothwell Liberal Association," in which it was stated a unanimous resolution had been passed at their meeting asking the Local Board to stipulate with the Directors of the Gas Co. certain further modifications in their Bill.

Mr. Holmes thought they might as well hand over the whole question of the Gas Bill to the Liberal Association.

RAILWAY BILL.—The clerk also read a communication from the Board of Trade asking for a description of the several roads to be crossed by the proposed line, the amount and description of traffic, whether any objections to level crossing, &c. This matter was also referred to the Highway Committee.

The chairman thought the Local Board ought to depute someone to represent the ratepayers in furtherance of the Railway scheme; he was sure the promoters would need all the help possible. This question will come up at a future meeting.

STREET LAMPS.—The clerk read a letter from the secretary to the Gas Light Co., from which it appears that the lamps complained of, as often being out, are out of repair, and that sometimes the lamplighter had had to light them six times in a night. The chairman, as chairman of the Gas Light Co. corroborated the letter, and paid a high tribute to Woodcock, whom he considered the best lamplighter they had ever had. As to the time of lighting, he thought they ought to pull up the Leeds Corporation, as the lamps at Stourton were not lighted till after six o'clock.

Mr. Holmes agreed with the last remarks of the chairman and moved that a letter be written to the Gas Committee, complaining that the lamps are not lit till after six o'clock. Seconded by Mr. Batty and carried.

NUISANCE REMOVAL.—The clerk reported that now is the time to advertise for tenders for the removal of nuisances. After some conversation, in which Mr. Bramley endeavoured to continue the present manner of letting this work all to one man, it was resolved, on the motion of Mr. Newsome, seconded by Mr. Holmes, that the clerk advertise in the Rothwell Times for tenders for the removal of nuisances, in two portions, one including Royds Green, Rothwell, Waterloo and other property south of Lodge Lane; the other including Stourton, Bell Hill, &c., north of that lane.

FINANCE.—The following amounts have been received by the collector, and paid over to the treasurer.

General District Rate	91	18	2½
	£124	5	9½

AUDIT.—The clerk reported that the books, accounts, and documents kept by the officers of the Board during the past year, had been audited by the District Auditor, and certified as correct.

WATER.—Mr. Lawton had written strongly to the Board, on the necessity for a supply of water to his premises, and warning the Board that if any sickness were caused by such scarcity and bad quality, he should hold the Board responsible. The Inspector was instructed to examine the supply and report to next meeting.

On Wednesday evening a special meeting of the Board took place; present, J. Charlesworth, Esq., (chairman) Messrs. J. Holmes, S. Bramley, H. P. Newsome, J. Oliver, J. Batty, J. Sanderson, and the clerk and treasurer.

The meeting was an adjournment of the special meeting held on the 20th of last month, to consider the advisability of opposing or not opposing the Rothwell Gas Light Co.'s proposed Bill. A letter was then sent to the Directors of the Co. enclosing certain amendments for their consideration, and requesting them to meet the Board on the 1st of Feb. to discuss these suggestions.

The minutes of that meeting having been read, the chairman requested the clerk to introduce the deputation.

The Directors were Mr. W. Hargreaves, (chairman) Mr. James Baines and Mr. W. Abbishaw, accompanied by their solicitor, (Mr. Tennant) the secretary, (Mr. Wormald) and by Dr. Statter, of Wakefield.

After the usual formalities in which the chairman of the Board and the chairman of the Company alike expressed their desire to come to an amicable arrangement, and save the expense which would be incurred by an opposition, Mr. Tennant asked the Board, before proceeding to the question at issue, to pass a resolution affirming that any concessions made by the Company should be without prejudice, should a final agreement not be arrived at. The deputation then retired.

A conversation ensued in which it was further explained that the resolution requested by Mr. Tennant meant whatever concessions might be allowed by the Co. during the meeting, shall be nil and void, should the final decision be against the Bill, and should not be used as evidence against them in future. Mr. Sanderson strongly opposed the proposal, but on the motion of the chairman and Mr. Oliver, it was carried, on condition that the Gas Company agree to a similar resolution.

The deputation having again entered and accepted the "without prejudice" resolution on their side, the first objectionable clause was proceeded with.

Clause 28 provides that the standard price shall be 5s. 5d.

The Board had suggested 4s. and Mr. W. Hargreaves now offered 5s.; some discussion pro and con followed, but no decision was arrived at.

Clause 54 and other sections referring to the "electric light" the Board desired to eliminate altogether.

Dr. Statter said they were quite aware that Parliament would strike out the electric lighting clauses as they now stood, but as a general Bill on the subject would no doubt be passed in the coming session, the Co. preferred to leave it as it stood, in order that any legislative benefits which might arise, could be secured by this Co.

Mr. Sanderson and Mr. Batty closely pressed for a direct answer, whether they would take out the clauses or not, as there was a strong feeling against it. This clause was passed over.

Clause 61 refers to the two hour's notice as regards pressure. Mr. Hargreaves stated that a misunderstanding had arisen as regards this matter. The testing of pressure could be done anytime at the works, but this clause referred to the testing in the main near the consumer's residence or place of business, and required a properly qualified [illegible] at any particular place for testing in less than two hours.

Mr. Tennant moreover, read the Act of Parliament (Gas Clauses Act) in which two hours notice is specified; also that if the specified degree of pressure is not maintained, a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds may be inflicted on conviction.

Clause 62. The Board ask for "sixteen candle" instead of "fourteen." The Directors offer to make this "fifteen" candle illuminating power. Mr. Statter stated that out of every ten companies, eight of them guaranteed 14 candles, moreover fifteen candles meant sixteen, as in order to be safe, they always made it a candle more. Mr. Abbishaw thought it a place like Harrogate was satisfied with fourteen, surely Rothwell ought not to grumble at fifteen. He also intimated that if they were compelled to make sixteen candle, they would probably have to go somewhere else for coal (cannel) and thus inflict a serious loss on the town.

The new clause which the Board desire to have inserted was next considered, to enable the Board to purchase the works at not more than £7 10s. per share, if within the next seven years. Mr. Tennant believed there would be a difficulty in the Board purchasing works extending out of its own district. The chairman urged the propriety of having a maximum price in case the Board desired to purchase the works. Mr. Tennant hinted that if so, there should also be a minimum price. He suggested that a clause to purchase by arbitration or agreement might prove more suitable. Mr. Statter said the Board could purchase at any time by agreement, and the Local Government Board would allow them to borrow money. Several Boards had asked for such a clause, but Parliament had never yet granted it.

Clause 51.—A question was asked as to the power of the Board over the Company in breaking up streets, etc., and Mr. Tennant read the Act, whereby the fullest control is given to the goveening body, that notice shall be given of intention so to do, and the Company shall also keep in repair for three months, after breaking up the streets or roads.

Clause 25.—New Capital.—Mr. Sanderson asked whether the raising of new capital would not tend to an increased dividend. Mr. Statter replied that it would be very inconvenient and expensive for the Company to apply to Parliament every three or four years for additional capital powers; and as to any increased dividend, the shareholders could have no advantage, seeing that all new shares, after the Bill has passed, must be sold by public auction. Mr. Batty thought there was no objection to that clause, and the chairman held that it was only politic to apply for larger capital; and that their best policy was to reduce the price as much as possible, gaining their profits by larger consumption, and from the residual products.

The deputation then withdrew.

Clause 28 having been discussed further, the chairman proposed that the price be 4s. 6d. seconded by Mr. Oliver. Mr. Batty stood out for the former resolution, 4s., seconded by Mr. Sanderson. There voted for the amendment Messrs. Batty, Sanderson and Bramley; for the resolution (4s. 6d.) the chairman, Messrs. Oliver and Holmes, carried by the casting vote.

Clause 54 and others; Mr. Bramley spoke very strongly against electric lighting clauses. The chairman saw no reason why this Co. should not have the privilege of supplying the electric light if they could do it as cheaply as anyone else, but thought it wiser if the Co. would strike it out. It was therefore agreed to hold to "striking out" these clauses.

Clause 62. The concession of the illuminating power being advanced to fifteen candle was agreed to.

New clause for purchasing powers was also maintained by the Board.

On the deputation being again seated, the chairman reported the proposal of the Board to fix the maximum price at 4s. 6d.

This the directors would agree to, if a 1d more (4s. 7d.) owing solely to the constant difficulties which would arise from the fractions caused in calculating accounts. 4s. 7d. is exactly 5½ per 100, and as numbers of consumers only reached 300 or 400, this was a consideration.

Clause 54. Dr. Statter pointed out the ease and cheapness with which the present Co. could lay wires within the mains. The chairman of the Co. held to the clause for electric lighting, because if the light did come into use, they would have to spend £1500 or £2000 to get a Bill for it. Mr. Tennant also reminded the Board that if the Board purchased the works at anytime, this clause would be of great advantage to them

The Directors could not admit the "purchase" clause, especially without the approval of the shareholders.

The deputation again withdrew when a discussion followed on the electric light clause, with the only result of desiring their omission

Mr. Sanderson proposed. Mr. Batty seconded a motion to maintain the "sixteen" candle amendment, supported by Mr. Bramley.

The chairman proposed to accept the concession of "fifteen" candle, seconded by Mr. Oliver, and supported by Mr. Holmes. Carried by the chairman's casting vote.

A resolution was also proposed by the chairman, seconded by Mr. Oliver that a clause be inserted in the Bill enabling the Board to purchase at a maximum price of £8 and a minimum of £5 per share.

An amendment for £7 10s maximum was supported by Messrs. Batty, Sanderson and Bramley. The original resolution was carried by the casting vote once more.

The deputation having again appeared, the chairman of the Board informed them that the only questions now to decide were the omission of the electric light clauses, and the insertion of the purchase clause as above. The Directors were disinclined to strike out the electric light clause, and until they had consulted the shareholders could not possibly introduce a new clause "for purchase" into the Bill, which had never been before them. Some remarks having been made about the Company puttingaside an extra amount equal to 8d. per thousand into the reserve fund, instead of giving the advantage to the consumers in a reduced price of 3s. 6d., the chairman of the Company indignantly denied such a statement as being untrue and most base. The secretary said they had only £500 as reserve fund, and this is not too large to meet the contingency of an explosion or other accident, and which has only been started a few years ago. Mr. Hargreaves said they had to guarantee the expenses of the Bill out of the new capital. He was sure very large concessions had been made to the Board. Mr. Sanderson did not think so. Mr. Abbishaw and Mr. Baines remarked that if the Bill was opposed, the Company would have to advance the price, or be prevented reducing it, as the case might be, and the cost of the opposition would also fall on the ratepayers.

The deputation having again retired, further conversation ensued, both the chairman, Mr. Holmes and Mr. Oliver declaring it to the advantage of themselves and their constituents not to oppose the Bill; but no further progress was made.

The deputation having re-appeared, the chairman of the Gas Co. positively stated they could not deal with the purchase clause without bringing it before the shareholders, at a special meeting, which must be called after 14 days' notice, and that then one shareholder could object, and a further 14 days' notice must be given of a second meeting.

Mr. Newsome thought there was another view of the matter. The Gas Light Co. could get better terms from Parliament than they were likely to get from the Board, but there were gentlemen on the directorate who were also anxious to save the rates, and so prepared to make larger concessions than they otherwise would.

Dr. Statter confirmed Mr. Newsome's opinion, and having been 28 times before the Parliamentary Committee on gas questions, was able to speak with authority. Mr. Hargreaves said that whether the Board opposed or not, the Company could not admit the "purchase" clause. They would strike out the electric clauses, if the Board withdrew the new proposal. If the Board could not do that, then the onus of the opposition rested with the Board.

The deputation having withdrawn, the chairman proposed as a means of settling the question, that the new clause be not pressed. It was a pity to get so near agreeing, and still to fail. Mr. Oliver seconded the resolution, but as the other four members voted against it, it was lost.

The deputation having been again called in, the chairman of the Board stated that the Board declined to withdraw the "purchase" clause.

Mr. Hargreaves, in replying, expressed his sorrow that such was the decision, and stated that the Company would now take the Bill before Parliament in its entirety. Mr. Charlesworth, on behalf of the Board, thanked the directors forcoming in to discuss the points, and expressed his regret. Mr. Hargreaves returned the compliment. Dr. Statter thought the Company had given way more than they ought; he was exceedingly sorry they had not been able to come to an understanding, as the ratepayers will have to pay both ways, in rates and in the price of gas. The deputation then finally withdrew

On their retiring, a few moments elapsed, after which Mr. Batty moved, that the Board do oppose the Bill for incorporating and conferring powers on the Rothwell Gas Light Company, limited, which the said Rothwell Gas Light Company are seeking to have enacted in the session of Parliament, 1882.

Mr. Sanderson seconded the motion.

On being put, their voted for the resolution Messrs. Batty, Sanderson, Holmes and Bramley.

The chairman and Mr. Newsome immediately reminded the Board that it was necessary, to be effective, thatthe vote be carried by five members, so that the result of the vote was nil.

The meeting shortly after broke up, after sitting four hours and a half, and after a most unsatisfactory conclusion.

ROTHWELL SCHOOL BOARD.

The monthly meeting of the above Board took place on Friday last, present—Messrs. J. G. Turner, J. Batty, J. Parker and the clerk and attendance officer.

Neither the chairman nor vice-chairman having been able to attend, it was moved by Mr. Parker, seconded by Mr. Batty that Mr. Turner take the chair. Carried.

The minutes of last meeting were then read and approved.

Report.—The clerk read the Government Report for Rothwell Haigh School, which is generally most satisfactory, being a considerable advance on last year.

	Av. att.	Reading	Writing	Arith.	Classes	Special
Boys	106	92	88	74	106	2
Girls	84	68	73	68	84
Infants	81	presented 80

In consequence of the increased attendance in the Boys' and Infants' Schools, the Inspector requires additional accommodation to be made. "The Boys have passed a very fairly good examination in the Elementary subjects."

In the girls' school "the results of the examination are good."

In the Infants' school "the children are doing very well under Mrs. Dobson; the reading is good, the writing remarkably good, and the elements of arithmetic well taught."

Miss Rawe, who left school at Christmas, having finished her term, has secured a first class pass.

The total amount earned in Rothwell Haigh School, exclusive of Honour fees £1 10s. 0d., evening school £8 4s. 0d. and Miss Rawe's P.T. grant £3, reaches £238 17s. 0d.

Indentures have also been received for Master J. T. Gurney, who has passed without a bad mark for second year's P.T.; and for Master Frank Fatkin, who has passed for first year's P.T. The Board received the report with pleasure.

The indentures of Jos. T. Gurney and Frank Fatkin were ordered to be sealed for the respective terms of three and four years, as pupil teachers in Rothwell Haigh School.

It was also resolved that at the close of the present meeting, the Board adjourn till Tuesday at three o'clock in the Rothwell Haigh School-room.

Measles.—Reports were received from teachers at Rothwell Haigh that no fewer than 100 children were absent, on account of the measles. Some discussion ensued, but no action was taken at present, except to acquaint the clerk to the Local Board with the state of health in that locality.

Return.—The clerk read particulars of return required by the department bearing on the effect of summonses and fines on defaulting parents.

Prizes.—Mr. Harms had written intimating his willingness to give a children's concert this month for the purpose of raising funds to purchase prizes for the children at Rothwell School. The offer was thankfully accepted.

The fees of one boy were remitted for two months, and several persons were ordered to be summoned unless a better attendance is made by their children.

The salaries of teachers and cleaners £64 5s. 0d., Public Works Loan Commissioners £78 12s. 11d. and several accounts £19 1s. 11d. were ordered to be paid.

MINSTREL ENTERTAINMENT AT WOODLESFORD.

The fourth annual entertainment given by the "minstrel section" of the Woodlesford Choral Society took place in the large room of the Two Pointers' Inn, Woodlesford, on Monday last. The room was crowded.

The entertainment opened with the chorus "Good Health and a Happy New Year," which was all well sung, except the words—the general verdict of all who sat near me. The chorus in this, as in all the songs, was spoilt by Master Stead having to sing in falsetto voice. Many times he lost command of it altogether. The youth is not to blame. He ought not to have been placed there. The next on the programme was Mr. G. A. Atkinson, of Methley, conductor of the Choral Society. Considering how theabilities of this gentleman have been kept in the view of the public, his rendering of "When the roses were in bloom," was disappointing. He was decidedly flat in his upper notes, as were the stringed instruments which accompanied him. There seems to be a fatality amongst stringed instruments in the Two Pointer' Room, or the acoustic properties of the room are at fault. Mr. T. D. Jackson, "one ob de corner men," next gave a comic song,—"There never was such times." Comic songs "go down" with certain audiences, and the audience was evidently the most demonstrative in them. Both Mr. Jackson and Mr. Flockton, as singers, are nowhere, but as "Bones," and "Tambourine," they left nothing to be wished. Considered in that light they are both excellent; if a casting vote had to be given as to which was "de better ob de two," Mr. Jackson would get it. Mr. Flockton's original jokes and local allusions were better than any of his previous ones, and his original topical song a capital hit, aided as it was by the spirited music from the Pirates. While on the comic business, a word on Mr. W. Little's "Duck Dinah," otherwise Dinah Duck." It was the best comic song of the evening, from every point of view; next to Mr. Flockton, he is the life and soul of the company, and the "minstrels" would have a difficulty in in filling his place in case of absence.

Continuing with the senior members of the company, we arrive at Mr. R. J. Smith, who sang his "Gentle voices" well. He is certainly improving, but would do himself good by studying the difference between head and chest notes. The chorus in this song was done the best of any. The song par excellence of the evening was Mr. T. West's "Mollie Avourneen," which was very well rendered in every respect. It was encored, and why Mr. Johnson interposed at that moment to make an announcement respecting the repetition of the performance the next evening, many who would have been more delighted to here another song from Mr. West, were at a loss to understand. Mr. Harry Bell, who has a nice voice, sang fairly, "Good night, but not good-bye." The least have been left to the last. Master H. Audsley, and Master E. Stead each sang a song. One can understand the anxiety of the musical director in endeavouring to prevent shouting. His idea evidently has been to check this, but the result was anything but pleasing, and must have been positive pain to the boys themselves. A falsetto voice is defined as "a range of voice beyond the natural compass." Master Stead, as before mentioned, except in a few lower notes, sang falsetto throughout; but why Master Audsley should have been trained to imitate falsetto with a natural voice is a question I cannot imagine answered satisfactorily. In both cases the slightest motion only of mouth and lips was perceptible, and often the tones were certain nasal.

The "Awkard Squad" business was quite amusing—what was intended—the two youngsters alone standing their ground while the seven men ran off on the announcement of the approach of the enemy; 'twas very good But what a time the audience was kept waiting between the end of the drilling and the commencement of the farce.

The farce, "Fleece'em & Co" or "The Doctor outdone," written by Mr. Flockton is undoubtedly the best of his productions in that direction. We have not space to particularly notice each who took part in the piece. All did their parts well, and Mr. Flockton himself must have been highly gratified. The society owes much to his indefatigable exertions. The plot is as follows:—

Fleece'em (Mr. R. Smith) a doctor of the Ultra Quack type, has two assistants, Hookem and Slot (Messrs. Flockton and Little) whom he strongly suspects of treating patients in his absence, and pocketing the fees. With the assistance of a loafing—ne'er-do-well friend of his, Shirker, (Mr. T. West) he concocts a scheme to detect them. Shirker and Fleece'em well disguised are to call at the shop as patients, and afterwards compare notes of the doings of Messrs. Hookem and Slot. These two worthies, however, are apprised of the plot by a very fine sample of the æsthetic Ebony Belle—Eliza—(Mr. T. D. Jackson.) Of course the humour of the piece lay in the treatment of Fleece'em and Shirker, as patients, and Mr. Little may be complimented on the spirit and nonchalance with which he sustained his part.

The opening scene between Fleece'em and Shirker was very good and raised hopes of a standard which was hardly reached by the sequel. The latter part of the piece "hung" but was somewhat relieved by the closing song "All on account of Eliza."

The whole performance was repeated gratuitously on Tuesday evening, to a number of poor people who had received tickets from the committee. The room was again crowded.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—Coughs, Influenza.—The soothing properties of these medicaments render them well worthy of trial in all diseases of the respiratory organs. In common colds and influenza the Pills, taken internally, and the Ointment rubbed over the chest and throat, are exceedingly efficacious. When influenza is epidemic, this treatment is the easiest, safest, and surest. Holloway's Pills purify the blood, remove all obstacles to its free circulation through the lungs, relieve the over-gorged air tubes, and render respiration free, without reducing the strength, irritating the nerves, or depressing the spirits; such are the ready means of escaping from suffering when afflicted with colds, coughs, bronchitis, and other chest complaints, by which the health of so many is seriously and permanently injured in most countries.

AN EVENING AT A FREE CONCERT.

(Contributed.)

A free concert is a somewhat startling novelty in our neighbourhood, and certainly a new departure in the arrangements made by caterers for our public amusement and recreation. On this account I must confess that it was a strong feeling of curiosity which led me to inspect for myself the result of the invitation generously given by the members of our local Minstrel Party to the poorer members of the community to come and be entertained for nothing.

I managed to take up my post of observation before the doors were opened, to see the first rush. It was easy to see that amongst the first comers were a number of experienced youths familiarly termed 'gods,' who evidently intended to appropriate the best places; they were, however, promptly restrained and relegated to their proper position at the back. Following these, came a constant stream of faces of all ages and degrees of care, with various expressions of intelligence, but all bearing, for the moment, the same eager look of anticipated enjoyment. Before the time fixed for commencing the performance, the large room was crammed to its utmost capacity, and as each of the (some two hundred) persons present had received a personal invitation, each individual's credentials being carefully examined at the door, it will be readily understood that the Committee had undertaken no light task in gathering together their guests, and preventing imposition by ineligible intruders. It was most amusing to note the eager, inquisitive glances cast towards the mysterious curtain which covered the front of the stage, and to catch the speculative guesses at the nature of the coming performance; few of the audience seemed to possess a definite idea of the nature of a Minstrel performance; indeed, several old stagers were heard to declare that they were present at a public entertainment for the first time during their lives.

During the short period of waiting, one heard, now and again, odd expressions of recognition, and personal remarks albeit of a good-humoured character, bandied about from different quarters of the room; but when the curtain rose and the performance was fairly commenced, quietness and attention reigned throughout, unbroken except by the frequent rounds of applause and peals of appreciative laughter. It was curious to observe that the heartiest expressions of approval occurred at the same humorous or pathetic points in the programme as on the previous night, showing that, however differently constituted the two audiences might be as regards intelligence, culture, and experience, the same appeals produced the same results in both cases.

The free audience also showed themselves to be quite as capable of appreciating the points of the jokes &c. as their (presumably) more intelligent contemporaries of the previous night. The funniosities of 'George' and 'Bones' were productive of unqualified delight. The witty comparison of Woodlesford to a distressed and slovenly family, on account of its possessing but one Boot and Shoe, having holes in its Stockings, and the fact that there was always a chap ill (Chapel) in the place, and the explanation of the reason why Woodlesford is so much better provisioned than clothed, because it is provided with three licensed victuallers, an experienced Cook, (station-master) and a Jelly man; while it has only one Little tailor. Allusions like these to peculiar features of local interest, were greeted with shouts of approving laughter.

Intelligent appreciation was evident throughout, and at the conclusion of Mr Flockton's clever and amusing little sketch, the company dispersed in high good humour. They came to be entertained and amused, and were not disappointed.

There can be no doubt that the remembrance of the fun and enjoyment will in many instances help to lighten the load of hardship and privation which the long continued depression or bad trade has brought to the very poor amongst us. The thought of this will no doubt sufficiently repay our black brethren and the subscribers for the extra trouble and expense they were put to in giving the treat. If I were in the habit of taking a 'night-cap,' the toast to which I would drain my glass to-night would be "A jolly good health to my friends of the Minstrel party, more power to you, and may you all be together next year to repeat the successful experiment made to-night."

ROTHWELL GAS LIGHT BILL.

We understand that the Bill promoted by the Rothwell Gas Light Co., Limited, about which the minds of our readers have been largely exercised, was before the Examiner on Wednesday, and has passed his scrutiny, as having complied with Standing Orders for Private Bills. We understand it will come before the Parliamentary Committee for the first reading shme time in April.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT BOTTOMBOAT.

An accident occurred last Saturday afternoon which proved all but fatal at the Aberford Road Colliery, Bottomboat. About three o'clock that afternoon George Woobank, of Rothwell, was engaged in changing the buckets in the above pit. He appears to have finished his work, and leaving his hammer on the scaffold, was in the act of preparing to come out, when the rope somehow caught the hammer shaft and knocked it down the pit, falling on Woobank's shoulder with great force, smashing the bone fearfully. Happening just when he was about to get into the "loop" to come out, the knock disabled his arm, causing him to leave loose of the rope and to fall down the pit some six or seven yards, into about four feet of water. In his fall, the poor fellow had come in contact with some bearers, breaking six ribs, and otherwise bruising him. He was got out of the water as speedily as possible, and attended by Dr. Glaister, faint hopes being at first entertained of his recovery. We are glad to hear, however, that he is progressing most favourably towards recovery, and the medical attendant anticipates a good cure.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETING.

The Board met, as arranged, on Tuesday afternoon, at Rothwell Haigh Schools, and resolved that the schools be closed at once for a fortnight, on account of measles prevalent in the district. It was also decided to instruct Mr. Richardson, architect, to proceed with the preparation of plans and specifications necessary for adding an additional school-room to the buildings now standing, according to the original plan of the Board when the schools were first projected.

DR. GLAISTER'S LECTURE.

On Monday evening, Dr. Glaister (who has succeeded Dr. Heaps in his practice at Rothwell) delivered a lecture on "The life and writings of Tom Hood," in the Mechanics' Institute. Though the attendance was not large, it was satisfactory considering the usual size of the audience at lectures, and the attractions and engagements elsewhere. The Rev. G. Heberden occupied the chair, and briefly introduced the lecturer. Dr. Glaister proceeded in a pleasing and concise manner to give the story of the great author's life and character, pointing out his good points and his defects, and concluding with the characteristic manner of his death. Illustrations were given of his writings, the best delivered being the well known "Bridge of Sighs" in the pathetic style of which, the speaker was evidently at home. A hearty vote of thanks was presented to the lecturer at the close.

THE COMING ENTERTAINMENT.

Having had something to do with introducing the necessity for platform improvement at the Mechanics' Hall, we are specially and personally anxious that a good company should attend the Entertainment on Monday evening. If it were only to assist in defraying the expense of the very important improvement which has been made, and to support and thank those who are providing the programme, we would hope to see a "full house," but when, added to these moral arguments, we have also to promise a first-class entertainment, both pleasurable, profitable and humorous, we are sure our highest anticipations will be realised.

THE MARKETS.

Owing to the Post-office requiring four days' longer notice than we anticipated, our arrangement for the Wakefield corn market telegram cannot commence till next week, when we purpose devoting a corner to Leeds and Wakefield markets.

As a safe, permanent and warranted cure of Pimple Aofula, Scurvy, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases rd Sores of all kinds, we can with confidence recommend CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE. Sold by Chemists everywhere.

FOOTBALL.

Rothwell Mechanics' v. Oulton Juniors.—This match was played at Oulton on Saturday last. The Rothwell captain won the toss and chose to play up hill. The ball was quickly set in motion but the Rothwell backs soon returned it into the middle of the field, where it stayed for a considerabe time; the visitors now made a rush and secured a goal, but a dispute arising about it being a foul, play was stopped and words were exchanged, so the Rothwell youths decided to put on their 'clothes' and go home with the game standing at one goal to nil.

Hunslet v. Stourton Rovers.—A match was played between the above teams, last Saturday, on the ground of the latter, and resulted in a win for the Rovers by two goals to nil.

Altofts v. Hopetown Robin Hood.—On Saturday last the Altofts team journeyed to Hopetown to meet the above, who, having whipped up a very strong team and called themselves the Whitwood and Hope Town United, were very sanguine of victory. The team that beat (?) Altofts for the cup had been shamefully beaten the previous Saturday, so they said, when asked on what they based their hopes. But alas! they were doomed to disappointment. The fight raged in the vicinity of the home goal nearly the whole of the first half and two goals soon fell to the share of Altofts. On changing ends the Hopetowners seemed bent on roughing it, but in this they had got their match, as several of them were soon standing on their heads, while others found themselves the centre of three. Owing to the unevenness of the ground the visitors did not score so largely as they would had it been level, it was simply impossible to kick with judgment, although several shots were made which would probably have gone through had Hope Town not changed their custodian. It is useless to single out any players in a game of this kind as being worthy of notice. The game ultimately ended in favour of Altofts by 2 goals to nil. It is rather significant that the Captain of Robin Hood took 10 minutes to yeild to the goals, and both captain and umpire seemed to show a great ignorance of the rules.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

It seems that my remarks about the recent Sunday School prize distribution at Woodlesford has given grave offence in certain quarters, but why this should be so I cannot imagine, unless it is that truth is not always palatable. The Rev. A. J. Irvin styles my remarks as untrue but fails to show wherein my untruthfulness lies. I simply stated what I knew to be correct, namely, that "there were only a few people present" and the vicar himself admits that the attendance was not so good as he could have wished; and as for the mildness of the proceedings, I certainly fail to see that such a description was misplaced.

With regard to hearsay reports, I should like to know how much of the news which appears in any of the morning papers is supplied by people who are actually present at the occurences of which they write; I am aware that it is not advisable to believe all that one hears but I can usually place confidence in those to whom I am indebted for hearsay reports. I am sorry that Mr. Irvin should misunderstand my meaning in reference to this matter, I had hoped that he would not have been led away by certain narrow minded people and become prejudiced against me, because my object in drawing attention to this matter was that of rousing the people to a due appreciation of the worth of the Sunday School, and the dissenters in the village would do well to stir up a little as the number of their Sunday scholars is only small and ought certainly to be at least double what it is. I am very much pleased to hear that the number of Church Sunday scholars is rapidly increasing and hope that the increase may be a permanent one.

Mr. Walter Lockwood states that ten pounds are subscribed annually by Woodlesford church people for the rent of the Sunday school and cites this as an instance of the interest taken in the school, but on referring to the balance sheet, what do we find? Instead of £10, the amount of the subscription is £7, which is given by four persons, Mr. Bentley with his accustomed generosity heading the list with £5, the remaining £2 being I presume paid out of the weekly offertory. This fact I think amply justifies my charge of want of interest and completely upsets Mr. Lockwood's attempted defence, and further comment is needless when only four people can be found to subscribe directly to the Sunday school rent, which as I have said before is most extortionate.

Before leaving the subject of the church expenses I have pleasure in stating that I have received a communication from a wealthy and influential parishioner, stating that he entirely agrees with me on the subject of the expenses and considers them "greatly in excess of what they should be, taking into consideration the fact that with few exceptions the congregation is composed of the working class." In the absence of the writer's permission to do so, I of course refrain from making his name public, but thank him most heartily for his warm approval of my attempt at economical reform.

There is a rumour afloat that Mr. Bentley and family are shortly about to take their departure from Woodlesford and settle down in a distant county, but I sincerely trust that the report may be incorrect as everyone knows and appreciates the liberal help which is at all times extended to the poor and needy in the village by the family at Esbald House, whose departure from amongst us will be hailed with genuine regret and sorrow.

The tragic ending of the young fellow whose body was taken out of the canal last Saturday affords ground for serious thought on the question whether we are really a christian people or not. "Oh! it was pitiful" to think of a human being, being committed to his last resting place in so careless, unconcerned a manner, friendless, uncared for and alone, with no loving hand to press the icy brow or place a flower on the grave, and no eye to shed a tear of sympathy or sorrow. Who knows, but the God into whose presence the poor fellow rashly hurried his immortal soul, what trouble and care may have been weighing upon him. No doubt the act of self destruction is contrary to the christian law, but may there not have been extenuating circumstances in the case? Let us not judge too harshly, for which of us can say that he or she may not one day do likewise, but perhaps being known and respectable(?), we may have the empty honor of a costly funeral.

"Tis a far cry to Loch Awe" and from the funeral of a poor neglected suicide to a minstrel concert is a good step, but such is the exigency of fate that I am compelled to take the step or else disappoint some scores of anxious readers.

I have once more to congratulate the Choral Society on the possession of so much talent and ability within its ranks, and although there were numerous weak points in the performance of last Monday evening, the general organisation and execution of the venture were highly creditable, and if in my notice I pay more attention to defects than excellencies, it is because I am desirous of pointing out where improvement may be effected in future, and thus tend to the permanent benefit of the Society and its members. I liked the opening chorus very much, but thought the time somewhat slow and the vocalisation lacking a little in emphasis, and this fault was visible in some other numbers in the programme. The trebles seemed to me rather afraid of tackling their work, and they neglected to make proper use of their passing voices

I must call the attention of Mr. W. H. Little to the fact that although his song "took" very well yet his pronunciation was far from pleasing to refined ears, and I am certain that he can make the necessary improvement in this respect if he feels so disposed. I also noticed a slight deflection in the voice at the end of some of the lines in Mr. Little's song which I think ought to be avoided, but I must say that for clearness of enunciation, that gentleman is far in advance of most of his colleagues. The harmonised choruses as usual were well executed and the delicious refrains formed one of the most enjoyable features of the concert. The songs were for the most part executed in an efficient manner, Mr. T. West's "Mollie Avourneen" being perhaps the pick of the lot, and Mr. Harry Bell also acquitted himself satisfactorily. The comic songs were good, but one had a little difficulty in making out Mr. T. Jackson's words occasionally, and he might advantageously cultivate the art of elocution. Mr. Flockton's topical song was worthy of its author and of the music to which it was applied. The conversations and jokes were very amusing and containing a very large proportion of local matter, were consequently heartily relished by the audience. The military drill was a good idea but might perhaps have been better carried but out, it drew forth roars of laughter nevertheless.

[The critique on the farce we are compelled to omit, for time and space.—Ed.]

I am told that the free concert on Tuesday night was an immense success, the room being crammed by a highly appreciative and delighted audience. My informant states that it was worth anyone's while spending an hour in watching the faces of the crowd. This is only what I prophesied when proposing the venture, and that it has succeeded must be admitted by everyone.

THE LATE BURGLARY AT WOODLESFORD STATION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

Few people in Woodlesford, I imagine, are aware of the bravery displayed by P. C. Clark in this case. A burglar enters a window after breaking it, which he did at the time an express train was passing. P. C. Clark, on going his usual rounds, notices the broken window, lifts up the blind with his stick, peers in, and sees the burglar, who has taken off his boots, ransacking the place. Something like the following takes place in the way of conversation:—

Burglar.—Who's theear?

P. C. C.—It's me.

Burglar—Who are you?

P. C. C.—I'll let you see when I get in, (begins to get in.)

Burglar.—(Seeing him, and seizing a most formidable iron instrument picked up by him before entering) I'll fell you with this if you come any further.

P. C. C.—I shall come in what the deuce you do (and goes in.)

Burglar.—(Equally as strong as P. C. C., is cowed by his cool determination.) Well! let me be, and I'll be quiet.

After being "braceleted," he is allowed to put on his boots, and then is marched off to Wakefield.

Mr. Editor, P. C. Clarke might have been laid dead in a moment after he put his head in at the window. Not one man in twenty would have done it. He is deserving the thanks of every householder in Woodlesford, and a more substantial recognition of his services in the shape of a testimonial ought to come from them. The authorities will surely be alive to this brave act, and reward him with well deserved promotion. I enclose my card and would be glad to subscribe towards a testimonial for this plucky officer.

Yours truly,

1st Feb., 1882 AN INHABITANT.

Epps's Cocoa.—Grateful and Comforting.—"By thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps, has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Make simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in Packets labelled—"James Epps & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence for afternoon use.

LIBERALS & CONSERVATIVES UNITED!—This may sound strange, but it is nevertheless true, that Liberals and Conservatives alike are unanimous in declaring that "BUDDEN'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND AND COLTSFOOT" is the best remedy for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and, in fact, any Affections of the Chest and Lungs. One dose relieves, one bottle cures. Ask for "BUDDEN'S BALSAM," and take nothing else.—Bottles 1s. 1½d. 2s. 9d. Agent for Rothwell, A. Marshall, Stationer and Patent Medicine Dealer.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoas? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

KAY'S LINSEED COMPOUND Asthma and Bronchitis immediately relieve by it Sold by Chemists.

Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills are now acknowledged by our best physicians to be the only sure and safe remedy for all diseases arising from impure blood, such as scrofula and scrofulous humours. Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s. 9d.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and starchy compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa

One Experience from Many. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s 9d.

ROTHWELL MECHANICS' CONCERT.

By the kind exertions of Mr. W. Wright, Mr. Harms, and other friends, a most enjoyable entertainment was given on Monday evening, for the defrayal of expenses incurred by the enlargement and fitting up of the platform or stage in the Large Hall of the Mechanics' Institute.

All who have had anything to do with the presentation of a concert or entertainment at all above the very smallest dimensions, have experienced the cost and labour incurred by increasing the size of the platform, and will, we are sure, gladly hail the completion of an improvement which will give a platform large enough for 100 performers, or as a stage fitted with ante-rooms at either side, elegantly draped with crimson curtains, and altogether well suited for the kind of entertainment given on the evening in question.

We were pleased to observe a goodly audience, but certainly think a larger number of reserved seats would have been taken if a little more spirit had been manifested in selling the tickets. However, there were not many seats to spare, either back or front, and considering the multiplicity of entertainments just past and in store, we may congratulate the promoters on having a "good house." One point was very noticeable, that the objectionable noises and want of courteous attention, sometimes complained of in the Hall, were conspicuous by their absence, and people could sit and listen to the fare provided with comfort and pleasure.

The first portion of the entertainment consisted of a concert, in which several lady and gentlemen amateurs kindly gave their services, the songs being interspersed with selections by the Church Choir Glee Party.

Precisely at half-past seven the Glee Party, numbering ten voices, appeared on the stage, and opened the programme with "Come Bounteous May." Mrs. Harms next gave "The Bailiff's daughter," the first portion going well, but unfortunately the length of the song rather took away from the general effect of the effort.

Mr. C. Teale's easy style of singing "The Bo's'n" gave an earnest of good things to come, but as his other song was a comic, there was some difficulty in judging, as "He was a careful man" was not done in so successful a manner as we have seen it. We shall look out for Mr Teale next time, and expect something good. In the duett "The Gipsy Countess," Mr Harms (who is always at home in the Hall) had a worthy partner in Mrs. Audsley, whose mellow, expressive voice was admirably suited to the part chosen, while both singers threw into the story suitable dramatic action; an encore was asked but declined with a bow, owing, it was supposed to the danger of the concert extending beyond the hour specified.

In Miss Sayner, as in Mrs. Audsley, the promoters of the concert were fortunate in securing a real acquisition, and while neither ladies have given the Rothwell public the pleasure of hearing them before, we must assure them that we shall be pleased to see them on a future occasion. "Oh, give to me those early flowers" is an old song, but new to most of us, and is a very pretty composition. Miss Sayner evidently suffered severely from nervousness, but possesses a voice of sweetness and some power. In "Barney O'Hea" the young lady had regained her presence of mind, and went through this her second song successfully.

The choral Party next rendered "The happiest land," in which Mr. Day and Mr. Tom Bennett took solos. Later on they gave another glee "Swiftly from the mountain's brow." All these glees, while correctly sung, and generally in good tune and time, lack the harmonious blending and varied expression which should be cultivated above all things by glee singers; while very much obliged for the kindly help rendered, we would urge all our glee parties to watch these two points, particularly—suitable expression, (especially in the piano parts,) and an effort to blend in one pleasing harmony, no one voice or part rising unduly above the other. The manner in which Mrs. Harms and Mr. Longbottom acquitted themselves in "Love and pride" was splendid; the humourous action thrown into the duett by both performers inducing a perfect roar of applause, at the close of which, instead of a repeat was answered by a bow. Not yet content, the audience kept up the demand for more, determined if possible, to force the duettists again to the front, and when they appeared and demurely bowed a second time the fun was immense. Mrs Audsley followed and again delighted the audience with "I cannot mind my wheel, mother." Mrs. Audsley's voice is such as one might sit and listen to for a long time with pleasure.

Mr. Harms' topical song is the only item we have not yet noticed, and we publish below some of the tit bits promised in the "good time to come." As may be imagined the audience did not sit over seriously while the local hits came thick and fast, and Mr. Harms must be complimented on his rhyming effort.

Now a very burning question in this village town of ours,
Is a local company's scheme which seeks for Parliamentary powers;
But two bold Rothwell bill stickers, cried with hearty voice and will,
It's all a gross monopoly, they shan't stick to their Bill!
For we'll start a rival company—Oh! no! we're not in fun,
For we've got a patent out, my boys, to bottle off the sun;
And to shew 'em how to do it we'll supply you at the sum
Of just a "bob a thousand" in 'the good time to come.'
To the golden age it strikes me we are drawing very near,
And the rumours now which fly about ought every heart to cheer,
If you doubt me, read the Rothwell Times which often seems to say
That in less than no time we shall have the New Railway.
There'll be hourly trains for those who stay in Leeds till after dark,
And they'll book you from the Padfoot Steps right into Roundhay Park;
You'll have scores of mills and factories, with every busy hum,
And you'll all be made directors in "the good time to come."
The "whisperings" of Ajax have so many outs and ins,
And they're very much too personal, so say the "Rothwell Twins;"
There's not much honey in his flowers of speech, said Bumble Bee,
So we'll stir him up and draw him out with X and 'Timothy.'
But this caustic correspondent only heard it with a laugh
And whispered most complacently "Old birds don't feed on chaff,"
But he made this promise to the twins with nose unto his thumb
That he'd send them both his photo in the "Good time to come."
To conclude this vocal ditty I will briefly try to sum
Up these benefits you'll all enjoy when the good time has come.
The Gas Bill will be modified to satisfy the town;
Your local agitators' faces ne'er shall wear a frown;
Your railway, mills, and factories shall be a grand success;
And all those ills shall be removed which tend to cause distress;
Mr Ajax will be courteous, for we do not wish him dumb,
And your sewerage works be finished in the good time to come.

The Rev. G. Heberden, president of the Institute, took the opportunity at the close of the first part, to say on behalf of the Committee and of those present, how greatly obliged they were to Mr. W. Wright, Mr. Harms and others, for their kindness in providing this entertainment for the defrayal of the expense incurred by the enlargement of the platform, and now desired to present the very hearty thanks of those present.

After a few minutes interval, the curtain rose, disclosing "Mrs. Green's comfortable parlour" furnished with couch, table, pictures and other articles, and presenting a most snug and cheery appearance. The entrance of Mrs. Green (a charming widow) becomingly dressed, and adorned with "mob cap" of the latest fashion, was the signal for general congratulation, and from beginning to end the little farce proceeded most swimmingly. After the buxom little body had cautioned Joe, the factotum of her little greengrocery, not to take any bad money, and only to call her if particularly wanted, she sits down in her snug little parlour behind the shop and proceeds to make up her books. In this occupation she is interrupted by the entrance of Mr. Rattleton, (a swell who lodges with her) who, in a perfect torrent of words assures of his irrepressible adoration of herself, and notwithstanding her womanly "buts" continues to unfold to her his "large" means and prospective "superannuation," and promises to call in half an hour for her answer. No sooner is he gone than Mr. Rapps, the policeman, drops in to ask if Mrs. Green has missed any of "them taters out of that left hand bin, round the corner," and gradually unfolds to her "the secret in his prefessional brest," and is in the act of kissing her "adorable" hand when Joe unluckily looks in, to say that Mr. Bung (the parish Beadle) wishes particularly to see Mrs. Green, "as parochial affairs cannot go on no longer if he didn't."

Rapps hurriedly secretes himself under the sofa, solaced with the bottle of spirits, and awaits events.

In the meantime, Rattleton again enters, intending to complete his love speech and get Mr. Green's answer, but finding the Beadle in the shop, delays his intended suit.

Meanwhile Joe (in the shop) is using his physical power and his lungs to prevent Bung from entering the sanctum of his "missus," but eventually the Beadle bursts through and half tipsily, sets forth his wretchedness, and that only Mrs. Green's acceptance of himself, and his hat, staff, fire engine &c., can cure him; an offer which she scornfully declines, and he promises something like drowning himself at the pump.

On the exit of Bung, Rapps emerges from his secrecy and completes his love suit, "prefessionally" advising Mrs. Green as regards Bung and Rattleton, and in the ecstacy of his affection embraces Mrs. Green asking her "to name the blessed day when he may take her into custody." Joe however suddenly enters, carrot-haired, half-washed, white jacket and apron smeared with "tater" dust, and beseeching her not to do so, falls on his knees "look on me mum, I love you mum." Poor Joe, however, although he "knows more about the business than all the Bungs and Rapps in the parish" is scorned out of the room, declaring that "there's no taters in the washing tub back'ards, I'll go and pump it full; when you want me to serve a customer, you'll have to pull out the plug and let the water off, and then you'll diskiver me amongst the settlins at the bottom."

Mrs. Green being horrified at Joe's threat urges Mr. Rapps, to look after him and see he does himself no harm, which, after a loving embrace, he goes forth to do "professionally."

Rattleton, who had inadvertently dropped a letter, is charged with deserting his wife and child; in the midst of his confusion, Bung re-enters, half-tipsy and half-drowned, in order to present his "beadle's hat" to Mrs. Green as a souvenir of his love. (Rattleton hiding himself). Joe, meanwhile, is heard without "I will drown myself," but Rapps drags him into the room, Joe declaring "he has as much right to make away with himself for disappointed love of missus as Mr. Bung has," and a struggle takes place between the two disappointed suitors Joe and Bung, and Mrs. Green puts herself under the protection of "dear William" Rapps.

On Rattleton again entering in the midst of the fracas, a general explanation is arrived at, the letter referring to his brother's wife and child; and Mrs. Green thanks her country for organising so valuable an institution as the police force for the benefit of lone and unprotected females, "and if they'd only take my advice, they'd lose not a moment, but one and all at once put themselves under the protection of the police :" 'that is,' joined in Rapps "particularly all as find themselves missusses of light spring carts, with snug little businesses attached—like my (to MRS GREEN) own adorable Sarah! which is Mrs. Rapps as is to be, as soon as the session is—I mean, as soon as the banns has been published reg'lar, as the Act directs, as in duty bound."

We can hardly single out one of the gentlemen for special notice, each part being well represented and everything passing off as sweetly as a "marriage bell." Mr. W Wright's make up as Mrs. Green was perfect; representing just such a buxom charming young widow as would be likely to attract many suitors, and while the speaking was done without hesitation, the facial expressions were most natural and effective. Mr. Harms as Rapps the policeman, was, as might be anticipated all there. Mr. Longbottom impersonated the parochial beadle exactly, even to the plump calves in white stockings. Mr. Rattleton, in Mr. George Armitage, of Robin Hood, as a "tip top swell" carried out his character well, his principal point being to roll out with youthful impassioned eloquence the adoration he felt for charming Mrs Green. Mr. Arthur Batty, as Joe, the shop boy, was well up in his work, clearly enunciating his words as well as acting his part (no easy one).

The receipts, we doubt not, will be good, and with the Minstrel Entertainment advertised this week, will we trust quite clear off the expenses incurred in making the great improvement in the large hall of the Institute.

EAST & WEST YORKSHIRE UNION RAILWAY.

A meeting of the subscribers in this district for the furtherance of the above railway was held on Wednesday evening, there being a very large attendance.

Mr. W. Hargreaves occupied the chair, and Mr. White, engineer, was present. The object of the meeting was to pass a resolution authorising the payment of a certain sum to the solicitors, of money collected here, and deposited in the bank, towards defraying the preliminary expenses.

Mr. White, by desire, made a statement that the plans, etc., had passed the standing orders for Private Bills, and that now the proposed scheme would come before the House on its merits. After referring to the fact of the docks now in course of construction at Hull, being sufficiently spacious to admit the largest ocean-going steamers, and so opening out a large export trade for coal and other traffic from this district, Mr. White congratulated those present on the fact that they had got support all along the route from all the colliery owners, and large land owners, Mr. Calverley alone excepted. The towns of Hull, Leeds, Wakefield, Bradford, Batley, Dewsbury, Selby, and other places were in favour of the line, and altogether the promoters were in a better position than they had anticipated, and Mr. Rees, the Parliamentary agent, saw every prospect of success. The Bill is endorsed by Mr. Barran and Mr. Jackson, M.P.'s for Leeds, and by Sir J. Ramsden and Sir A. Fairbairn, M.P.'s for the East-West Riding. He believed the solicitors were busy getting up evidence, and it was probable the first reading might come during March.

In reply to enquiries, it was stated that severalthousands had been paid or guaranteed already, which would no doubt be increased.

Mr. Turner, junr., in reply to a question, said that the amount promised in Rothwell and District, was £825, £613 of which had been paid and was now in the bank, besides £200 which, it was stated, would be paid in on Friday, leaving about £10 of the whole not yet received.

After some further conversation as to the amount which should be handed over, Mr. Turner proposed that £500 be paid over on condition that the £200 above mentioned, and the £1700 due from the other part of the route be also paid; seconded by Mr. J. Armitage. An amendment was moved by Mr. S. Batty, seconded by Mr. C. Ward, That £500 be paid over to the solicitors for the scheme. It was pointed out that those who had promised the various amounts had done so without any condition, towards paying preliminary expenses for passing the standing orders, and the Bill having now got beyond that stage, the money was fairly due On being put, there voted 25 for the amendment and 20 for the resolution, the amendment was therefore carried.

It was also resolved that the petitions be prepared, and taken for signature throughout the district, and the following gentlemen volunteered to obtain signatures;—Messrs. C. Ward, Jos. Stead, W. Andrews, A. Drew, R. Rodley and R. Ellis, for Rothwell; Mr. E. Keightley, for Carlton; Mr. J. Armitage, for Robin Hood; Mr. Hartley, for Ouzlewell Green; and probably Mr. Moorhouse, for Lofthouse.

The meeting then closed.

WOODLESFORD SCHOOL BOARD.

The ordinary monthly meeting of the Board was held on Monday last, the members present being the Rev. A. J. Irvin, and Messrs. Bentley and Nowell; in the absence of the chairman, (Mr. Jackson) Mr. Bentley presided, the minutes of the previous meeting being read and signed in the usual way.

It was resolved to substitute books, according to a sample submitted, for cards, as prizes in the Infants' department.

A letter was read from Messrs. Mills and Abson, of Wakefield, asking to be allowed the use of the schools for the purpose of giving an entertainment on the Holy Land, by means of disolving views. The Board agreed to let the girls' school-room for this purpose, on payment in advance of 5s. for one evening.

An application by the Rev. A. J. Irvin, for the use of the Infants' school-room, as additional Sunday school accomodation, was deferred to the next meeting.

The report of H. M. Inspector on the recent examination of the schools was presented. In reference to the Boys' school the report states that "The boys are in good order, and the school is improving," and goes on to point out in the usual manner, the degree of proficiency or otherwise, of the various standards in each subject; the writing being regarded as creditable, reading requiring attention, also arithmetic which, with the exception of the second standard, was praiseworthy The class subjects grammar and geography were satisfactory. Complaint was made about the small attendance.

Turning to the girls' school it is stated that "This school is in very good order, and the results of the examination are altogether satisfactory," the reading and writing being good, and spelling generally so, the arithmetic requiring attention; it is further stated that "The girls answerel well in grammar, and gave evidence of sound teaching in this subject, the needlework deserves high praise."

The report on the infants' school is not of a satisfactory nature in some respects, but the needlework and order were favourably mentioned.

Miss Lockwood, P.T. in the infants' school, has passed her second year's examination, and Miss Flockton, candidate in the girls' school has also passed; the candidate in the boys' school, Harry H. Longbottom, has failed for the second time. Miss Castle has received her parchment certificate, which was submitted to the inspection of the Board

A letter was read from Miss Abbey with reference to the report on her school, which she attributed to insufficient teaching staff, and applied for another teacher. The Board accordingly resolved to appoint Miss Edith Nowell as monitor at a salary of £5 per annum. Miss Flockton was also appointed pupil teacher in the girls school at a salary of £12 10s for the first year.

The percentage of passes in each school was as follows.

Boys	55 presented	40·2 passes	74 per cent.
Girls	50	„	41	„ 82 „
Infants 13	„	6.1	„ 46	„

The fifth standard in the girls school passed cent per cent.

The clerk reported that he had obtained a list from the teachers of the names of parents owing school fees, upon the receipt of which he had issued notices that proceedings would be taken in the County Court against those who had not paid off their respective arrears on the 1st inst. Some few had paid part of the money and promised to pay the remainder by regular instalments; instructions were given to proceed at once against all who had neglected the warning previously given.

Cheques were drawn for salaries and accounts due amounting to £46 0s. 0d. The following amounts had been received during the past month. School fees £7 5s. 9d., grant for schools £125 15s. 2d., evening school grant £6 18s. 0d.

ROTHWELL MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—We are pleased to learn that the Entertainment given at Woodlesford last week, is kindly offered by the Minstrels for the advantage of the Platform Committee of the Mechanics' Institute here, as announced in our advertisement columns. As the talented company will have every advantage with our new and handsome stage and ante-rooms, and have already gained considerable popularity, there is certainly a pleasurable evening in store for all who avail themselves of the opportunity.

ROTHWELL DEBATING SOCIETY.

On Wednesday evening, a debate was opened by Mr B Batty, on "Local Option," in which he ably set forth the usual arguments in its favor, particularly as regards the Temperance question, with which the title 'Local Option' is now almost synonymous. There being no leader on the negative side, Mr W Batty, who had intended supporting the introducer, made a few remarks on arguments which might be adduced against. Mr J Hirst and others supported the negative, while Mr James Armitage and others maintained Mr B Batty's opinion. On a vote being taken, 6 voted for "Local Option," and 5 against, the remaining members being neutral.

BOONING DAY AT OULTON.

This day, Friday, we noticed with much pleasure in our district the old custom of booning to new farmers, so prevalent in the North and East Ridings of Yorkshire, and Lincolnshire. The farmers to-day are giving Mr Arthur Flint (who has taken the farm occupied for so many years by Mr Chadwick) a day's ploughing, and a very nice sight it is to see no less than 21 pairs of horses turn out on a small farm, both men and horses evidently striving to do their best both in quantity and quality. Amongst the number we noticed several teams from our own village, viz., Mr Joseph Smith, Manor House; Mr John Clayton; Messrs Wright, Haigh Side; Mr Joseph Webster, Rothwell Haigh; Mr W Sissons, Preston Hall and Woodlesford.; (2 pairs) Mr Grosvenor, Oulton; Mr. John Wiley, Royds Green; Mr John Sanderson, Royds Hall; Mr George Dixon, Mr John Nichols, Swillington; Mr Barber, Templethorp; Messrs Oldroyd Bros, Newsam Green; Mr Thomas Oliver, Carlton; Mr Lacy, Methley Bridge; (2 pairs) Mr Smithwaite, Park Farm, Methley; Mr Denison, Swithen's Farm, Rothwell; Mr Lunn, Ouzlewell Green; and others.

We can only hope that with a return of good seasons, Mr Flint and his neighbours may be more successful than farmers have been of late years, and also that this good and kindly feeling may continue amongst our agriculturists.

DR. BARDSLEY'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS are now acknowledged by our best physicians to be the only sure and safe remedy for all diseases arising from impure blood, such as scrofula and scrofulous humours. Sold by all Chemists in Boxesat 13½d. and 2s. 9d.

LEEDS ASSIZES.

THE SHEFFIELD MURDER.—Kate Dover, charged with poisoning Mr. Skinner of Sheffield, with whom she lived as housekeeper, was on Tuesday found guilty of 'Manslaughter,' a verdict which has been received with surprise by everybody. She was sentenced on Wednesday by Mr. Justice Cave to Penal servitude for life.

STUDD v. BENTLEY.—In the Civil Court, before Mr. Justice Mathew, this case was tried by a special jury. Mr. Gainsford Bruce appeared for the Plaintiff; Mr Waddy for the Defendants, Messrs. H. Bentley & Co., brewers, Woodlesford. The plaintiff entered into a three years' engagement to serve the defendants as their agent in arranging for all the business connected with the changes of occupancies in connection with public-houses belonging to them. He served them for fifteen months, and was then dismissed without notice. He therefore claimed damages. For the defence, it was pointed out that, after having been previously reproved for similar conduct, the plaintiff acted as agent in arranging matters for customers of the firm, and received from them moneys which he did not hand over, to the defendants.—His Lordship said that by that course of conduct the plaintiff had served two masters. This was grossly unjustifiable, and sufficient to warrant his sudden dismissal.—Verdict for the Defendants was agreed to.

WAKEFIELD BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

At the fortnightly meeting of the above Board, held on Wednesday, the appointment of Medical Officer for Lofthouse-with-Carlton and Thorp was considered, vacant by the resignation of Mr. Heaps, of Rothwell; the salary is £15 for Lofthouse and £2 for Thorp. Two applications had been received—one from Mr. D. MacArthur, of Lofthouse Gate, and the other from Mr. John Glaister, of Rothwell, successor to Mr. Heaps, who stated that he had opened a surgery at Lofthouse.

On the voting the numbers were—for Mr. MacArthur—Messrs. Shirt, Race, Lunn, Scarth, Naylor, Archer, Ives, Cookson, Durham, Howden, Young, Challenger, Leake, Stones, Moorhouse, and Conner—16. For Mr. Glaister—Messrs. Sharpley, Seal, Ingham, and Stocks—4.

SERVICE OF SONG AT CARLTON.

The Wesleyan Chapel at Carlton was well filled on Monday last, to hear the Sacred Service of Song, 'The desire of all Nations,' given by the Wesleyan choir and selected voices from the Sunday School at Rothwell. Encouraged by the large and appreciative audience, the singers acquitted themselves well and richly deserved the hearty thanks given to them at the close. Mr. C. Ward conducted, and Mr Jos. Naylor accompanied on the Harmonium. Mr. J. R. Seanor reading and presiding. All retired home happy at the thought of contributing £2 by a collection towards a New Wesleyan Sunday School for Carlton.

THE MINSTRELS AT CARLTON.—Last Tuesday evening, the Minstrel section of the Woodlesford Choral Society, fulfilled an engagement for the benefit of Carlton Reading Room, by repeating their late entertainment at Woodlesford. The affair came off in the Board School-room, which was well filled and the programme was well executed from beginning to end. There will, no doubt, be a nice balance netted for the funds of the Reading Room.

FOOTBALL.

ROTHWELL v. HUNSLET WESLEYANS.—The return match between these clubs was played at Hunslet last Saturday, when the Rothwell team again beat the Wesleyans by two goals to love. Shortly after three o'clock the players took their places in the field, the Rothwell captain chose to defend the low end goal, which was quickly invaded by the Hunslet forwards, and for a short time they seemed to have the best of the play, the Rothwell team not playing together at all, but after about 20 minutes defending the forwards broke away, and the whole team after this played in splendid style, Hartley and Chadwick being especially prominent, while Swift, Ward and Dobson showed themselves to be well 'on the job.' Up to half-time no goal was obtained, although several good shots were made. After a short rest, play was again resumed, and the battle was soon raging in the Wesleyan's territory, a foul in the goal mouth by one of the home backs, gave a free kick to the visitors, a fierce scrimmage ensued, the ball ultimately was kicked out about 12 yards, but Ward was on the alert, and a good shy secured the first goal, which the Wesleyans, however, tried to dispute, but at last gave in. The leather was once again started from the centre of the field, and shortly after, the second goal was secured; after this, nothing more was scored, although the home team frequently spurted. The following did good service for Hunslet:—Kelly, Carrs, Gouldthorpe, and—the umpire.

ROTHWELL BOARD SCHOOL v. STOURTON.—This match was played at Stourton last Saturday, and resulted in a tie, each side scoring one goal.

MR. WILLIAM WRIGHT.—We learn with pleasure that Mr. William Wright who passed his final examination with honours in November last, was on the 1st instant, admitted before the Master of the Rolls to be a solicitor of the Supreme Court. Mr. Wright served his articles with Mr. Joseph Walker of Leeds. We are sure many will join with us in presenting our hearty congratulations to Mr. Wright, in attaining this honorable distinction, and we gladly add his name to the list of young men who have made the village of their birth proud of their association with it.

MR. JAMES HARGREAVES.—We are sure every one will be pleased to know that Mr. Hargreaves, who sustained serious injuries by being thrown from his horse on Saturday week, is now gradually improving, but will, however, require some weeks rest and change before he can be expected to occupy his accustomed post. We only express the desire of all who know Mr. James, that he may as soon as possible be restored to complete health and soundness.

CAUTION.—We observe by the bills posted up and down the neighbourhood, that the public are cautioned against exposure to any infectious disease, and it is hoped that persons who are unhappily visited with any epidemic will endeavour, as far as possible, to prevent its spread, by isolating the persons so suffering.

THE WINDERMERE HYDROPATHIC COMPANY LIMITED has just issued their Annual Report. The establishment was opened in March last, and out of the profits on the nine months' working the Directors propose a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.

CANON FARRAR'S "ST PAUL."—The First Part of the Illustrated Serial Edition of CANON FARRAR'S "LIFE AND WORK OF ST. PAUL" has just been issued by Messrs. Cassell, Petter, Galpin & Co., and the appropriate engravings with which it is illustrated, its large type and fine paper, will commend it to all. The illustrations are not only pleasing as pictures, but valuable as authentic representations of actual places and scenes, Mr. G. L. Seymour having been specially commissioned by the Publishers to visit the East, to make original sketches for the work. The countless readers of Canon Farrar's 'Life of Christ' will doubtless hail with no small satisfaction the opportunity now afforded to them of securing this great work, whilst every family will be glad to obtain it for their book-shelf.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoa? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

CORRESPONDENCE.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

MY criticism of Mr. Flockton's latest dramatic sketch was unfortunately crowded out last week by press of matter, and as the other report which appeared in these columns also omitted to give more than a very brief notice, my readers will perhaps pardon me if I return to the subject in this letter.

In this year's venture Mr. Flockton has made a new departure in the general outline of the plot, his previous productions having had a certain air of similarity about them, and I must unhesitatingly accord my conviction that the change is for the better so far as the enjoyment of the great majority of country audiences is concerned.

The absence of lady performers in this piece was followed by the absence of a considerable portion of the air of refinement which has been previously noticable in these annual sketches, but any deficiency in this respect was fully atoned for by the amount of "go" which characterised the whole performance. It was from first to last well conceived and equally well carried out, each gentleman appearing to enter into the spirit of the author's idea and being determined to make the best of a good opportunity. It is unnecessary for me to give an outline of the plot, as this has already been done, I will therefore turn my attention to the way in which the performers acquitted themselves.

To take the names as they appear on the programme, the part of Dr. Fleecem first claims attention; Mr. R. J. Smith's interpretation was upon the whole a good one, but it struck me that his "get up" or rather absence of "get up" for the character was somewhat too mild for an Ethiopian sketch: I have noticed before that Mr. Smith does not go in for much assistance in the way of dress for the characters which he represents, but apparently trusts more to his own ability as an actor, than to the aid of costume, for a successful result. That the plan answers in his case I must admit, still I dare say a little more dressing would be to the taste of the back seats and the acting would not be affected by it. Fleecem's loafing companion was well pourtrayed by Mr. T. West who appears to possess considerable talent and aptitude for the representation of this type of character and as usual he secured the warm approval of the audience who were especially delighted at the result of the phrenological examination and the consequent running in of Shirker by the policeman, ably represented by Mr. J. Craven. Fleecem's two assistants, Hookem and Slo', carried much amusement by their much solemnity when personating the head of the establishment to the disguised "patients" and their examination of the luckless ones, was a treat. Mr. Flockton as was to be expected was well up in his part and went through the examination with due gravity interspersed with suitable bye-play behind the victims and Mr. Little was intensely diverting. Let me however here point out to this gentleman that he is inclined to become too broad in his farcical delineations, a tendency which he would do well to check as he is quite capable of giving pleasure and amusement to a large audience, without introducing anything which may grate against the feelings of a single member of it.

Prior to the entertainment, I expressed some anxiety as to the efforts of Mr. T. Jackson as an impersonator of female character, his make up was capital and in no way overdone, and although the character was of course a complete burlesque Mr. Jackson was far more successful in it than I expected, and I congratulate him on this fact.

The official report of the entertainment has given rise to a considerable amount of comment and many conjectures have been made as to the authorship as it wasknown that Mr. Editor was not present in propria personae. Public opinion in the main seems to point in one direction and I should not be surprised if the conjecture should prove correct I am endeavouring to get at something reliable on the subject before making any very strong remarks about it, but if it should turn out as I and many others opine "That party's lot wont be a happy one." I will say this that I have never seen a more biassed and ill-written report.

THE early roosters in Rothwell were rudely disturbed in their first sleep last Tuesday night by a tumult of sounds which could not at first be accounted for; on enquiring, however, the row was found to proceed from the conveyance which carried the Woodlesford minstrels on their homeward journey from Carlton where they had been giving their entertainment on that evening.

THE entertainment at the Rothwell Mechanics' Institute last Monday, was well attended and would doubtless realize a nice amount on behalf of the object for which it was promoted My old friends Messrs. Harms and Longbottom were again to the fore and acquitted themselves, especially the former, in a very creditable manner. Mrs. Audsley made a very satisfactory debût, her singing being of a highly pleasing nature, and in the duett with Mr. Harms, this lady made a decided hit, and will no doubt be heard of again at a future time in connection with local concerts.

The dramatic part of the entertainment was gone through in a moderately efficient manner, perhaps some of the gentlemen taking part in it will improve with careful study and practice. Mr. W. Wright turned out a perfectly "charming young widow" and exhibited a thorough knowledge of the proprieties of the difficult character he assumed.

I AM very glad to notice that the gallant conduct of P. C. Clark on the occasion of the recent robbery at the Station is in a fair way of receiving some substantial recognition at the hands of the public and I hope shortly to hear that a subscription list has been opened with a view to such recognition and shall, in the event of this taking place, be most happy to contribute my quota towards the general fund.

I AM afraid my readers will be about tired of hearing the Minstrel concert mentioned and I should not have again referred to it but for the fact that I have received the following verse, signed by "Hector," as a sort of reply to one portion of Mr. Flockton's topical song.

"When antagonists are writhing with vexation
With vexation,
And one or two with rage are fit to burst
Fit to burst,
At the mystery which baffles penetration
Penetration,
To unravel which each one strives to be first
To be first,
When he sees his foes consoling one another
One another,
The sight is sure to cause him lots of fun
Lots of fun,
Oh take one consideration with another
With another,
Ajax's lot must surely be a happy one
When his cutting, slashing duty's to be done
To be done,
Ajax lot must surely be a happy one
Happy one."

By the way, topical songs seem to be getting very plentiful just now. First comes Mr. Flockton, next Mr. Harms, and now I see that Mr. Milling, a new comer I believe, is down for a song of this kind at the Oulton concert to-night.

MINSTREL ENTERTAINMENT AT WOODLESFORD.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times

Dear Sir,

Musical and other criticism has of late become one of the special features of the local section of your interesting paper, and the public have often been greatly indebted to your numerous correspondents for their entertaining critiques on the various entertainments which have been given in the neighbouring villages.

Your last issue contained a notice under the above heading, of the entertainment given at Woodlesford on the 30th ult., which in many respects is a remarkable one. To an outside observer the report perhaps may contain nothing especially worthy of notice beyond an occasional outrage upon the rules and principles of English grammar as laid down by Lindley Murray and others; but to those who can read between the lines, there is much matter for consideration. Some portions seem to indicate, from their jerky disconnected style, that the writer had previously been going in for a course of Victor Hugo, or at least had studied the eccentricity of Mr Alfred Jingle, an abortive attempt being the natural result.

To begin with, it is stated that the opening chorus 'was all well sung except the words.' Now if that line had been written by the late Artemus Ward, he would probably have added the note 'This is sarkassum,' but as the writer under notice is evidently not a descendant of the aforesaid A. Ward, he leaves this to be inferred, and we are left to wonder what portion of the chorus was well sung.

It is perhaps in the remarks about Mr Atkinson's singing that the cloven hoof of jealousy and disappointed ambition become most plainly exposed, as it would be a difficult matter to state how 'the abilities of this gentleman had been kept in the view of the public.' Had your critic possessed the discernment to which he lays claim, he would have detected that Mr Atkinson was suffering from a severe cold, and so unable to do proper justice to the song.

The fact that comic songs 'go down' with certain audiences should be a subject for self-congratulation on the part of one whose forlorn hope lies in that direction.

The intended sneer at the intelligence of the company present, will no doubt be appreciated by them. It would surely be soon enough to condemn as singers Messrs Flockton and Jackson when they set up the claim to be considered as such. It will, however, afford some solace to their wounded feelings to find that in the opinion of your accomplished critic, they, as 'Bones and Tambourine,' leave nothing to be wished. It is to be regretted for the writer's own sake that he should have gone so far out of his way to make the vulgar comparison between the respective merits of these gentlemen, and Mr Jackson would be no doubt the first to repudiate the solitary vote, and cast it in the writer's teeth.

Mr R J Smith must feel gratified on receiving such a kindly pat on the back in recognition of his improvement, and may perhaps feel desirous of commencing a course of instruction in the mysteries of 'head and chest notes.' We are told 'the chorus in this song was done the best of any;' it is rather singular that this chorus, the execution of which was certainly marred by the absence from the platform of several of the part singers, should have been set apart for special notice. Your critic finds fault with 'Mr Johnson for depriving the audience of the pleasures of another song from Mr West, but a moment's consideration would have convinced even him of the absurdity of expecting each singer to be provided with two songs and choruses in a programme of this description.

The remarks respecting the treble voices go to show that the writer is one of those who go in for quantity at the expense of quality, and who do not hesitate to sacrifice pure musical tones to harsh and discordant noisiness, the practical effect of this notion may not be so conspicuously offensive in the hearty singing of a large number of scholars, it has even begun to be tolerated in our church choir, but unprejudiced listeners will agree in appreciating the difference between this kind of singing (?) and the 'concord of sweet sounds,' which in the harmonised choruses of the Minstrel programme have helped to make the entertainment so justly popular and pleasing, the idea of the task of which the boys creditably acquitted themselves being 'positive pain' to them being simply ludicrous.

We are not favored with a detailed criticism of the comic sketch, but if the manner in which the musical portion of the entertainment is dealt with affords any criterion as to the justice and fairness which might have been expected in reference thereto, the loss will not be severely felt by the public.

Your critic attempts to enliven his productions with gleams of labored wit, which irresistibly call to mind the playful gambols of a sportive elephant, or the airy graces of the rhinoceros; and his cutting sarcasm is as the fearful onslaught of a pack of geese.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
NEMESIS.

LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

I hear that the Liberal Association have determined to run Mr. Samuel Batty and Mr John Turner as their candidates for the coming Local Board election. Mr Newsome, who was the choice of the Liberal Association three years ago, is to be dropped on the bleak side of the hedge, and there left to perish, so far as any help from his late friends is concerned.

This is a punishment for his supposed sins on the Gas question, though of course he is precluded from voting on the subject.

It is just possible the electors may take a different view of the case, and ask themselves who has best endeavoured to conserve their interests.

Yours truly,
JUSTITIA.

A CARD.—TO ALL WHO ARE SUFFERING FROM THE errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a recipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City, U.S.A.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS cleanse and purify the blood, strengthen and invigorate the nerves, and secure the perfecting of digestion and prevent the creation of those humours to which we owe erysipelas, scurvy, gout, and those slimy dregs out of which the stone and gravel within us are formed. The timely use of Brandreth's Pills has saved thousands of valuable lives. As an antibilious pill they are unequalled.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS are the infallible remedy in all Coughs, and Colds, Lumbago, Sciatica, Rheumatism, and all local pains. See you get the genuine, which has "Thomas Allcock and Co." on the stamp. Beware of vile imitations that contain lead.

ALLCOCK'S CORN PLASTERS are now admitted by tens of thousands to be the best cure for corns ever made. They allay the pain of the worst corn as if by magic, and the tightest boots can be worn with ease.

THROAT AFFECTIONS AND HOARSENESS.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." These famous "lozenges" are now sold by most respectable chemists in this country at 1s. 1½d. per box. People troubled with a "hacking cough," a "slight cold," or bronchial affections, cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious Pulmonary and Asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government Stamp around each box.—Prepared by JOHN I. BROWN & SONS, Boston, U.S. European depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES cure Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis.—Medical testimony states [illegible] medicine is so effectual in the cure of [illegible] One Lozenge alone gives ease, one or [illegible] rest. For relieving difficulty of [illegible] valuable. They contain no opium [illegible] Sold by all Chemists in Tins, 1s. 1½d. [illegible]

HAVE IT IN YOUR HOUSES, and follow the advice of the eminent Doctors Prout, Stevens, Morgan, Turley, Dowsing, Gibbon, Sparks, &c., who have borne unqualified testimony to the value of LAMPLOUGH'S PYRETIC SALINE. It gives instant relief in headache, sea or bilious sickness, constipation, heartburn, scarlet and other fevers, small-pox, measles, eruptive and skin complaints. Use no substitute. H. LAMPLOUGH, 113 Holborn, London.

THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have theirs thus blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. The more delicate the skin the quicker its ruin. THE ALBION MILK AND SULPHUR SOAP is the purest, the whitest, and most purifying of all soaps, by its purifying action taking away and preventing all pimples, blotches, and roughness. It is recommended by the entire medical profession as the most elegant preparation for the skin that is known. A boon to sensitive skins. By all Chemists, in tablets, 6d. and 1s.—The Albion Sanitary Soap Co., 532, Oxford Street, London.

IS RHEUMATISM CURABLE? Yes, if you take WOODCOCK'S RHEUMATIC MIXTURE. Speedily cures Rheumatic Pains in the Limbs, Rheumatic Pains in the Head, Rheumatic Pains in the Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatic Swellings and Stiffness; in fact, every phase of Rheumatism; no matter how acute or long standing, it never fails. OBSERVE—This is not a quack remedy warranted to cure everything, but a genuine SPECIFIC FOR RHEUMATISM only. Of any Chemist. In Bottles, at 1s. 9d. and 2s. 9d., or sent free to any railway station in England for 25 or 38 stamps. (Three 2s. 9d. bottles, carriage paid, for 102 stamps or P.O.O.) By the Proprietor, Page D. Woodcock, Calvert Street, Norwich.

THE NEW RAILWAY SCHEME.

The East and West Yorkshire Union Railway Bill was read a first time in the House of Commons on Tuesday. Any opposition to the proposed Company must be lodged before Saturday, the 25th, after which date, the second reading may come on any time outside a week or ten days. We believe evidence is being prepared, and petitions are being signed in the district on behalf of the Bill. We are sure no urging is necessary to induce every man and woman of age to place their names to the petition which will be submitted to them, and we see no reason why 3000 or 4000 signatures may not be got in our district. Let us remind the Committee that people in Oulton and Woodlesford will be pleased to sign; if we remember right, no canvassers were appointed for that district.

At the meeting of the Leeds Chamber of Commerce, on Wednesday, a recommendation of the Committee to petition in favor of the line was accepted and confirmed by the Chamber. From the tone of the meeting, it was evident that, should the Company desire it, the Chamber might be induced to give evidence in support of the scheme.

Everything points to success. Let every one do his utmost to further the project, and the desired result will be attained.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

The ordinary fortnightly meeting of the Board was held on Monday evening last, present Messrs. W. Hargreaves, (chairman), Holmes, Oliver, Bramley, Newsome, Batty, Sanderson and the clerk, treasurer and inspector.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

ROTHWELL SEWAGE.—The clerk then read several legal documents whereby Messrs. Brayshaw, Thompson and Stead (contractors for the sewage works) assign their interest in this contract to Mr. M. Brayshaw; while he again directs that the monies due to him be paid over to Mr. James Brayshaw, who is now virtually carrying on the work.

The valuations for tenant right, as specified by Mr. Haley, are now nearly all settled, Mr. Bramley having come to an agreement this evening, (Monday).

The clerk was instructed to ask the remaining parties if they will agree to Mr. Haley's estimate, and if not, to send in their claim, so that these matters can be settled.

A letter was read from Mr. Farrer stating that he is appointed to value for Mr. Dickinson in the matter of damage done by the sewage works to his property.

It was proposed by the chairman, seconded by Mr. Newsome, that Mr. Haley be appointed to value on behalf of the Board as regards owner's claims for compensation. Carried.

The matter of house "gulleys" was ordered to be referred to the Sewage and Sanitary Committee.

Mr. Bramley suggested that the man hole above Mr. Richardson's, be placed near the lamp at the corner instead of opposite James Wood's, and simply put a 6 inch pipe up to that house.

The chairman urged the need for ventilating shafts in connection with the main sewers in order to carry off the sewer gas.

Mr. Newsome mentioned a complaint from Mr. S. Seaner who had been unable to get a connection made between his house and the main. It was however explained that the drain in the street between his house and the Board Schools is private property, and he will therefore have to take his pipe into Carlton Lane.

All the above matters were referred for the consideration of the Sanitary and Sewage Committee.

Mr. Jowett, the clerk of works then made his fortnightly report which stated that the work had proceeded very well, a greater length having been laid during the past two weeks than had been for six weeks previously. In Carlton Lane there had been 130 yards of 9 inch pipes, 2 shafts, and a lamp hole; in Swithins Street, 160 yards of 9 inch, 2 shafts and a lamp hole; and in Smithson Street, 130 yards of 12 inch pipes and one lamp hole, besides a number of junctions.

HIGHWAYS.—The question of certain alterations in the contracts of Mr. Jowett and Mr. Bulmer was referred to the Highways Committee.

The firm supplying dross to the Board had been cautioned against sending an inferior description, and greater care is promised.

In the matter of Messrs. Elliotts' charges for extra work, Mr. Newsome made some objections, but the Highway Committee having thoroughly gone into the matter reported for certain alterations and reductions, which report was accepted by the Board. It was eventually resolved, therefore, that a specified amount should be paid to Mr. Elliott for extra work.

In reply to an advertisement for tender for the removal of road scrapings, that of Mr. Lawton was accepted for £9 19s to the first of March.

NUISANCE REMOVAL.—There were no fewer than six tenders for the Rothwell portion of this contract, and four for the Stourton section.

Mr. Bramley moved that the tender of Mr. A. Nichols for (Rothwell) £39 19s and (Stourton) £39 10s be accepted, being the lowest in each section. Several members rose to second the motion, Mr. Batty's name being taken. Carried unanimously.

GAS BILL.—Mr. John Turner sent a letter the chairman signed by 20 ratepayers asking him to call a public meeting to request the Local Board to oppose the Bill being promoted in Parliament by the Rothwell Gas Light Company, under the Public Health Act. The letter would be handed to the chairman of the Board.

Mr. Batty asked about the letter from the Local Government Board which had been sent down to the Board some time ago, in reply to a letter from Mr. B. Batty, asking an opinion as to what is meant by "an absolute majority of the governing body." The Local Government Board asked for the Board's observations on the subject. The clerk suggested that the whole case should be laid before the Department, and asked instructions what should be done.

On the motion of Mr. Batty and Mr. Sanderson, it was resolved that the clerk write a reply, detailing the history of the case.

The clerk read a letter from Messrs. Ford and Warren, stating that if the Board intended to oppose the Bill, the opposition must be deposited before the 20th instant. The clerk however referred to another letter sent by the solicitors in December, setting forth that an opposition could be taken any time within 10 days after the first reading.

HEALTH.—The measles still being bad at Stourton, the schools remain closed another week.

STREET LAMPS.—The Gas Committee of the Leeds' Corporation promise to have the lamps at Stourton lighted earlier than they have done lately.

WATER.—The Inspector reported that he had measured the distance between Mr. Lawton's house and the main, and found it about 250 yards; by the road it would be somewhat further. It was calculated that the cost of laying a pipe to Mr. Lawton's would amount to about £50. There was a long discussion on the subject, Mr. Holmes and Mr. Newsome joining in the suggestion that Mr. Lawton be supplied with water from the nearest point at 4d a barrel. Another proposal by Mr. Oliver was to the effect that Lord Stourton be asked what portion of the cost he would be willing to bear. As this, however, might prove a precedent, whereby many others might offer to pay a portion of the cost, it was finally settled that Messrs. Charlesworths be respectfully asked, if mutual a arrangement can be come to, to sell Mr. Lawton water at so much a barrel from their standard at Beeston pit.

FINANCE.—The collector has received and paid over to the treasurer during the fortnight the following sums.

General District Rate	127	17	7
Water Rents	61	7	4
	189	4	11

Mr Bramley gave notice that next meeting he should move that the ordinary Board meetings do close not later than eight o'clock.

It was after nine on Monday evening.

LOFTHOUSE CONSERVATIVE ASSOCIATION.

COMMUNICATED.

A lecture was delivered under the auspices of the above association, in the National School-room Lofthouse, on Thursday evening, the 9th instant, by H. Byron Reed, Esq, of Darlington. The subject of the lecture was "Constitutional principles, explained and vindicated," and the able lecturer, after being introduced by the chairman, J. Charlesworth, Esq., (President of the Association,) first dwelt upon the leading political topics of the day, and contrasted the mode of action taken by the present Government with that taken by their predecessors in reference to Afghanistan, the Transvaal, and our colonies in general; the Eastern and the Irish questions, and National expenditure. He forcibly pointed out their weakness and vacillation on the first three subjects; the entire failure and criminal neglect in the Irish Policy, and the increased expenditure in the National finances of the present government, as compared with the treatment of the same subjects under the Beaconsfield government; he further traced the recent development and difficulties of the Eastern, Transvaal and Irish questions, to the wild and exorbitant verbosity of the present Prime Minister, when in a position of greater freedom and less responsibility, and he deduced from these facts the extreme folly of men promising to do things when in opposition, that they know they will be either unable to perform at all, or perform with the utmost difficulty and danger to the State when in power. This failing, he asserted was almost solely practised by the so-called Liberal politicians. He then referred to the leading points of the Conservative programme, viz., maintenance of the Throne, supporting the House of Lords, connection between Church and State, closer union with and conferring of special and favourable terms of commerce upon our Colonies, upholding the prestige of our empire as the first amongst the nations of the earth, and the hallowing of education by the leavening influence of religious principles being a necessary part of the curriculum of elementary and other schools. The lecturer then pointed out that the Conservative policy was to legislate upon a natural process, that is, to treat the various necessities and requirements of the people, as they arose in a progressive manner, and not to be constantly proposing changing schemes, upon all social questions affecting the people, many of which proved useless, and some actually retrograde, such as the Irish Land Act of 1870, and the Act of last year, which he asserted had thrown Ireland 50 years backwards in true prosperity and contentment. He then referred to the beneficial legislation, carried by the Beaconsfield government mentioning the Artizan's Dwelling Act, the Employer's Liability Act, and others, all of which practically effected for good the working man, and ended a capital lecture by saying that the Conservative party was the real national party; and the truest friend of the labourer.

After questions had been put by several of the audience and answered by the lecturer, the chairman, in proposing a vote of thanks to the lecturer, said he was proud to see that the people might have an opportunity of hearing and judging for themselves which party were their best friends, and asserted that capitalist and labourer must work together, and have confidence in each other, or both will fail.

A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman brought a well-attended meeting to a close.

ROTHWELL GAS BILL.

ENTERTAINMENT AT ROTHWELL.

An entertainment of an informal character was given in the Infants' school-room on Monday last. The programme was varied, consisting of vocal and instrumental music and also of readings and recitals. Miss Middlemiss appeared in her customary capacity of opener of the proceedings, and delighted everyone present by her execution of a piano solo. The glee "O hush thee my baby" was next given by a private glee party. Mrs. Lees made her debut in the district with the old but ever pleasing song "My mother bids me bind my hair." The Masters Craven were down next on the programme, but they not arriving in time to fill their appointed place, Mrs. and Miss Heberden sang the duett "My pretty page" with good effect. A reading by the Rev. J. C. Lees followed next, causing much merriment. The piece selected was "Mrs. Hubbard's three warnings," the subject matter being as the title foreshadows, of a ghostly nature. Mr. Lees gave the piece with splendid effect, earning hearty applause. The Masters Craven having arrived hastened to fulfil their engagements, and gave one of their violin and piano duetts with such success as to earn enthusiastic applause which brought about an encore. The encore was unfortunately brought to an untimely end by one of those catastrophes so common to violinists, we refer to the the snapping of a string.

The second part of the entertainment opened with the spirited piano duett "The may pole dance," by Mrs. Glaister and Miss Heberden; and this was followed by Mr. R. C. Heberden in the song "Sleeping I dream love," the song was well rendered. The glee "Ave Maria" was next given by the glee party. Another duett "Hearts and homes" by Mrs and Miss Heberden was so well rendered as to produce an encore. The Masters Craven again delighted their audience by their neatness of finish, and Dr. Glaister brought up the rear by a good rendering of the hackneyed "Charge of the Light Brigade."

The entertainment closed in the customary way by the singing of the National Anthem.

MARKETS.

LEEDS CORN, Tuesday.—There is a fair attendance at our market this morning. Wheat moves slowly at 6d to 1s per qr decline. Maize rather easier. Foreign beans firm. Peas steady. No change in the price of flour. No 1, 37s 6d., No 2, 34s 6d., No 3 33s.—Leeds Corn Millers Association Report.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—The recent order issued by the Privy Council considerably interfered with the arrangements and business of to-day's market. The department used for the exhibition of lean beasts and milch cows was closed, and in the pig market only a small number of fat pigs were on offer. All the fat beasts brought into the market were marked with a large arrow clipped on the left hind quarter, and a large M was painted in blue on the left side of all sheep before they were taken away, and cattle intended for London could not be removed except by special licence. Police-officers were on duty to see that the regulations were complied with, and Mr Whitaker, the Sanitary Inspector, was also in attendance. The supply of fat beasts being small and the attendance of buyers large, trade ruled brisk at an advance of from ¼d to ½d per lb on last Wednesday's quotations. Sheep moved off very slowly in consequence of dealers demanding an advance on the late very high prices, which also had the effect of causing many buyers to make much smaller purchases than usual.

WAKEFIELD CORN, Friday, 12.45 p.m.—Wheat meets with little attention this morning, although offered at lower rates. Barley sells slowly at barely late rates. Beans, oats and maize steady. Weather to-day is damp but warm.

SUICIDE AT ROBIN HOOD.

A man named William Daniel, aged 42, a labourer, committed suicide on Tuesday, in his own house at Robin Hood, Leeds-road. It appeared that about five o'clock in the morning he went down from the bedroom in which he and his wife slept, made a cup of tea, which his wife shared with him, and went down into the kitchen again. About seven o'clock, when his daughter went down stairs, she found him suspended by the neck with a rope, which was fastened to the ceiling of the kitchen. The body was cut down by a man named James Ramsden, and an inquest was held upon it yesterday at the Old Halfway House by T. Taylor Esq., Coroner, and a verdict of "Suicide through temporary insanity" was returned. It seems the poor fellow had taken the loss of his work so seriously to heart that his mind had become depressed which resulted so fatally.

FOOTBALL.

ROTHWELL HARMONIC v. SWINTON.—The return match between these clubs was played at Rothwell, last Saturday. Owing to some delay or another the visitors did not arrive until a quarter to five, and five o'clock had struck before the game commenced. At the outset it was seen that the Harmonic team were "done up" (with their exertions in a scratch match which was organised when all hope of the Swinton players coming had been abandoned,) although they worked pluckily. After several visits to both ends of the field, the leather returned into the home territory, and a good shy placed it in the hands of Blackburn, the custodian, who, unfortunately tried a drop kick, which failed to put the ball out of danger, a fierce scrimmage ensued during which the first goal was secured for the visitors. Play after this became very fast, and for some time the play was in the visitros' quarters, but one of the Swinton frowards, who had been prominent throughout the game, broke away and for the second time secured the downfall of the Harmonic citadel. Shortly after half-time was called, and when play was again resumed it had got almost too dark for the spectators to see anything. The home team commenced operations by a severe bombardment of the visitors goal, and several times it was more good luck than good management that the custodian stopped the shots owing to the darkness. But perseverance was at length rewarded as the leather wandered good-natturedly between the uprights. The kick off from the centre failed to relieve the Swintonites, who were sorely pressed, but, "time opportunely arriving," put an end to the contest, and the visitors left the field victorious by 2 goals to one.

OULTON v. HUNSLET.—The return match between these two clubs was played on Saturday last at Oulton. The visitors brought a strong team which, however, had to be content with second honours. Hunslet kicked off with their faces to the wind, but the ball was returned by the home backs, and an invasion of the Hunslet stronghold immediately commenced, which, with one or two exceptions, was kept up the whole of the first half. Corner-kick after corner-kick fell to [illegible] ends came the same way, but the visitors never became dangerous, while a low sharp shot puzzled their custodian and captured [illegible] more important occurred, and the game, which was [illegible] contested, ended in a win for Oulton by one goal to nil.

MR JOHN TURNER AND THE MECHANICS' INSTITUTE COMMITTEE.—The past week or two has been full of the dispute between the Mechanics' Institute Committee and Mr John Turner, who, it appears, had removed from the Reading Room, several copies of the 'Church Standard.' So far as we can learn, the Committee some six years ago ordered a weekly periodical 'Hand and Heart,' which until near the end of last year continued to be placed on the table. In November last, the name 'Hand and Heart' was changed for 'The Church Standard,' apparently without its being particularly observed by anyone, especially as a monthly supplement headed 'Hand and Heart' is sent with it. Some weeks ago Mr Turner, feeling that denominational papers should not be placed on the table, destroyed the one in question. Not being disposed to admit his error in so doing, the Committee have endeavoured to obtain an apology, but not having succeeded in persuading Mr Turner to acknowledge himself wrong, stronger measures have been taken, and expulsion resorted to, which was forcibly resisted, and it is feared the case may figure in our police court unless wiser counsels prevail.

Doubtless, the Committee were acting against the spirit of Mechanics' Institutions in allowing the 'Church Standard' to remain as one of their paid-for periodicals; but there is little doubt that Mr Turner used wrong and criminal means for remedying their probable error. At the same time the Committee appear not to have observed the alteration of the name; and if they had, we presume if a majority of the Committee agreed to continue it, they were at liberty to do so, as managers of the Institute for the time being,—unless the matter had been properly complained of, and brought before them.

CHURCH CHOIR DANCE.—The annual dance of the Rothwell Church Choir was held at the Mechanics' Institute, Rothwell, last Tuesday evening. About a hundred were present.

CORRESPONDENCE.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our correspondents. ED.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

I HAD intended to take upon myself the welcome task of chastising with fitting severity, the unlucky scribe who reported the late minstrel concert for this journal, but on perusing the columns on Friday evening, I found myself forestalled and "my occupation gone." "Nemesis" has overtaken our friend with a vengeance and I hope he will fully relish the well directed and stinging sarcasm which is so freely levelled at his unfortunate head. Nemesis appears to have seized every opportunity of having a shot at the well defined target, and has sent home his arrows with a precision which must have considerably astonished master critic; my only hope is that he did not swear or do anything unbecoming the proper dignity and importance of so redoubtable an individual, upon reading the letter of Nemesis. There are a few points in that letter which have tickled me very much, for instance the reference to outrages on grammar, the caustic allusion to comic songs and a "forlorn hope," the doubly barbed arrow contained in the paragraph relating to singing in general; while the final paragraph comes as a regular crusher, and "if there be any spark of life remaining" in the breast of the woe-begone reporter it must surely be extinguished by that last thrust.

I find that my conjectures as to the identity of the gentleman are quite correct and all I will say is that the production is only what might be expected to proceed from such a source.

THE report of the last School Board meeting contains some very interesting information, which is I presume what was promised some time since. I refer of course to that portion which deals with the examination and the Inspector's report. I am rather surprised to find that Miss Castle should have taken so much higher position in the scale of results than Mr. Longbottom, and I congratulate her very freely on her success. I am not very well acquainted with the nature of these reports in general, but I should think that it would be difficult to secure one much better than that obtained by Miss Castle.

I am sorry to see that Miss Abbey has not done so well, but as I also notice that the Board have acceded to her request for a second teacher, I take it that they are satisfied that with proper assistance Miss Abbey is quite capable of achieving good results in her school.

I must say, that I think it would be a difficult matter for any teacher to possess a higher place in the estimation of both parents and children than does Miss Abbey, and I hope that we shall not see the last of the popular mistress for many a long day.

I AM very much pleased to see the short but pithy letter signed "Justitia," anent the forthcoming Local Board election; I do not agree with Mr. Newsome in many ways, but I do think that if as is intimated, he is to be "shunted" in order to make room for Mr. John Turner, Jun., it will be a crying disgrace to all concerned. What has Mr. John Turner done for Rothwell to entitle him to be preferred before a gentlemen like Mr. Newsome, who in addition to the possession of business capacities so desirable in a member of any public body has also considerable interest in the village? "Echo answers" what. He has certainly done his utmost to cause the expenditure of a large sum of money in order to obtain objects, which could just as easily have been obtained without any cost at all if reasonable means had been adopted for the purpose, and now what is the result? the directors of the Gas Company have set up their backs against any concessions, and their Bill will most likely pass without material alteration, despite the noise and clamour of Messrs. Turner, Batty & Co. I suppose that because Mr. Newsome had the courage to express his convictions on an important matter, he is no longer to be considered fit to occupy a seat on the Local Board, but if this is the opinion of the majority of the Rothwell electors I shall be much surprised, and I sincerely trust to see Mr. John Turner, Jun., occupy the position amongst the candidates for election, to which he is most justly entitled.

POOR MR. STUDD; his action against Messrs. Bentley & Co. met with a very sudden fate, which shows that it is not wise to rush into legal proceedings without grave consideration. I should have thought that Mr. Studd's knowledge of the law would have prevented him making the mistake of going into court with such a case.

MR. EDITOR, who was present at the Oulton concert last Friday, tells me that the affair went off in a very enjoyable manner, and as there was a fair company present no doubt the funds of the cricket club will derive substantial benefit from the efforts put forth. I have heard from several quarters that the feature of the evening was the appearance of "Mr. Milling" who in his topical song carried all before him, and when he appeared in character at the close the audience fairly rose at him. Everyone agreed that Mr Milling's impersonation of the "unfortunate one" was all that could be desired and his topical song a complete success. From what I can gather my friend Mr. Higgins sang "The Raft" well, but his effort at character-singing in "A horrible tale" was a mistake, being in fact mere buffoonery. Mr. Stead gave some amusing readings and Miss Stead also acquitted herself creditably as did Miss Teale, whose quiet unpretending style, and sweet though weak voice were very pleasing. Mr. C. Teale sang well and why he did not receive an encore is a mystery. Mr. T. West as is invariably the case pleased everyone with his fine voice and careful singing; I must not forget to mention the playing of Miss Middlemiss which was a treat.

What was the reason that Mr. R. J. Smith did not appear on the platform? I saw him [illegible]

To return to the School Board 'news,' I see that it has been decided to let one of the schools to [illegible] Wakefield [illegible] for an entertainment for [illegible] charge but I suppose the School Board [illegible] charges. At any rate they are not very greedy about charges.

It is gratifying to notice that the present accommodation of the Sunday School is becoming too small. I hope that when the question is discussed a spirit of fairness may possess the members of the Board and that they may see fit to grant the Sunday School another room without extra charge; then I shall consider the rent (£10) a fair and just one and one to which no person ought to take exception.

LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

I noticed a paragraph in your last issue respecting the selection of candidates by the Liberal Association for the approaching Local Board election. It is there stated my sins on the gas question have turned my late friends against me and that I am to be left out in the cold by them at the next election. I should be delighted, if some intelligent individual would inform me when and how I have sinned on the gas question. As I had the misfortune to be a shareholder in the Rothwell Gas Light Company, my hands were tied by law. I had no power to vote. Only presumption can prophesy how I should have voted had the law given me the right to vote on the question. I did what I could by argument, in the first place to prevent the ratepayers' money being used to oppose the Bill, and in the second place to get the clauses objected to by the Liberal Association modified. I spoke at the Board meeting in favour of the standard price being reduced and the candle power being increased. I went in against the retention of the electric light clauses. Moreover, I was the first person to propose that a clause should be inserted giving the Local Board the privilege of buying the works at any time the Board think proper. The members of the Liberal Association are my natural political friends. I certainly expect to be supported by the more reasonable of the members.

Yours truly,
H. P. NEWSOME.

WOODLESFORD SCHOOL BOARD.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

In your printed report of the last meeting of our Board, I observed a slight inaccuracy, which it will perhaps be advisable to correct. The portion requiring correction bears reference to the Inspector's report on the Boy's school, and is as follows, 'reading requiring attention, also arithmetic, which with the exception of the second standard, was praiseworthy'; this should read 'reading requiring attention, also arithmetic, with the exception of the second standard, which was praiseworthy;' the transposition of one word makes a considerable difference to the boys in the second standard.

If you will please insert this letter in your columns this week, I shall feel greatly obliged.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
ROBERT J. SMITH,
Clerk to the Board.

WOODLESFORD SCHOOL BOARD.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times

Dear Sir,

I regret again to have to call your attention to another report of the proceedings of a meeting (Monday 6th inst) of the above Board. A summary of a Government Report which contains mis-statements, inaccuracies, and omissions, cannot be deemed clear, concise and impartial. As there is no meeting of the Board for some three or four weeks, in justice to myself, I hope you will allow me to correct one mis-statement. Others I intend to call the attention of the Board to at its next meeting. Government Reports of Schools, if published at all, in fairness to all concerned ought to be published in extens, or not at all.

Your report states respecting the Boys' Department:—"Complaint was made about the small attendance." This will give your readers the idea that a small number attends this department.

The following figures obtained on Oct 21st last, for H.M. Inspector who required the same for Educational purposes will refute this statement:—

WOODLESFORD BOARD SCHOOL.

Number on books	77 boys,	63 girls,	94 infants
Average attendance	58.1 „	42.9 „	72.1 „

The present number on the register in the Boys' Department is 82, and last week 70 boys were in their places at one time.

What the report says is:—"The attendance does not appear to be so good as it might be." This, Mr. Editor, is nothing else but an intimation to the Board to look better after the attendance; otherwise—to see that there is more regularity in the attendance.

I have repeatedly called the attention of the Board to the irregularity of the attendance; and it is the complaint of all the teachers in the school district. As now allowed, the irregularity of attendances causes a loss in pence and grants to the ratepayers, and a loss in professional reputation to the teachers; as well as an eventual loss to parents in wages which would otherwise be sooner earned by their children.

Yours truly,
JOHN LONGBOTTOM.

SUTTON'S AMATEURS GUIDE.—(Reading: Sutton & Sons.)—For several years past we have noticed this annual publication, which we do not hesitate to say is one of the most reliable guides to gardening we know. The work commences with a coloured plate of eleven beautiful varieties of primula. Following this is a very valuable "Calendar for 1882" and the "Work of the year in the Vegetable Garden." Then follows the illustrated list of the best vegetables, in which some valuable introductions not yet sent out will be found fully described.

THE NEWSPAPER.

A GUEST is waiting at the door
That I rejoice to see;
Because I know he's coming here
To talk a while to me.

This is an entertaining guest,
He's witty, and he's wise;
I think—he sees so many things—
He has a thousand eyes.

A power most responsible,
And great, this guest doth wield;
He's braver than the knight of old,
Who hid behind his shield.

He loveth human progress well,
While, many a one he's taught;
And, as the farmer scatters seed,
He broadly scatters thought.

He knows of all that's going on
Of interest on the earth,
And patiently he tells the news
Beside how many a hearth!

In the retirement of my home,
This friend doth bring to me
The words heard in the drawing-room
And brilliant coterie.

He tells of many varied scenes
In countries far away,
He chats about the newest books,
The concert and the play.

Howe'er the day may brightly dawn,
It seemeth incomplete
Whene'er this entertaining guest,
This friend, I fail to meet.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and starchy compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

KAY'S TIC PILLS, a specific in Neuralgia Face-ache, &c., 9½d., 1s 1½d, postage 1d. Of Chemists Kay Bros., Stockport.

KAY'S LINSEED COMPOUND. Asthma and Bronchitis immediately relieved by it. Sold by Chemists.

OH, TO BE SOMETHING.

Oh, to be something, something
Little, if so it must be,
A something, no matter how little
The world dependeth on me.

That which my small hand findeth
I'll do with my little might,
And seek with constant endeavour
To be a worker in light.

With all my little thinkings,
Truthfully, healthily glad;
And not the tiniest leaning,
To aught that's gloomy or sad.

Oh, to be something, something,
In something a child shell I be,
A blending of that which's earthly,
With heaven's divinity.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—The Great Need.—The blood is the life, and on its purity our health as well as our existence depends. These Pills thoroughly cleanse the vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that means strengthen and invigorate the whole system, healthily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills exercises marvellous power in giving tone to debilitated and nervous constitutions. These pills dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or have from some cause become so.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoa? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles.

COAGULINE—Cement for Broken Articles 6d., 1s., 2s., postage 2d. Sold everywhere. Kay Bros., Stockport.

LIBERALS & CONSERVATIVES UNITED!—This may sound strange, but it is nevertheless true, that Liberals and Conservatives alike are unanimous in declaring that "BUDDEN'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND AND COLTSFOOT" is the best remedy for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and in fact, any Affections of the Chest and Lungs. One dose relieves, one bottle cures. Ask for "BUDDEN'S BALSAM," and take nothing else.—Bottles 1s 1½d, 2s. 9d. Agent for Rothwell, A. Marshall, Stationer and Patent Medicine Dealer.

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY.—"I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy.'" Sold by all Chemists. Boxes at 1s 1½d. and 2s. 9d.

Box sent post free on receipt of 15 or 35 stamps by Wm. Mather, Wholesale Druggist, Manchester.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS cleanse and purify the blood, strengthen and invigorate the nerves, and secure the perfecting of digestion and prevent the creation of those humours to which we owe erysipelas, scurvy, gout, and those slimy dregs out of which the stone and gravel within us are formed. The timely use of Brandreth's Pills has saved thousands of valuable lives. As an antibilious pill they are unequalled.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS are the infallible remedy in all Coughs, and Colds, Lumbago, Sciatica, Rheumatism, and all local pains. See you get the genuine, which has "Thomas Allcock and Co." on the stamp. Beware of vile imitations that contain lead.

ALLCOCK'S CORN PLASTERS are now admitted by tens of thousands to be the best cure for corns ever made. They allay the pain of the worst corn as if by magic, and the tightest boots can be worn with ease.

THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have their skins blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. The more delicate the skin the quicker its ruin. THE ALBION MILK AND SULPHUR SOAP is the purest, the whitest, and most purifying of all soaps, by its purifying action taking away and preventing all pimples, blotches, and roughness. It is recommended by the entire medical profession as the most elegant preparation for the skin that is known. A boon to sensitive skins. By all Chemists, in tablets, 6d. and 1s.—The Albion Sanitary Soap Co., 532, Oxford Street, London.

IS RHEUMATISM CURABLE? Yes, if you take WOODCOCK'S RHEUMATIC MIXTURE. Speedily cures Rheumatic Pains in the Limbs, Rheumatic Pains in the Head, Rheumatic Pains in the Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatic Swellings and Stiffness; in fact, every phase of Rheumatism; no matter how acute, or long standing, it never fails. OBSERVE—This is not a quack remedy warranted to cure everything, but a genuine SPECIFIC FOR RHEUMATISM only. Of any Chemist. In Bottles, at 1s. 9d. and 2s. 9d., or sent free to any railway station in England for 24 or 36 stamps. (Three 2s. 9d. bottles, carriage paid, for 102 stamps or P.O.O.) By the Proprietor, Page D. Woodcock, Calvert Street Norwich.

THROAT AFFECTIONS AND HOARSENESS.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." These famous "lozenges" are now sold by most respectable chemists in this country at 1s. 1½d. per box. People troubled with a "hacking cough," a "slight cold," or bronchial affections, cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious Pulmonary and Asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government Stamp around each box.—Prepared by JOHN I. BROWN & SONS, Boston, U.S. European depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the teeth a peculiar pearly-whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s. 6d., of all Chemists and Perfumers. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Ask your Chemist for "THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER," sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere at 3s. 6d. per Bottle. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

WOODLESFORD BOARD SCHOOLS.

DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES.

The prizes and certificates gained by the children attending these schools during last year were distributed on Monday evening. There was naturally a large muster of the juvenile portion of the community on the occasion, but very few of the parents made their appearance.

The Rev. A. J. Irvin, Messrs. Mason and Nowell, members of the School Board, were present, also Mr. R. J. Smith, clerk to the Board.

As it was deemed advisable to allow the younger children to disperse as early as possible, the proceedings were commenced soon after six o'clock, their prizes being given to them, and they were dismissed to their homes, and the major portion of the evening's business entered upon. After the singing of songs by the boys and girls, Mr. Smith proceeded to distribute the numerous, varied, and handsome awards for diligence, amongst the children who had succeeded in passing the examination of H. M. Inspector in their respective standards, at the close of which the Rev. A. J. Irvin addressed the assemblage. He expressed great pleasure upon meeting such a numerous company, and gave all a hearty welcome, and stated that although well satisfied to have seen such a large number of prizes given away, he was certain that it was entirely the fault of the children and their parents that the number was not much greater, and that with more regular attendance and greater diligence on the part of the children, there was not the slightest reason why there should not be double the number distributed on the next occasion. Mr. Mason followed with some very appropriate remarks upon the educational facilities and advantages possessed by the children of the present day compared with those of former times, and said that in his school-days such a thing as a prize was unknown. He said that he had known boys who at school were careless and idle, when they grew up to manhood still retained their early characteristics, and were content if they could do just sufficient work to enable them to procure food and clothing, while on the other hand boys who were diligent and painstaking at school, had become honoured and prosperous men, and he urged everyone to strive to the utmost while young, to acquire that knowledge which was so easily attainable, and would be of inestimable benefit to them in after years. Dr. Nowell, in speaking of the necessity of a regular attendance at the schools, stated that he had heard it said that people could not get their children to go to school, but he was certain that had the duty of obedience had been properly instilled into those children in early years, there would be no such difficulty now, and he intimated that by not sending their children regularly to school, the parents were depriving them of their rightful opportunities of advancement, robbing the ratepayers of a portion of the cost of the maintenance of the schools, and the teachers of a certain amount of credit He further urged the children to be truthful, and to be courageous enough to say "no" when invited to do what they knew to be wrong. Each gentleman spoke of the compulsory powers possessed by the Board, which they were fully determined to put in force if persuasion failed to induce better attendance.

A verse of the National Anthem concluded the proceedings, and the company dispersed about half-past seven o'clock.

Appended is a full list of the children who have gained prizes or certificates in each department.

LOFTHOUSE SCHOOL BOARD.

A meeting of the Lofthouse-with-Carlton School Board was held on Wednesday night, a Robin Hood School. The members present were Messrs. Oliver, (chairman); Appleyard, Armitage and Hargreaves, and the officers of the Board. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and signed.

The following amounts had been received by the treasurer since last meeting.—Fees, Robin Hood School, £10 16s. 6d.; books sold, £1 0s. 3d. Fees, Carlton School, £10 9s. 1d.; and £47 3s. 5d. from the Thorpe Overseers.

Cheques were signed for teachers' salaries, and cleaning, amounting to £33 16s. 10d.

A list of fees owing was laid before the Board, who instructed the clerk to write to the parents to pay them within a month or they will be entered into the County Court.

There was no other business of public interest.

WESLEYAN CHAPEL ANNIVERSARY

The second anniversary of the opening of the New Wesleyan Chapel at Rothwell, has been held during the week, and has been very successful.

On Sunday, the Rev. David Solomon, of Leeds, preached morning and evening, to large and attentive congregations, the subject in the earlier part of the day was on the "character of Moses" and at the later service, the preacher gave a most carefully considered and valuable sermon on "Conscience" The choir acquitted themselves remarkably well at both services, and added greatly to the pleasure afforded.

In the afternoon, the choir and a number of teachers and scholars repeated the service of song "Christ, the desire of all nations" in the chapel, which was crowded, friends having taken advantage of the beautiful day, from all the villages round; Mr. Ward conducted as usual, Mr. Naylor also accompanying on the organ, and on all hands it was agreed that the singing was most delightful. Mr. J. R. Seanor gave the connective readings with care and effect, completing a most pleasurable service.

On the following day, a tea meeting was held in the school-room, which though not so largely attended as was expected, seated about 150 persons. As the tea was given by a number of ladies, it was much to be regretted that all the provisions were not used, and had to be sold afterwards.

The meeting, in the chapel, took place at half-past six, and after the usual devotional exercises, was presided over by J. H. Cookson, Esq., of Stanley. The chairman expressed his pleasure in being present, and his very cordial wishes for the complete success of their efforts for the extinction of the debt. He felt some ties to Rothwell, inasmuch as his school days were passed here, and also because of his connection with the chapel as trustee and subscriber. He warmly congratulated the friends on the beautiful and comfortable sanctuary they had raised, and trusted it would soon be quite clear of debt.

Mr. S. Seanor, secretary of the Chapel Building Committee, read a short report of the cost of the chapel, which altogether amounts to £2243 2s. 5d., and the receipts towards its payment, from which it appeared that by subscriptions, bazaars, Christmas singing, collections, and other means, there has been raised the noble amount of £1750 7s. 1d. leaving a balance of £492 15s. 4d. Towards the expenses incurred, the General Chapel Committee have given a grant of £50, and a loan of £100, repayable within ten years without interest. There is therefore an actual balance due to the committee of £342 15s. 4d. Of this about £100 are unpaid subscriptions, and it is anticipated that the General Committee will allow another loan of £100 and £30 grant, when the whole expense is within that amount of being cleared off. As it is only two years since the chapel was built, this cannot be considered an unsatisfactory state of things, and Mr. Seanor, while thanking God for the remarkable manner in which every effort in connection with the chapel had been prospered, looked forward to an early day when all their liabilities as a committee would be cleared off, and the chapel be free of debt.

Mr. J. R. Seanor, one of the chapel stewards, read an interesting statement of the accounts for the year, from which it appears that the year commenced with a balance on the wrong side of about £7. This year they had a balance in hand of over £7. Mr. Seanor looked forward to a larger income, and also to greater success in the society's work.

Rev. James Hind then delivered an interesting speech, based on the truth that increased advantages bring with them increased responsibilities. While proud of being an Englishman, and of our glorious constitution, he also gloried in being a Christian and a Wesleyan Methodist. While loving his own people best, he was ever happy to hold out the right hand of fellowship to all who loved the Lord Jesus Christ. He congratulated the friends at Rothwell on their beautiful chapel, and trusted they would go on and prosper in every good work.

Rev. C. A. Collingwood, after expressing his gratification with the report presented rejoiced to find in many of the classes an earnest resolve to go forward and gather others into the Society and they were looking forward to days of blessing. After echoing the remarks of Mr. Hind, as to his desire to work with Christians of other denominations, Mr. Collingwood spoke further on the Christian duty of giving, and urged all to render to God according to his mercies and to their consciences, so as to carry forward the work of God more successfully.

A collection was made after which votes of thanks were presented to Mr. Cookson for his kindness in acting as chairman, and to the ladies who had given and presided at the tea Mr. Batty and Mr. Morton speaking in support.

The total receipts of the anniversary amount to £21.

MEETING AT THE ROTHWELL MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

Last Monday evening, a special general meeting of the members of the above Institute took place in the club room, to consider the advisability of altering rule number 3, so as to read that no person could vote unless a member of six months' standing. This step had been taken by the committee to prevent any more such scenes as had been witnessed at the annual meeting held last July, when many persons sought to enter on the same evening as the meeting for the purpose of voting. It was also expected that Mr. Turner, junr., might possibly endeavour to appeal at the meeting against his recent expulsion, and the hall-keeper was stationed at the entrance to refuse non-members admission. About 7.20 Mr. Turner appeared at the front door, and demanded admission, which was refused; he then proceeded to the side entrance, and before anyone could stop him, burst in the two doors with an iron "rammer," and thus gained admission into the room; he was here met by the hall-keeper who proceeded to expel him, and in the scuffle which ensued a glass panel in the inner door was smashed. After this, amid great commotion, the meeting commenced. Considerable discussion ensued, and it was at length resolved that a three month's membership be the qualification allowing a member to vote at members' meetings.

ROTHWELL SCHOOL BOARD.

The usual monthly meeting of the Board was held on Friday last, present—Messrs. W. Hargreaves (chairman) J. R. Seanor, J. Parker, J. G. Turner and the clerk.

The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, the Board proceeded to consider plans and specifications prepared by Mr. Richardson, for the proposed additional school at Rothwell Haigh. Several alterations and amendments were suggested and it was afterwards resolved that the plans and specifications as amended be approved by the Board, and forwarded to the Department for Their Lordships' sanction. The schools when completed according to plan, will then consist of girls' school and class-room for 100, boys' school and two class-rooms for 160, infants' school and class-room for 130, making altogether accomodation for 390 children. It was also decided to remove the present playsheds so as to give more light in the two large rooms, and prevent the breakage of the windows, now so frequent.

S. Lorriman having resigned the cleaning of his portion of the premises, the Board resolved to appoint Mrs. Hartley to do the whole of the work.

The clerk was instructed to select and appoint a suitable girl as candidate P.T. in the infants' school.

It was agreed that the concert and distribution of prizes for Rothwell School take place on February 28th, in the Mechanics' Hall.

The accounts and salaries were then passed and a small list of "wants" ordered to be supplied.

THE MINSTRELS AT ROTHWELL.

The amateur minstrel troupe connected with the Woodlesford Choral Society gave their entertainment in the Large Hall of the Mechanics' Institute, on Shrove Tuesday evening, for the benefit of the Institute

Unfortunately, the attendance was small, owing doubtless to various causes; the entertainment having already been given at Woodlesford and Carlton, the numerous attractions which have lately crowded upon us at Rothwell, the approach of Lent, and other minor reasons have all had to do with the much to be regretted fact, especially as the object of the concert was to assist the extended-platform fund.

The programme was similar to that given at the above places, the exception being that "The Awkward Squad" did not appear, and an additional conundrum or two were improvised by Mr. Flockton for the special benefit of the Rothwell audience.

Of the concert in detail, it is perhaps superfluous to speak, various accounts having already appeared in our columns, but we certainly must congratulate the gentlemen on the way they rendered their songs, and were highly pleased with some of the choruses and refrains of the company, in the softness of which they have well trained themselves. The soloists were Messrs G. A. Atkinson, R. J. Smith, W. H. Little, T. West, H. Bell, and Masters H. Audsley and E. Stead; Messrs. F. S. Lockwood, J. Craven, W. Hirst, and A. Little assisting in the choruses. Mr. T. D. Jackson as 'bones' gave two comics, while Mr. Flockton as 'tambourine' described "The short and the long" of it, and sang a 'topical,' in the latter verses, of which was pourtrayed "the unhappy lot" of those who, having subscribed to the new railway, might lose their cash, and also the very "unhappy lot" of the never-to-be-forgotten mysterious Ajax, should he be found out. Mr Jeffreys was quite in his place as "Mr. Johnson," and kept things well a-going. One or two of the conundrums may please our readers by repetition. 'What newspaper does a girl like best when a gentleman is giving her a kiss? No 'Observers,' no 'Spectators,' but as many 'Times' as you like.' 'Why may Rothwell be considered a suitable place for a military centre? Because there is a Marshal(l), a Major, a lot of big guns near, and the rising generation are training under (H)arms.' 'Why is Shrove Tuesday not a Tuesday? Because it's a Fr(y)day.'

While the company are to be complimented on their amusing entertainment, it is due to Mr. W. Lockwood that the musical portion has been entirely left in his hands, and besides officiating at the piano most efficiently, he has had to arrange the band parts and act as musical director. His work was doubly difficult on Tuesday, as the first and second violinists, as well as Mr. Carr, (viola), did not turn up, but their places had to be supplied at the shortest notice, Mr. W. H Flockton, as violincellist, being the only one of the four 'strings' who took his proper place.

The comic sketch "Fleece'em and Co., is not badly conceived, and the performers, separately taken, were well up to their work, but we fancy there was some little lack of spirit and joint action on this evening, which rather told against the otherwise amusing piece of play. That Mr. Smith, as the doctor, Messrs. Flockton and Little as his assistants, Mr. West as 'Shirker,' Mr. Craven as 'policeman,' and above all, Mr. Jackson as the "strong-minded maid of all work" did well will be acknowledged by all, and had there been a good attendance, no doubt the thing would have 'gone' up to the mark, but it was "all on account of Eliza," and so we must leave it, and thank them.

We sincerely trust the next visit of the Choral Society may be more fortunate, and more largely appreciated. The voices, generally, are well modulated, and join very pleasingly in harmony, and the kindly feeling which prompts these gentlemen to take so much trouble should be better acknowledged.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in Packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence for afternoon use.

TEMPERANCE LECTURE.

On Wednesday evening, a lecture, under the auspices of the Rothwell Temperance Society, was delivered in the large hall of the Mechanics' Institute, by Mr. J. Parker, of Leeds, entitled—"Will it pay."

Mr. W. Batty occupied the chair, but the the audience was exceedingly small, and compares most unfavourably with some of the meetings held about eight months ago; what is the reason?

After the chairman's address, the lecturer proceeded to show that the drinking customs impair our national character and reputation, and that drink is fatal to many, dangerous to most, and of no use to anybody. If this is the case how can it pay?

Votes of thanks to the lecturer and chairman brought the meeting to a close.

CONCERT AT SWILLINGTON.

A concert for the benefit of the Leeds Infirmary was given in the Swillington School-room on Thursday the 16th instant, when a varied and attractive programme was provided. The audience was very good, and the performance on the whole deserving of high praise.

The pianoforte duett "Il Corricolo" which opened the programme was brilliantly played by Misses Morehead and Middlemiss. Miss Bingham's fine voice and expressive style were heard to great advantage in her two songs 'At the Ferry' and 'Two's company.' Miss Blackburn's charming rendering of Wakefield's piquant song "No, Sir!" made us regret that this was her only appearance during the evening. Miss Middlemiss gave in a very pleasant manner, the old favourite "Jock o' Hazeldean." Captain Bingham contributed two songs, "Some day" and a "Hunting song" which found great favour with the audience. He also joined Miss Bingham in Kuchen's duett 'The Swallows.' A notable feature of the concert was the masterly performance of two duetts for violin and piano, by Masters Craven, which fully deserved the enthusiastic applause it evoked. One or two part songs were essayed but proved the least successful part of the programme. Readings were given by the Rev. J. M'Carthy and Mr. Raper, while the tastes of the lovers of comedy, were catered for by Mr. Ilderton in his 'character songs.'

It is to be hoped the concert was as pecuniarily successful as it certainly deserved to be both from the excellence of its object, and its own merit.

FOOTBALL.

OULTON v. SHEFFIELD WALKLEY.

The return match between these two organizations was played on the Queen's ground at Sheffield on Saturday last. The home club had whipped up a very strong team including such noted exponents of the dribbling rules as W Mosforth, of 'International' fame, J Hudson and H Ledger, of county honours. The day was not favourable for the game, a stiffish breeze blowing from goal to goal. Oulton won the toss, and decided to have the wind at their backs. The game was of full time, contested in two halves of 45 minutes each. J W Bentley set the ball a rolling, and Mosforth and Allen (left wings) were first to shew up. Davey, one of the Oulton halves, in endeavouring to stop their career was disabled, which circumstance did not improve the chances of the visitors. With ten men against such an eleven as the home team put in the field, the Oultonians were kept hard at work. From a splendid throw by Hutchinson, Abbey obtained the ball, and eluding Lane, the back, secured the desired result by a good sharp kick. This roused the home team, and the forwards, led on by Mosforth, Allen, and Ollerenshaw, and ably backed up by J W Bentley and Hudson, made a determined attack on the visitors' fortress, which they succeeded in capturing, Allen doing the needful. A series of attacks on the Sheffield goal, were frustrated by the good play of Ledger and Lane, whose coolness and judgment were prominent throughout the game. Abbey was the next to shew prominence and his dribbles and dodging on the left often made the custodian of the home goal very uneasy. A brilliant piece of play by West did not escape the notice of the spectators, and soon after half time was called, the score standing at one goal each. Boothroyd resumed hostilities, and the home forwards were soon busy in the Oulton goal; the safe play of Wilmot and Jowett, however, prevented any tangible result. After ten minutes play, a splendid centre by Smith was steered through the Oulton goal by Mosforth, who had now changed to centre. Hutchinson again kicked off, the ball, however, soon found itself in the visitors' goal mouth, and many splendid shots were wonderfully kept out by Bradley. The visitors' forwards again roused up and from a throw by West, Abbey secured the sphere and made a beautiful pass to Boothroyd who succeeded in again lowering the home goal, thus making the score equal. Hard lines were now experienced by the Oultonians who had the misfortune to have their custodian partially disabled. At once the home forwards commenced a severe onslaught, and notwithstanding the plucky efforts of Gosney, Hutchinson and Mirfin, they secured another goal fifteen minutes before 'no side,' and in this short space of time they added other four goals. After a hard, fast and pleasant game Oulton were defeated by seven goals to two. The home forwards played the passing game to perfection, and it was a real treat to witness their play. For the losers all worked hard against such odds, and none harder than Abbey, Hutchinson and Boothroyd.

A strong Sheffield team is down to play at Oulton on Saturday April 1st including two internationals, and four or five county men, and a rare treat is in store for lovers of football. Subjoined are the teams:—

WALKLEY.—H Ledger, goal; W Lane, H Powell, backs; J W Bentley, (capt). F Lee, J Hudson, half-backs; W Allen, W Mosforth, left wing; W Bentley, centre, H Ollerenshaw, J H Smith, right wing. Referee, Mr. J A Frost.

ROTHWELL HARMONIC v. BIRDWELL.—The return match between these clubs, was played at Rothwell last Saturday, when the Harmonic team beat Birdwell by one goal to love. Shortly after 3 35 the players took their places in the field, the Birdwell captain won the toss and chose to play with the wind; the ball was set in motion by one of the home forwards, and by splendid passing the visitors brought it straight down the field but the backs put it out of danger; after this, they had several splendid shies at the goal but failed to score, the ball was kept well in the home quarters all the first half. Half-time was called and ends were changed, the ball was again set in motion but was quickly returned by the home half-backs; the home forwards now got hold of the leather and took it to the visitors' goal, but failed to score, this gave the visitors a six yards kick; after this, the home forwards played well to a man, and they soon secured a goal. The following did good service for the Harmonic:—H Taylor, W H Ward, and W Jackson.

ROTHWELL v. STOURTON ROVERS.—Played on the ground of the latter, on Saturday last, and after a close game, resulted in a win for the Rovers, by five goals to four. For Rothwell, Dobson played in good style, and was well backed up by the rest of the team; whilst for the Rovers, W. Gillings, (who kicked three goals) Lunn and Stringer, worked well.

OULTON VICTORIA v. MEANWOOD 2nd Team.—Played at Oulton on Saturday and resulted in a victory for Oulton by 4 goals to 1.

HUNSLET WESLEYANS v. ALTOFTS.—Played at Altofts on Saturday and resulted in a tie, each side securing a goal.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—The Great Need.—The blood is the life, and on its purity our health as well as our existence depends. These Pills thoroughly cleanse the vital fluid from all contaminations, and by that means strengthen and invigorate the whole system, healthily stimulate sluggish organs, repress over-excited action, and establish order of circulation and secretion throughout every part of the body. The balsamic nature of Holloway's Pills exercises marvellous power in giving tone to debilitated and nervous constitutions. These pills dislodge all obstructions, both in the bowels and elsewhere, and are, on that account, much sought after for promoting regularity of action in young females and delicate persons who are naturally weak, or have from some cause become so.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—The quality of beef at today's show was very satisfactory, and there being a large attendance of buyers, last week's prices were well sustained. The restrictions are still in force and owing to these no store market was held and only a few fat pigs were penned.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

WAKEFIELD CORN, Friday, 12.45 p.m.—There is a moderate attendance at our market this morning, but millers show little disposition for business even at the decline of 1s. per qr., which would be conceded by holders. Maltsters also do not appear inclined to buy, and on the few sales made late rates are obtained. Beans, oats, and maize steady Weather fine and rather cold.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

THERE was a hint in last week's Rothwell Times, to the local committee of the proposed railway which I hope they will give immediate attention to.

There is not the slightest doubt that a large number of signatures in favor of the scheme could be obtained in Oulton and Woodlesford, as both villages will undoubtedly receive benefit from the railway, through the additional communication with other places which will be given by it, and if the committee are really anxious, as I believe they are, to further the interests of the scheme, let them at once set about commencing a thorough canvass of the two villages, and I will undertake to say that the signatures to the petition will be as numerous as in any other district on the proposed line, of similar population.

HE was a very smart young man, and no one who did not know him would have thought that he was not all that he appeared to be from the neatness of his attire, and the refinement of his speech. The other night he thought he would give his girl a treat, so he took her to the pantomine at the Grand, and as a matter of course went into the stalls, but judge of his horror and dismay, when they had got comfortably settled down in their places, to hear the harsh and discordant voice of a village chum hail him from the pit, "I say, Jim lad, thah's agoing it, but doant ferget 'at we've that pig ta kill i't mornin'."

THE minstrel party gave their entertainment at the Rothwell Mechanics' Institute on Tuesday evening, but from some reason or other, there was only a very meagre audience to greet them on their first appearance at Rothwell, and although the pecuniary object of the concert was to help to defray the expense of the platform enlargement, I don't suppose that the alterations will be paid for very much sooner than they would have been had the concert not taken place.

As the programme was exactly the same as at Woodlesford, and as it has so recently been criticised and criticised, I shall not enter into details, but content myself with a few general observations, as ascertained from reliable sources.

I have just said that the programme was the same as at Woodlesford, but in this I am slightly in error, as the 'Awkward Squad' business was left out, but I cannot say that this omission was any very great loss to the audience.

I am afraid I must complain to my friends on their want of punctuality, which is gradually becoming more marked. I cannot see any reason why they should not be able to commence at the time fixed, as well as ten minutes afterwards. There is nothing like a punctual start for securing the favor of an expectant audience, and nothing is more calculated to create dissatisfaction and a disposition to be captious on the part of an audience, than a long wait at the commencement.

Let the minstrels remember this in future, and they will find it will serve their turn in the end

Messrs. "Bones" and "George" introduced several local conundrums and jokes into their conversations, which were well received, and and deservedly so, as they were good, but I think that one about match-making is not altogether new. I fancy something very like it was given two years ago by Messrs. Purdy, Harms and Co., in a similar entertainment. The songs and choruses were given in a creditable manner, but with the exception of Mr. W. H. Little, the soloists all failed to elicit an encore. The farce was not so well done as at Woodlesford, though why this should be so I cannot imagine; there was a want of smoothness about the action, and there appeared to be occasional halts without any object, although to give the performers every credit, which is justly due, I must say that the characters were well sustained.

"ICONOCLAST," or whatever name the late member for Northampton chooses to be distinguished, has once more brought upon himself the inevitable and just consequences of his high handed style of proceedings with regard to his seat in the House of Commons. Mr. Bradlaugh must be either a very inconsistent man or a person of weak intellect, otherwise he would not have acted as he has done. In the first place, he refuses to take the oath, because he regards the words as meaningless and not binding upon his conscience, then he offers to take the oath and thereby go through the form of an avowed mockery; he afterwards makes public through the medium of the newspapers his intention of forcibly entering the House and secures a large crowd of spectators to witness an evidently rehearsed theatrical display, after which he subsides for a time into obscurity, where he remains until the opening of the present session of Parliament, whereupon he once more turns up and obtains, again through the medium of the newspapers, that amount of public notoriety without which he would be at best a very insignificant sort of person. The crowning scene was enacted on Tuesday and Wednesday, when Mr. Bradlaugh deliberately insulted the whole House of Commons by administering the oath to himself! and by taking his seat on both days in defiance of the ruling of the chair. The sentence of expulsion afterwards passed by the House needs but to be confirmed by the thoughtful section of the electors of Northampton, and Mr. Bradlaugh will be relegated to that obscurity from which he ought never to have been allowed to emerge.

I NOTICE that Mr. Longbottom has been falling foul of another School Board report, but I am not quite clear what it is he is driving at; there is one thing in the letter, whatever may be the point at issue between Mr. Longbottom and anyone else which demands attention, and that is the attendance of children at both the Woodlesford and Oulton Schools, which is anything but what it should be. Why dont the School Board move in this matter; as I have previously pointed out this duty is clear enough; every child in the district of school age (so says the act of Parliament) must attend school every time the school is open, unless prevented by illness or other reasonable cause.

Now I will ask anyone who chooses to take the trouble to do it, to take a walk any day in the week round Oulton and Woodlesford during school hours, and keep count of the number of children that he sees who ought to be at school, and if he does not find from twenty to thirty in each village of such absentees, let him publicly announce the fact in these columns, and I will say no more about it.

CONSERVATIVE LECTURE AT LOFTHOUSE.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times

Dear Sir,

It is much to be regretted that your report of the Conservative meeting held at Lofthouse a fortnight ago is not longer and more explicit than it is.

From your report I am by no means able to make out what Mr. Reid means by the title of his lecture, as any principle of our constitution has no reference to the Afghan war or the Eastern question, nor am I able to see how the principle of our constitution 'that the king can do no wrong' is in any way connected with Mr. Gladstone's Mid-Lothian speeches. On the whole it appears to me that Mr. Reid must have been reading Artemus Ward's works and so far copied his style as to say nothing at all on the subject he was to speak about. By the light of one fact, however, we may connect the title with the lecture, and that fact is that the lecture was got up by a Tory Association and part of the Tory party have arrogated to themselves the title of Constitutionalists. This, however, is quite a misnomer; unless we are to read it as meaning a party who wish to destroy the constitution.

Mr Reid, however, says that one of his principles is to maintain the throne. He seems to have forgotten that in the British constitution there is another element—the people—and that by an indiscriminate maintenance of the rights of the throne, the rights of the other element are sacrificed.

The question then arises. Is the party who maintains the right of one element more than another friendly or adverse to the constitution? My impression is that the maintainance of one element at the expense of the other is an evil, and the party who does this is really an enemy of the constitution.

But how would Mr. Reid maintain the throne? Would he maintain it by imposing another Corn Law in opposition to the wishes of the people, and by a House of Parliament surrounded by soldiers? Would he maintain the throne by resisting the demands of the people for an extension of the franchise till handbills were again posted saying that no imperial taxes would be paid till the reform bill or some other measure was passed, as was the case in 1830-32? One thing Mr. Reid seems to forget—that in the British Empire the people are the supreme rulers and Government is the servant. Parliament, or the legislature, makes such laws as the people wish, and the executive carries out such laws as Parliament makes; and the party which dares to oppose the wish of the people are the enemies of the constitution inasmuch as they drive the masses to the point whence anarchy must arise. The only means of maintaining the throne is by extending the power of the masses and not by keeping the power as it is or curtailing it. And of one thing we may be sure—that if this method be taken the throne will be secure and in the main justice will be done; but if any other be attempted the throne will fly like chaff before the wind, and revolution will prevail. Therefore, the Tory party, the party that during the present century has always been the block in the way of progress, is not the party that is friendly to the constitution, but the one that is an element of danger and revolution.

Mr. Reid says that another principle is to support the House of Lords. But how will he do this as long as the House of Lords is constituted as it is; will he continue to admit children in the arms as legislators as can be the case now?

As it is that House is an institution; powerful for nothing but to make mischief, to create agitation and confusion. As a second chamber it is useless and will so remain until it is so altered as to be in unison with the times we live in, but Mr. Reid will maintain the House of Lords. Will he maintain it as it is or as it ought to be? If the first; he cannot do it; if the second, he does not say anything about it, and all the guide he gives by which any opinion can be found is that it is the "Conservative policy to legislate upon a natural process." Now this style of doing work is very easy. Just sit down and do nothing and tell the people you are legislating on a natural process and then you have it, if what the Tories have hitherto done be any guide. Next, Mr. Reid will maintain the connection between Church and State. One would think he had picked up a file of newspapers about forty years old and committed to memory one of James Stewart Worley's clock case speeches.

But how will Mr. Reid manage this connection between Church and State. The church has within itself elements which ultimately will sever it from the state. There are disagreements which make it impossible for it to work harmoniously, and Mr. Reid left us in the dark as to what means he would try to bring these conflicting atoms together and make a manageable body. There are abuses in the Church which cannot be dealt with by any except the parishioners; but leaving the parishioners to manage for themselves is disestablishment with a vengeance. How Mr. Reid would confer favourable terms of commerce on the colonies he does not inform us, and I must confess ignorance of any mode by which terms more favourable than those which now exist can be conferred. We have no import duties to speak of and consequently import duties in colonial produce cannot be reduced. Mr. Lowther, now that he is in Parliament, has thrown to the winds all his fine promises of a 5s. duty on corn, otherwise he might have proposed to levy it on all except colonial corn, and this would have met Mr. Reid's proposal. The late government, of which Mr. Lowther was a member, made a declaration that it was impossible to return to the old system of protective duties, and as a member of the government Mr. Lowther approved of the declaration. I am totally unable to understand Mr. Reid's next principle. He would uphold the prestige of the empire as the first amongst the nations of the earth. Whatever this is, it looks patriotic. Patriotism is a very admirable virtue, but some of it is worth very little.

When the patriot is not determined to

"Plant his foot upon the line that justice draws,
And will prevail or perish in her cause,"

it is very liable to running into bullyism, and I think if fairly put to it, Mr Reid would hesitate before giving his support to that.

In the early part of his lecture he found fault with the policy which has secured for us peace with all the world, but it would be somewhat uncharitable to say that he would approve of seeing all nations at loggerheads with one another, so that we might shew how well we were prepared to fight. My opinion is that we can maintain our prestige very well, by shewing that as a nation we sincerely desire "to do justice, love, mercy, and walk humbly before God." And now for the last of Mr Reid's principles of constitutionalism. He would support 'the hallowing of education by the leavening influence of religious principles being made a necessary part of the curriculum of elementary and other schools.' This is a most elegant phrase, and as it contains a Latin word, it sounds very learned; but if Mr Reid has read very many of the debates on education, he has found that this is a principle which belongs quite as much to the Liberal party as it does to Tories or Constitutionalists. Every one of common sense must desire that the children should have religious principles instilled into their minds. The difficulty was not in deciding that this should be or ought to be done, but in finding out how to do it, in such a way that the conscientious scruples of all should be respected.

As in the rest of his lecture, on this point he left us in the dark as to how he would accomplish his object; all he says, he would make it a 'necessary part of the curriculum,' but there is something to do besides placing it on the time-sheet. If all persons believed alike, perhaps it might be done; but they don't believe alike; some think one doctrine right and some another.

"As when two pilgrims in a forest stray,
Each may be lost, but each in his own way,
So fares it with the multitude beguiled
In vain opinion's waste and dangerous wild;
Ten thousand rove the brakes and thorns among,
Some eastward and some westward, but all wrong,
But here, alas, the fatal difference lies,
Each one's belief is right in his own eyes.

And every parent has a decided objection to having his child taught that which he conscientiously believes to be wrong, and what religious doctrine is there that everyone believes right and nobody objects to. Had Mr Reid pointed this out his lecture would not have been barren of result; he would have deserved the thanks, not merely of the meeting at Lofthouse, but of all parties—Liberals and Conservatives—from end to end of the kingdom.

I may say of this lecture as it was once said of Lord Beaconsfield; he spoke upwards of an hour, and said—nothing.

I am,
Yours truly,
F.J.

OULTON-WITH-WOODLESFORD SCHOOL BOARD.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

In his letter of last week, Mr Longbottom has thought fit to take exception to the wording of the report of the last meeting of our Board, and as I am responsible for the appearance of that report, I do not feel justified in passing over without remark, the accusations contained in the said letter.

Mr Longbottom implied that the report contains 'mis-statements, inaccuracies, and omissions,' and proceeds to correct one of the so-called mis-statements.

Permit me to state in the first instance that the account of the Board meeting, so far as it had reference to H. M. Inspector's report on the schools, was made up partly of quotations from such report, and partly of a summarised version thereof, the latter form being adopted for the sake of brevity, as I did not wish to occupy your space or trouble your readers with any comparatively uninteresting matter.

I should have been glad if Mr Longbottom, in making his charge of 'mis-statements, inaccuracies, and omissions,' had given the public and myself an opportunity of learning the grounds upon which such charge was made, but this, with the one exception with which I shall presently have to deal, he has entirely failed to do, the natural impression created by his letter being that I have wilfully and with the deliberate intention of putting a slight upon him, inserted an unfair and inaccurate report of the business of the last meeting, and I appeal to you, Sir, and to the public, as to whether this is a fair and manly way of making a charge of this description.

The 'mis-statement' specially complained of appears to be my interpretation of the words 'the attendance does not appear to be so good as it might be,' and I respectfully submit to you, Sir, that it does not require any very violent stretch of the imagination to construe those words into a 'complaint about the small attendance.'

The fact that the note respecting the attendance is attached to the report on the boys' department, is accounted for by its occupying precisely the same position in the report of H. M. Inspector, and as Mr Longbottom admits that he has 'repeatedly called the attention of the Board to the irregularity of the attendance,' and, I will add, that of H. M. Inspector also, I am of opinion that he himself is primarily responsible for the appearance of the note in juxtaposition with the report on the boys' school.

I will leave Mr Longbottom to point out, if he can, the 'inaccuracies,' being unable myself to discover any; in the meantime, I ask the public to suspend judgment on the second charge in the indictment.

The third charge, that the report contains 'omissions,' possesses such a delicious aroma of an Irish 'bull,' that I can scarcely retain sufficient gravity wherewith to meet it seriously. Probably there may have been some few small items of no particular interest to your readers omitted, but I venture to think that upon the whole, the report was as 'clear, concise and impartial' as it could possibly be made. Perhaps your erudite correspondent might be able to frame more satisfactory reports of the proceedings at our Board meetings, and is aspiring to the position of special reporter to the Rothwell Times; if so, I am not at all ambitious to retain the office of furnishing the School Board reports, and would gladly relinquish it to him, providing that he can obtain the requisite authority from the Board. I may say that I did not in the first instance seek the duty, but have always to the best of my ability fulfilled the task in a fair and impartial manner, and reported events as they have transpired, and shall continue to do so, as long as I retain the duty.

As it appears that I am shortly to be arraigned before the tribunal of the School Board upon the subject of my 'mis-statements, inaccuracies and omissions,' I must at once set about the serious task of my defence, and will therefore close my already too long letter.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
ROBERT J. SMITH,
Aire Vale Terrace, Clerk to the Board.
Woodlesford,
21st February, 1882.

POLICE NEWS.

WEST RIDING COURT.

THIS DAY, (FRIDAY).

MR TURNER AND THE MECHANICS' COMMITTEE.—The charges against Mr. Turner, barrister at law, for destroying the property of the Rothwell Mechanics' Institute, and for assaulting the Hall-keeper in the execution of his duties, was heard to day, at Wakefield. The first summons was for wilfully or maliciously burning and taking away from the Institute several papers entitled the 'Church Standard,' as was reported in these columns last week. Mr. Hall appeared for defendant, while Mr. Williams represented the trustees of the Mechanics Institution. Mr. Williams opened the case, and the first witness called was the hall-keeper, who stated that on Thursday previous to the burning of the said paper, he had had a conversation with defendant, who at the time said that he had a good mind to burn it, but witness told him he had better not, and said that the right way was to write to the secretaries, and then a meeting of the Committee would be called, and if they thought proper the objectionable paper would be removed. Mrs. Taylor, the hall keeper's wife, was next called and deposed that on the Saturday morning following the conversation with her husband, she was in the hall cleaning, when Mr. Turner came into the reading room; she followed him, and saw him looking over the papers which had just arrived. She counted them, and asked him to let her look at the one he had in his hand. He said he would, and that he was going to burn it; with that he deliberately put it upon the fire, and exclaimed as the ashes went up the chimney, 'There goes Heberden's religion out at the top.' Several other witnesses were called who corroborated the statements. The bench ordered him to pay 30 shillings. The second summons was for the assault on the hall-keeper while performing his duties on the 14th inst., on which day it appears that the hall-keeper had had a notice from defendant stating that he would come to the Institute at 7.45., and claim his right as a member to use the reading room, in spite of the Committee's decision that he be expelled. The hall-keeper had orders to see the resolve of the committee carried out, therefore when Mr Turner arrived with Mr B Batty, he was standing at the door waiting for him. He let Mr Batty pass, and then put himself in the way of Mr Turner, and told him that he could not enter, as he was not a member. Defendant then threw down his stick and said 'I will let you see,' and at once collared Taylor. A scuffle ensued, which ultimately ended in both falling upon the palings. This scene was enacted 3 times; P S Turton at length arrived, and advised Mr Turner to go home quietly, which he did. The magistrates dismissed this case, and proceeded with the third case, which was for damaging the property of the Institute, last Monday evening, particulars of which will be found in another column. The magistrates said it was a most disgraceful case, and they were sorry that they could not do anything in the matter, but advised the prosecutors to take it to the County Court to get damages.

It is recommended by the entire medical profession as the most elegant preparation for the skin that is known. A boon to sensitive skins. By all Chemists, in tablets, 6d. and 1s.—The Albion Sanitary Soap Co., 532, Oxford Street, London.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.

THROAT AFFECTIONS AND HOARSENESS.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." These famous "lozenges" are now sold by most respectable chemists in this country at 1s. 1½d. per box. People troubled with a "hacking cough," a "slight cold," or bronchial affections, cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious Pulmonary and Asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government Stamp around each box.—Prepared by JOHN I. BROWN & SONS, Boston, U.S. European depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

EAST AND WEST YORKSHIRE UNION RAILWAY.

The day for lodging petitions against the Bill having now passed, we are aware of the amount and quality of the forces arrayed in opposition to us, in our endeavour to secure connection with the great world around us. The opposition to the project comes from various quarters, and is both numerous and serious. But are we therefore to give way to fear and doubt? Nay, now that the fight has fairly commenced, let every one stand to his post, and use all his influence and knowledge to assist in the furtherance of the scheme. If we miss this opportunity, we are shut up for ever, probably; no better chance can possibly turn up. We should be pleased to receive verbally or in writing any information tending to shew the advantage the line will be to individuals in this locality so that such facts may be placed before the Parliamentary Committee, as will prove indisputably the absolute necessity and advantage of the proposed Railway in the matter of sending or receiving traffic of various descriptions. By this means, notwithstanding all arguments to the contrary, we shall prove that this line is necessary and desirable, and will turn out advantageous and profitable to the people dwelling in the district.

The prospects of success are most cheering. The Leeds Corporation and Chamber of Commerce, the Bradford Corporation and Chamber of Commerce, the Hull, Wakefield, Dewsbury, and Batley Corporations; the Rothwell and Castleford Local Boards, as well as four-fifths of the landowners through whose estate it is proposed the line shall pass, have endorsed the project, and we understand that influential members of some of these bodies have consented to give evidence in favour of it when it reaches the Committee stage. The unanimity which has prevailed amongst the bodies in considering matter, warrants the assumption that the line, if well managed, would have a beneficial effect, so far as the trading interests of the places mentioned are concerned.

The petition of the inhabitants of Rothwell, Lofthouse, and Carlton has been very numerously signed, only an insignificant few having declined for selfish reasons to help us on to this valuable boon.

There is no doubt, whatever, that with the improved facilities for carriage with the East and West Yorkshire Railway would afford, the mining industry of this district would be rendered much more prosperous than it can possibly be under present circumstances, by giving a more direct and cheaper access to Hull for the export trade of the northern section of our coalfield.

Between Burton Salmon and Drax, large quantities of produce are raised, and by means of improved railway communication with the large markets of the West Riding, both producers and consumers would be benefitted. Very extensive beds of sandstone, found in our immediate neighbourhood, on being worked, would also add considerably to the traffic of the line.

The estimated cost, as before stated, including plant and rolling stock, is £510,000. The engineers are Mr. Malcolm Paterson and Mr. J. W. H White. The usual steps have been taken for obtaining powers for the construction. The plans have been deposited, the standing orders complied with, and the bill has been read for the first time. It is expected that the second reading will take place a week or ten days hence, and that the bill will be laid before a Committee a few days afterwards.

LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

The three retiring members this year are Mr. Charlesworth, Mr. W. Hargreaves, and Mr. Newsome, all of whom lay claim, and justly so, to a renewal of the ratepayers' confidence, and seek re-election.

The Liberal Association we hear, having taken a vote on the several candidates, will run the two highest numbers; Mr. J. Turner, junr., 31, Mr. B. Clark, 15, Mr. Newsome, 10, Mr. S. Batty, 9.

A number of Mr. Lockwood's friends are also desirous of seeing him on the Board, and his name will no doubt again appear as a candidate.

Possibly there are other gentlemen preparing to stand, but the six above mentioned are all the names that have come to our knowledge.

BOARD SCHOOL CONCERT.

The children attending the Board Schools at Rothwell, celebrated their second festival last Tuesday, when prizes were distributed, and an entertainment given in the large hall of the Mechanics' Institute

The proceedings commenced at seven o'clock, the enlarged platform having been fitted with raised seats in semi-circular form, on which about 100 boys, girls, and infants were seated, the members of the Harmonic Union occupying a position in the centre, The hall was crowded with parents and children, and a number of friends interested in juvenile efforts.

Mr. W Hargreaves, chairman of the Board, was warmly applauded on taking the chair, as was each one, young or old, after performing the duty assigned. The audience was evidently in thorough good temper, and was ready to give a good clap whenever there was an opportunity.

The chairman, in a short and suitable address, expressed his pleasure in being present at their second concert. There had been considerable improvement in the work done in the schools, the grant this year being thirty per cent. more than last. After a few other remarks, Mr. Hargreaves proceeded to distribute the prizes to those who had passed the examination, and had attended regularly, the boys 400 or more, and the girls and infants 350 times or more; books were given to those able to read them, and cards to a few little ones.

The prizes given, the concert programme was commenced, and both for variety and successful execution, we have not spent a more interesting evening at a juvenile entertainment than on Tuesday last. The glee, "See our oars with feathered spray," by the scholars and the Harmonic Union, went with a swing and purity of voice which at once struck the key-note of success. Master R. Allen followed with a clearly-pronounced recitation, "The Wreck of the Hesperus." The school song, "The Holiday," came next, with the well-managed echo by the girls. "Far away," creditably sung by Misses R. Varley and A. Sanderson, was succeeded by a nice recitation, "What our clothes are made of," by the infants. The next piece was a glee by the Harmonic Union, "Queen of the valley," and we certainly do not exaggerate when we opine that this was certainly the prettiest and best executed piece of vocal harmony that has been given in the Hall. Not only were the time and tune well kept, notwithstanding several catchy points, but the voices were in such capital trim, and so evenly balanced. We believe we are supported in our remarks by many well able to judge, and very heartily we congratulate our friends on having attained to such excellence. A continued attention to this important matter of 'blend' and 'emphasis,' will place our Harmonic Union above any glee parties in the district. An agreeable variation was now introduced by the playing of Miss M. C. Harms, who well rendered the "March of the men of Harlech." Masters C. G. Harms and H. White enacted a scene from "King John," in which the two little fellows sustained their parts excellently, that of Master Harms entailing a considerable stretch of memory. The madrigal "Now is the month of Maying," by the scholars and Union went beautifully. Master Hugh Harms as "The Farmer Lad" took immensely, maintaining throughout his song, notwithstanding the suppressed laughter of the audience, an air of nonchalance which only increased the success of his effort, and a repetition of the song was persistently demanded. The infants, under Miss Jowitt, scored a special line in their Kindergarten song "The Carpenter," in which the several tools used by that craftsman were illustrated by the little people, greatly to the amusement of those who listened. "The Well of St. Keyne" was very correctly recited by Miss E. W. Denton; followed by the Harmonic Union in "If love and all the world" in good style, which was succeeded by the simple song "Home again," by Misses F. Varley and H. Gains, and by the pretty school song, "Summer Breezes."

At this point the programme was broken in order to present a well-earned "thanks" to Mr. Harms, Miss Jowitt, and the Harmonic Union.

Mr. J. R. Seanor, in moving the resolution, was pleased to see the increased interest manifested in education, as shewn by the assembly to-night. In paying a high tribute to Mr. Harms, the speaker referred to his qualities not only as a school teacher, but also to his effective help and success in other matters, one side of which was to be seen in to-night's entertainment. He very cordially joined with the vote to Mr. Harms, their obligation to the Harmonic Union, who had so kindly assisted in filling up the background.

Mr Batty very cordially seconded the vote of thanks, expressing his high gratification with the evening's performance.

The chairman, in putting the motion, specially complimented the Harmonic Union on the way they sang the "Queen of the Valley," and heartily agreed with all that had been said in praise of Mr. Harms' ability and willingness.

The vote of thanks having been very warmly carried, Mr. Harms replied, expressing his pleasure that their efforts had been satisfactory, and his thanks for the praise tendered to himself; "a little praise is a word of comfort, although there had been much hard work, but still it had been a labour of love." He would like to include Miss Jowitt with himself, in reference to their work, as the better Miss Jowitt did her part in the Infants' school, the more easy it was for him when the infants reached the higher classes. He was also deeply obliged to the Harmonic Union for their ready and valuable services both to-night and whenever he had asked their assistance.

The programme was then taken up again, and a recitation given by Master William Ward, "The Inch-cape Bell." The appearance of Mr. Harms as "The Irish Schoolmaster," provoked roars of laughter, and as the amusing song proceeded, and the "A B C" was taught, the fun constantly increased; the introduction of a "standard" spelling and parsing in the most ludicrous manner was a capital hit, and it was no wonder a repetition was long and loudly demanded. As the time was getting on, however, Mr. Harms asked Miss Jowitt to proceed with the infants' recitation "The Fox and the Hen," which was very nicely given.

The tasteful serenade "Sleep, gentle lady," though the last on the list, shewed no lack of power or beauty in its execution, and fitted the programme with as pretty and succesful a finish as was the introduction, forming on the whole an excellent model for the future of juvenile entertainments The National Anthem concluded the evening's performance.

By the kind generosity of Mr. Jas. Batty, one of the members of the Board, an orange was presented at the close to every scholar attending the schools.

The proceeds of the concert are for the purchase of the prizes, &c., presented to the children.

NORTHAMPTON ELECTION.

The election for Northampton consequent upon the expulsion from the House of Commons of Mr. Charles Bradlaugh took place yesterday, and the result was declared last evening, as follows:—

MR. BRADLAUGH (R)	3,796
MR. CORBETT (C)..............	3,688
Majority for Mr. Bradlaugh......	108

There was a scene of the wildest enthusiasm when the result was made known. Mr. Bradlaugh moved a vote of thanks to the Mayor, which was carried enthusiastically.

A telegram received at midnight says—Mr. Bradlaugh who on the declaration of the poll received an ovation from his supporters, left the town by the ten minutes past nine train for London, and was expected to proceed to the House of Commons. At the time of the despatch of the message, 10.30, all was quiet.

ROTHWELL DEBATING SOCIETY.

Last Wednesday evening, Mr. John Batty, F.R.H.S., read a paper, entitled:—"A leaf out of an old Parish Book," and a very long, but also very interesting, leaf it proved to be, taking 1 hour and 49 minutes to read Mr. Batty was warmly applauded on resuming his seat.

ATTEMPT TO SHOOT THE QUEEN.

Last evening, at 5.25, Her Majesty the Queen arrived at Windsor from London, when a large crowd of spectators, including many Eton boys, assembled to witness her arrival. Her Majesty walked across the platform to a Royal carriage which was standing outside the waiting-room. The Queen's personal attendant had ascended the footman's seat, when a man standing at the entrance of the station yard, amidst a number of spectators who had assembled to witness the arrival of the Queen, deliberately pointed a pistol at Her Majesty's carriage, and discharged it. From the report which was made, the pistol did not appear to have been heavily loaded, and did not take effect. The man, who was miserably clad, was at once seized by the police and taken to the police station followed by a number of Eton lads, who would fain have lynched the would be murderer. The fellow's name is Roderick Maclean, about 30 years of age. His only reason for committing the outrage, was that he "did it" because he was starving.

Her Majesty appeared not in the least flurried, and it is hoped no serious result will follow the alarm which must have been occasioned in her mind.

Congratulations were at once sent from all the Courts of Europe and many distinguished personages telegraphed or called, expressing their gratitude at Her Majesty's providential escape.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

On Monday evening, the usual fortnightly meeting of the Board took place in the Board Room, present—J. Charlesworth, Esq. (chairman) Messrs. W. Hargreaves, Holmes. H P. Newsome, J. Sanderson, S. Bramley, and the Clerk, Medical Officer, Treasurer, and Inspector.

The minutes ot last meetings were read, and confirmed with one small exception. This referred to a variation in the deposited plans of the East and West Yorkshire Union Railway from the plan submitted to the Local Board, as regards the manner of dealing with the three lanes between Wood Lane and the Leeds and Barnsdale Roads. An arrangement was resolved on to meet the engineer for the new line on Thursday, so as to consider the variation.

Medical Officer.—Dr. Heaps, the late medical officer to the Board, having resigned, it becomes necessary that the vacancy should be filled according to the regulations of the Local Government Board.

It was proposed by Mr. Hargreaves, that the clerk do advertise in the Rothwell Times for a Medical Officer to the Board up to Dec. 25th, 1882, at a salary at the rate of £30 a year. Seconded by the chairman and carried.

Health Report.—Dr. Glaister, deputy medical officer of health, presented his report for the past month as follows:-

To the Chairman and Members of the Rothwell Local Board.

Gentlemen,—I have to report that during the past four weeks we have had registered in the district 16 births and 11 deaths; for the corresponding period of last year there were 26 births and 4 deaths. The causes of death are, one male aged 6 weeks, convulsions; one female, 24 years, nipritis; one female, 2 years, atrophy; one male, 14 days, convulsions; one male, 19 months, convulsions; one female, 4½ years, pneumonia; one male, 61 years, abdominal tumour; one female, 1 year, measles; one female, 11 days, convulsions; one male, 77 years, Cerebral softening; one female, 11 months, convulsions.

The death rate for children has been high during the past month, no less than 5 being under one year. The death from measles occurred in the Stourton district, and is the first registered as being due to that disease. The epidemic, I am glad to state, is declining, though we have still a number of cases in the district. At present we have two cases of scarletina in the district, both in Wood Lane. They are progressing favourably, and arrangements have been made to have the houses disinfected in a few days.

JOHN GLAISTER, M.B.,
Deputy Medical Officer.

Mr. Hargreaves mentioned that he understood there were several cases of measles and scarletina in Carlton and Robin Hood, and it was resolved that the clerk write the Wakefield Sanitary Authority drawing their attention to the fact, as being dangerously near the Board's district.

Highways.—Mr. Jowitt having come to an arrangement with the Highway Committee, the revised form of contract was now agreed to. Mr. Jowitt's brothers, Robert and Joseph, were accepted as his bondsmen.

According to the Board's request, Mr. Farrer forwarded details of his valuation of metal on the sides of roads as left by Messrs. Elliott and Son, and due from the new contractors on the termination of their term

Mr. Holmes complained of the large traction engines which traverse the roads, with heavy weights of stone, sometimes as much as 15 tons, whereby serious damage is done to the roads He thought such cases should be treated as extraordinary traffic, and be charged accordingly. The owners of wherries carring these weights were not ratepayers, and although they damaged the roads so seriously, they paid nothing for the repairs. He thought these cases should be dealt with under the Locomotives and Highways Acts.

Mr. Hargreaves thought it was quite time to take the matter up.

The chairman enquired how they had done before, to which Mr. Hargreaves replied that this was from a new quarry.

Mr. Bramley enquired if the contractor had complained, if not, there was no need to trouble about it.

The chairman held that it did matter if the roads were seriously damaged by such traffic, as they were anxious to get their highways on to the County list.

Mr. Holmes replied that the contractor did complain, and it was the Board's duty to protect the roads from damage, the ratepayers from extra cost, and the contractor, too.

Mr. Newsome thought that as it appears there is an Act whereby extraordinary traffic can be charged for, the Board should see that such charge is made. Also as regards traction engines there is the Locomotives Act under which we can claim compensation.

After further conversation, the clerk was instructed to get up the case for next meeting.

Sewage of Rothwell.—Mr. Farrar writes to the Board that Messrs. Chapman & Sons have instructed him to value for them in regard to damages as owners of land used for the laying of sewage pipes.

Mr. Jowitt reported that during the last two weeks the contractors had laid 77 yards of pipes, one shaft, and 2 junctions in Royds Lane; 200 yards, 2 shafts, 2 lampholes, and 9 junctions in Smithson St.; and 70 yards and 2 junctions in Oulton Lane. There had also been several lengths of connections put down. The works were progressing pretty satisfactorily.

Mr. Holmes and the inspector were authorised to purchase for the Board some tubes and gulleys at the sale on Wednesday.

The question of price to be charged for fixing gulleys was also considered, but held over till next meeting, when some arrangement will be come to.

Eight o'clock motion.—Mr. Bramley gave notice last meeting that he should propose that the ordinary Board meetings close not later than 8 o'clock in the evening. At the suggestion of the chairman, however, the motion was adjourned till after the election.

Returning Officer.—Mr. Charlesworth having agreed to stand in the coming election of three members on the Board, the clerk asked the Board to appoint another gentleman as returning officer.

Mr. Newsome proposed that Mr. Holmes, having on a previous occasion very ably and courteously filled that position, he be again appointed returning officer for the election next month. Mr. Bramley cordially seconded the motion, which was carried.

Finance.—There being an unexpended balance of £62 17s. 10d., of the loan of £6725 granted by the Public Works Loan Commissioners for the water scheme, the department asked for a cheque for that amount, which was at once granted.

Railway Petition.—On the motion of Mr. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Newsome, a petition was signed and sealed, from the Rothwell Local Board, in support of the East and West Yorkshire Union Railway.

Gas Co.'s Bill.—The chairman wished to refer to a requisition he received a short time ago, signed by 20 ratepayers asking him to call a public meeting for the purpose of asking the Local Board to oppose the Bill being promoted in Parliament by the Rothwell Gas Light Company. He had at once taken legal advice on the question, and was informed that he was not compelled to call another public meeting. He was quite willing to call another public meeting, if the Board thought it would be any use; he was wishful to carry out the wish of the Board. He understood it would be too late now to oppose the Bill in the Commons, but they might oppose it in the Lords. The meeting would only be able to recommend the Board to oppose, and unless an alteration in the opinions of the members could be brought about, there would simply be a repetition of the previous meeting.

Mr. Sanderson said if that was the case, after so large a majority of the people were against the Bill, the Board was not a representative one.

The chairman pointed out that they were there to represent the ratepayers as a whole, and do their best for the district. He was perfectly willing to do as the Board wished.

Mr. Bramley thought if they could not get another member on the opposition side, it was no use doing anything further as a Board.

Mr. Hargreaves stated that a large ratepayer connected with the opposition had told him that he was perfectly satisfied with the Company's concessions, and he blamed the Board for not accepting them.

Mr. Holmes said that they had been told by Mr. Warren that the previous public meeting was an informal one. The Board have now considered the Bill, and another public meeting should now be called to know why the Board do not oppose. The ratepayers have then the power of applying to the Local Government Board to know why the Local Board are going in direct opposition to the ratepayerrs. He supposed, however, that it was now too late..

INQUEST AT STOURTON.

An inquest touching the death of James Crowther, aged 40 years, power-loom turner of 16, Copley street, New Wortley, was held at the Stourton Hotel, on Tuesday, before Thomas Taylor, Esq., coroner.

James Higgins, lock keeper, Thwaite Gate, said 'At 12.30, p.m. on Monday, I saw the body floating in the river Aire, from Leeds. I got a boat hook and pulled the body to the side of the river, and sent for the police.'

Eliza Mathews, unmarried, said 'I have lived with deceased six years as his wife; he was a sober, healthy man; I last saw him at 5 a.m. on the 17th of December, 1881, when he left home to go to his work; he has been missing ever since At 7 p.m. the same day, Joseph Ratcliffe, of Shipley, called and asked me where deceased was. The deceased made a will in my favour, and he was insured in the Prudential Society for £50.'

Lucy Crowther, wife of deceased, of Churwell, said 'My husband left me six years ago; he used to get drunk very often; I know him by a scar on the right hand.'

Alfred Walter Crowther, son of deceased, gave similar evidence to his mother.

Verdict returned,—'Found dead in the river Aire.'

FATAL ACCIDENT NEAR WOODLESFORD.

An inquest was held yesterday afternoon at the house of Mr Steel, Allerton Bywater, before Edward Carter, Esq., deputy coroner, on the body of James Henry Townsley, aged 16 years, of Shipley. From the evidence produced at the inquest it was elicited that the deceased acted as horse driver to his brother-in-law, Jonathan Cowman, master of the keel 'Canada,' and that last Saturday afternoon, about 3 o'clock, on entering Fish pond lock, the youth got foul of the 'trimmer line,' which pushed him into the lock, when the surging water forced the boat towards the side, and so crushed in the poor lad's head. Cowman heard the crush, and with Henry Hopkinson, the lock-keeper, rushed forward in time to seize and prevent the lad sinking. They stripped him, and put him to bed, and on arriving at Woodlesford lock, Dr. Nowell was speedily in attendance. There was, however, little or no hope for the boy from the first, as bleeding from nose, ears and mouth indicated extensive injury to the bones in the base of the skull. The lad's father, and subsequently his sorrowing mother came over to see him; he rallied for a short time, then after high maniacal delirium, he gradually succumbed, and died about 3 o'clock on Wednesday morning last, at Allerton Bywater.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and chy compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

FOOTBALL.

Rothwell Harmonic v. Stourton Rovers.—On Saturday last, the above teams met on the ground of the Harmonic, Carlton Lane, Rothwell. The Rovers having been victorious over Rothwell Juniors the Saturday previous to the above match, it was thought that a very tight game would be witnessed, but when the players made their appearance, it was seen that the home team were without their captain, his place being filled by Blackburn. The Harmonic won the toss and chose to play with the wind at their backs. The ball was put in motion at 4.30., and was started by the Rovers who took it as far as the home backs, the latter landing it well amongst their forwards who took it up to the visitors' goal; shies now became frequent, until at length one of their opponents' backs by a mistake kick, secured the first goal for the Harmonic. The leather being again placed in the centre of the ground soon found its way into the goalmouth of the Rovers and after a bit of splendid play on the part of the home team, followed by a neat shy from the foot of W. H. Ward, again secured the downfall of the visitors' stronghold for the second time; shortly after this half-time was called the score standing, Harmonic 2 goals to Rovers nil. It was rather amusing to see the Harmonic custodian amen at the spectators witnessing the match and who never had to stop one single ball during the first half. After a few minutes rest, the game was re-started by the home team, when it was seen that the Harmonic with the wind blowing in their faces were a more even match for the visitors, the leather travelling from one end to the other, but the 'scarlet and blacks' once more put on a spurt and took the ball down the field and again succeeded in lowering the visitors' colours for the third time. The sphere being again set rolling, nothing was further scored, and when time was called, the Harmonic took away the honour by 3 goals to love.

Doncaster Ellesmere v. Oulton.—This match was played at Oulton on Saturday last. The weather was unfavourable for good play, the wind blowing across the field. Ellesmere won the toss and chose to defend the top goal. Oulton was the first to assume the offensive, and after many narrow escapes the visitors' stronghold was captured by Abbey. Soon after Britton brought about a similar result. On changing ends the play was of a very tame and slow character, the ball being continually in touch. Taylor, the Ellesmere captain, captured the home citadel by a long shot. Nothing further happened, and a game of exceptional barrenness of good play ended in a win for Oulton by two goals to one.

MARKETS.

Leeds Corn, Tuesday.—There is a moderate attendance at our market this morning. Wheat must be quoted 1s. per qr. less on the week. Maize, beans, and peas about late rates. No change in the price of flour.—Leeds Corn Millers' Association Report.

Wakefield Cattle, Wednesday.—Notwithstanding very disagreeable weather—a constant downpour of rain prevailing—we had a fair attendance of buyers to-day, but owing to the heavy prices asked for stock—and especially for mutton—they hung back from purchasing. With a smaller supply prices ruled in favour of dealers. The fat beasts only numbered 1,200, being 200 less than last week, and about 700 or 800 less than the average at this time of the year. Those on offer were chiefly from the North, but included a few Lincolnshire and Irish animals. A number of fat calves on offer, which sold at 9d. per pound.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

I hope that Mr. John Turner, Junr., Barrister at Law, feels quite satisfied with himself after the proceedings at Wakefield on Friday last, and that he has properly relished the remarks made by the magistrates. I should have thought that anyone possessing the superior legal knowledge to which Mr. John Turner lays claim, would have known better than to act in the way in which he has done leaving out the question of common sense altogether. Doubtless when the committee of the Mechanics' Institute have recovered from this headstrong young gentleman the cost of repairing the damage done by him, he will have an idea that he has been made to look rather small in the eyes of the British public.

There seems to be a nice little quarrel brewing between two of the officials of the School Board if one may judge from the letters which have appeared the last two weeks relative to a report of a meeting. As I remarked last week, Mr. Longbottom fell foul of the report in the first instance and called it names, and it seems that as this unfortunate report was a production of Mr. R. J. Smith's, that gentleman is just a trifle cross at the way in which his literary effort has been sat upon by Mr. Longbottom, and he in turn tries to return the compliment. As the point at issue does not appear to the eye of the uninitiated, I cannot pass an opinion upon it, not knowing what it is; but I shall look forward eagerly to see what Mr. Longbottom will have to say to Mr. Smith's letter.

The latter part of the letter makes one feel quite put out. Now why on earth did I not notice that beautiful Hibernian production pointed out by Mr. Smith; it is really charming and ought to be carefully preserved and included in the next publication of humorous selections. But to think that I did'nt even see it at all, why it's really too bad for anything. I shall be on the look out in future at any rate and let me catch Mr. Longbottom or anybody else making similar blunders, that's all.

If any of my readers wish to spend a pleasant and enjoyable evening in addition to assisting a good cause they cannot do better than pay a visit to the Wesleyan School-room at Oulton on Saturday evening on the occasion of the annual concert given in support of the Sunday School. These concerts are invariably amongst the very best, in point of excellence both vocal and instrumental, of the many that are given in the district during the winter months, and as the services of the Leeds Amateur Orchestral Society have been again secured for the evening in addition to those of Miss Bradshaw and Miss Walker, there is every reason to anticipate quite as great a musical treat as on any past occasion I do not know anything of the qualifications of Mr. White, but would fain hope that his abilities as vocalist are of a superior order to those of one or two gentlemen who have assisted previously; the male vocalists, with the exception of Mr. Mann, having been the only exception to the otherwise pleasing entertainments. I sincerely hope that there may be a large audience and that the result will be a good addition to the funds of the Sunday School.

The question of the identity of Ajax is still exercising the minds of many of the dwellers in these parts, and guesses and conjectures continue to be made, with as much probability as ever. It is quite amusing to observe the eagerness with which some people jump at conclusions, and the way in which they follow up a fancied clue until it leads them into a muddle. One would think from the air of certainty with which these clever persons announce their imagined discoveries, that they had received the "straight tip" from Mr. Editor himself, so positive are they that they are on the right trail. A few of these persons, one in particular who resides in the village of Oulton, have made several of these discoveries and published them amongst their friends and acquaintances as genuine, while they have been at the same time fully aware that the only reason for their vague supposition was the authority of their own fertile imaginations. The person alluded to was for a long time firmly convinced that a certain gentleman was Ajax and did not hesitate to point him out to everybody as the writer of the Woodlesford Whispers; but he, like the rest, has become convinced of his error and has abandoned his former theory, but being fully determined to fasten the title upon someone likely or unlikely, he has pitched boldly upon another victim, and is now just as confident in that direction, as he previously was in another. Such is the glaring inconsistency of human nature. I will just inform these people that they know as much about the indentity of Ajax as they do about the man in the moon, and when they say that they know "for a fact" that so-and so is the man, I will tell them plainly that their statements are false, and proclaim them as liars and slanderers.

I was sorry to see the advertisement in the newspapers that Eshald House is to let, as it seems to confirm the rumours that Mr. Bentley is intending to leave the neighbourhood. I shall regret very much if such is the case, and so will many others, the poorer classes especially, many of whom have been indebted to the liberality of Mr. and Mrs. Bentley in times of need and sickness for the supply of delicacies which they could not otherwise have obtained. I still cherish the hope that the absence of the family will not be a prolonged one and that we shall soon be able to welcome them home again.

My friends the Oulton football players or as the Yankees might term them 'kickists,' are announcing a series of matches at home for the wind up of the season, so that their supporters will now have a good opportunity of cheering on to victory their village representatives at the popular game Somehow or other I dont think there is as much enthusiasm about football at Oulton now as there once was.

AJAX.

LOFTHOUSE CONSERVATIVE ASSOCIATION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

Your correspondent F. J. in the last week's issue of your paper, takes great exception to the report of the lecture given by Mr. B. Reed, at Lofthouse, on the 9th, ult. Now, as the writer of that report, I, in justice to Mr. Reed must say that the reference to the general policy of the present government was distinctly stated by him at the commencement of his lecture as outside the actual province of the subject he was advertised to handle, but as Parliament had only been opened a few days, and the events already happening were stirring ones, he said he hoped a brief reference to present politics would not be objectionable to the audience, and that such was the case was shewn by no opposition being manifested by anyone present.

In reading 'F. J's' letter, I was rather surprised to see the statement, 'that the King can do no wrong, if not directly put into the mouth of Mr. Reed, yet is used so as to insinuate the same, and is apt to be very misleading; and again, it is really interesting to see how, in his eagerness to give Mr. Reed, and through him the Tory (constitutional) party a floorer, when stating that they support the maintenance of the Throne and the House of Lords, he puts arguments into Mr. Reed's mouth which Mr. Reed never used, and then demolishes his self manufactured straw man with such evident self-satisfaction, that he must imagine he has floored the Tory party. But Sir, Mr. Reed never used any such arguments as F. J. raises. He stated that the Conservative party would resist to the uttermost any attempt to demolish the House of Lords as at present constructed, or the uprooting of the Throne, as they consider that the three estates of the Realm are essential to the welfare of the nation; as the House of Lords serves as a check upon hasty and ill-matured legislation, and this power we saw was beneficially employed in the Land Act of last session, for nearly everyone admitted that the amendments inserted in that Act by the Lords were a great improvement to the Act; and the fact of having a Monarch on the Throne is a check upon scheming and designing politicians, and preventive of the ruinous system of changing all officials from the greatest to the least and place buying, upon a change of government in the representative assembly, as is the case of the Republic of the United States; and it was in support of such principles as these, as opposed to the demolition of the Throne and House of Lords, which latter views are entertained by even members of the present Government: that the Conservatives advocate the maintenance of these two Estates of the Realm.

The assertion of F. J. that the Tories have during the present century always been the block in the way of progress is really so daring that one wonders whether F. J. is not Mr. Bright himself, it savours so strongly of his mode of diction. Now I think that even F. J. will not deny that education is one of the chief, if not the chief source of progress in any nation, and when one considers the fact that the Tory party (for as a rule the Church and Tory party are synonymous terms) has educated from 75 to 80 per cent of the population for the last century, and even two thirds of the rising generation at the present time are in their schools, how the statement can be made by any lover of justice, mercy and love, I am at a loss to conceive; such statements I leave to the consideration of your readers.

With regard to our Colonies, the growth of corn and other raw materials could be encouraged by allowing them to send corn into our country free of duty, whilst, a small duty should be imposed upon the corn coming from other countries, and the executive could lend or give the Colonies capital to develope any peculiar resources they may possess, and thus find employment for our increasing population, and at the same time make a field for receiving our manufactured goods, and thus this capital given to the Colonies would soon be recouped by the nonpayment of duties, which are imposed upon us by the nations we trade with at present. Your correspondent's reference to Mr. Lowther is rather ungracious, to say the least of it, for he has scarcely been in Parliament a month, and his party is in a small minority, therefore how he can reasonably expect Mr. Lowther to carry or even propose such a resolution in the face of the present House I cannot understand, but to say that he has thrown his promises to the wind is another of the bold statements peculiar to F. J.

Now Sir, with regard to education, Mr. Reed complained only of the lack of encouragement to religious education by allowing no grant for teaching the subject, but actually encouraging its extinction from the schools by omitting it from the lists of subjects examined by the Government inspector, and thus place a tax upon all schools where the subject is taught. And if the nation is "To walk humbly before God," I should like to know how this is to be accomplished except by religious training, and as there is only Sunday left when the majority of children can be or are taught these matters, he must be a very enthusiastic person indeed who supposes it can be efficiently performed, and I will only add that since an overwhelming majority of the nation are Trinitarians, it would not have been impossible to have found a common platform of religious principles, which could have been inculcated and accepted universally or pretty nearly so, and since we proceed upon the rule that the wishes of the majority must be supreme, the Conservative party must be the truly national party upon this point, of wanting to secure religious training for every child in the kingdom. Again, to shew that the religious training given in denominational schools is not, or ever has been practically objected to, I would state, that, although the power of with-drawal from this teaching has for a long time been an allowable act on the part of any parent, yet not one per cent of the children in such schools have been withdrawn, which conclusively proves, that the parents do not object, and that the outcry was simply a political outery raised to catch votes or popularity.

One point more and I have done. F. J. is sarcastic upon the word 'curriculum' and says it sounds learned, being a Latin word: now really I thought that the class of people who strain at gnats and are ever on the look out for motes were becoming extinct, but it appears I am deceived; just out of curiosity I looked at my Chambers' dictionary and found the word there, and the dictionary was printed in 1872, therefore the word has had a common currency for at least that length of time and doubtless much longer. Is not the real truth of the cause of reference to this word to be found in the fact that F. J. is rather pedantic or fond of shewing off his learning and wishes to impress upon your readers the fact that he understands Latin and is in fact a highly learned individual, and to back up this idea further, he quotes copiously from the poets: well, most men have weaknesses and I quarrel not with his.

I apologise for this intrusion upon your space, but I promise it shall be my last upon this subject, nor should I have troubled you now only I felt that I perhaps had wronged Mr. Reed in giving an imperfect report.

Yours &c.,
A LOFTHOUSITE.

P.S.—The subject of Church and State may possibly be ventilated during next winter or perhaps this spring and then F. J. can cross swords with whom the association may bring to expound the subject. I shall hope to see him there.

(From Thursday's Mercury.)

ROTHWELL MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

To the Editors of the Leeds Mercury.

Gentlemen,

The Rothwell Mechanic's Institute was built with funds subscribed by people of all shades of political and religious opinion. After its first rule, which specifies its name, its second rule declares 'that its object is to impart secular knowledge by means of lectures and entertainments, a library and reading-room, and by evening classes for general instruction.' Referring to the only published history of it I know of, I find that it was determined long ago 'not to encourage anything calculated to hurt the feelings or militate against the good of its members or subscribers, and that it was believed 'that the Institute should take neutral ground in regard to politics and religion, and that it should be a place where all could meet as it were on one common platform.'

Adhering to this fundamental principle of neutrality and ensuring absolute religious equality by the exclusion of all religious publications, except those of the broadest and most unsectarian kind, the committees charged from time to time with the management have hitherto succeeded tolerably well in maintaining unchanged the original character of the society. But of late, I regret to say, signs have not been wanting that alarm the real friends of the Institute, and make it clear that a certain party wish to have more than their share of management of what has already gained for itself the name of the Church Institute. With the exception of a short period about the year 1871, it has ever since its establishment in 1853, received that grudging support from the heads of the Church party here which was really worse than no support at all, and it is beyond all question that its most prosperous days were when it was openly discountenanced and disowned by these persons, and conducted and controlled by the lay friends of the working classes. Under these circumstances it is not surprising that any attempt to alter its character by unsecularising or sectarianising it should be watched with peculiar jealousy; and it was solely with the intention of protesting against any such movement in the most emphatic and decisive manner that I threw the Church Standard newspaper into the fire. The committee had had plenty of time to remove this obnoxious periodical; and though it entered the reading-room by an oversight, many of them were well aware of its presence. Attempts have before been made by the clergy here to introduce Church papers, but they have always failed. Last July, when we elected officers, we were told that many of the honorary subscriptions would be withdrawn in case the man of the members' choice for the office of president should happen not to be the Rev G Heberden, vicar of the parish. This gentleman once tried to prevent the large hall being let for perfectly legitimate purposes, when those purposes did not please him; and his interference upon that occasion led to the enactment of Rule 22, which requires the large hall to be let for all respectable purposes.

Such a state of things requires little comment. In a country town, with a Conservative squire, Conservative employers of labour, and a Conservative parson inflicted upon it by the Conservative squire, the undenominational spirit which should prevail at Mechanics' Institutes stands rather a poor chance, and must, if necessary, be defended by strong measures. Had I mildly requested the committee to withdraw the Church Standard, they would, no doubt, have done so, and perhaps would have tried to insert the thin end of the wedge again in six months. As it is, I believe we shall not be troubled with it again for the next twenty years.

From what I have said, I think you will see that my conduct has not been so very extraordinary after all.

Your report is misleading in one or two particulars. I did not use the words attributed to me. The fine inflicted by the magistrates was 2s 5d, the damages were assessed at 1d, and the costs amounted to 27s 6d. This total sum of 30s. was subscribed for me by a number of working men a few hours after the case was heard. I may add that a memorial demanding the immediate withdrawal of the Church Standard, and protesting against the action of the committee in prosecuting me, was presented to them some time ago, signed by more than half the bonâ fide members of the Institute.

The committee issued two other summonses against me, and were defeated on both.—I am, Gentlemen, yours truly,

JOHN TURNER.

Mr. A W Scott's Entertainment on Monday evening has been reported to us as one of the best things of the kind, and has been exhibited in some of the largest towns in the Kingdom. We are quite sure that all who attend the Institute on that evening will be well repaid.

WRITE, FRIENDS, WRITE

Write to me very often, write to me very soon,
Letters to me are dearer than the loveliest flowers in June.
They are affection's torches, the light of friendship's lamp,
Flitting around the heart-strings like fireflies in the damp.

Write to me very often, write in the early morn,
Or at the close of evening, when all the day is worn,
Draw up your study table close to the fire, and write
Me out some welcome message, born in the calm, soft night.

Write to me very often, shew me the better way,
That thought should go, at home, abroad, at work or play,
Let nor shade, nor cold, nor pause affect your friendly love,
Exhaustless be its flow as are the airs above.

Write to me very often, letters are links that bind,
True hearts to one another, charming mind with mind,
Bringing to kindred spirits smile and dear delight,
And they who'd strengthen friendship are not slow to write.

P. G.

Epps's Cocoa.—Grateful and Comforting.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps, has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette—Make simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in Packets labelled—'James Epps & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London.'—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence for afternoon use.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoas? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

Use no substitute. H. Lamplough, 113 Holborn, London.

One Experience from Many. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy.'" EAST AND WEST YORKSHIRE UNION RAILWAY.

The second reading of the Bill for the above proposed railway took place on Tuesday night last, and it will come before the Committee before or just after Easter. There are no fewer than 11 petitions lodged against the Bill, in whole or in part, the following being the promoters.—Sir John W. Ramsden; Jas. Tock, Esq.; Edmund Calverley, Esq; North Eastern Railway Co.; Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Co.; Great Northern Railway Co.; Midland Railway Co.; Great Northern and Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Railway; Hull, Barnsley and West Riding Junction and Dock; Church Fenton, Cawood and Weston Railway Co.; Aire and Calder Navigation Co.

There is no need to feel at all alarmed at the serious array of objectors, as the very fact of so great opposition being offered is really a proof of the probability of our ultimate success. If there were little likelihood of gaining our object, there would be no need to use such strenuous means to prevent us, but as it is, it is evident our prospects are excellent, and that each day proves more and more conclusively the necessity for the line, and also the likelihood of its passing Parliament.

WOODLESFORD SCHOOL BOARD.

A meeting of the above Board was held on Friday last, at which Mr. Jackson, chairman; the Rev. A. J. Irvin, Messrs. Bentley and Nowell, members of the Board, and Mr. R. J. Smith, the clerk, were present.

It was decided to place a thermometer in each school-room, with instructions to the teachers not to allow the temperature to exceed 60° Fahr.

Messrs. Mills and Abson declined the terms offered for the use of the school-room for an entertainment.

The application of the Rev. A. J. Irvin for additional accommodation for the Church Sunday School was considered. After some discussion Mr. Bentley proposed that the boys' and infants' school-rooms and classrooms be let to the Sunday School for £12 per annum, and the Rev. A. J. Irvin seconded the proposition; Mr. Nowell moved as an amendment that the rent be fixed at £15 and this was seconded by Mr. Jackson. The voting on the question being equally divided. Mr. Jackson gave his casting vote in favor of the amendment, which was declared to be carried. The Rev. A. J. Irvin stated that he was not prepared to agree to the proposal of the Board, and would consult the Sunday-school teachers on the subject.

A letter from Mr. E. A. Flint was read asking for permission to hold the annual meeting for the election of highway surveyors for the township of Woodlesford, in the board schools, and Mr R. J. Smith asked the Board if they would pass a general resolution respecting public meetings, so that it might be understood without further application being made, whether the schools might be used for such meeting or not. It was accordingly resolved that the use of the schools be allowed for meetings on public business in connection with the townships of Oulton and Woodlesford, free of charge.

Mr. Longbottom had an interview with the Board upon several matters. He complained of the report of the last meeting of the Board which had appeared in the Rothwell Times, and called attention to that part of it having reference to the report of H. M. Inspector on the schools, stating that it was not in accordance with the terms of the official report in several instances. The clerk stated that the newspaper report was partly a verbatim, and partly a condensed version of the official one, and contended that as far as he was able to judge, there was nothing to complain of in it. Mr. Jackson said that before reports of the meetings were sent to the Rothwell Times there was no trouble of this kind, but Mr. Nowell said that the reports ought to be continued, as the public had a right to know what was done by the Board, and previous to his becoming a member, he had the utmost difficulty in obtaining any information on the subject.

The Board decided to make some alterations in the out-offices, and to have a double door fixed between the boys' and infants' school-rooms in order to deaden the sound of the teaching; it was also decided to lay water to the master's house.

Cheques were drawn for the salaries due, and for the repayment of the loan and interest, (£123 5s 7d) and the requirements of the boys' department were ordered to be supplied.

Mr. R. J. Smith produced the plan of the schools, shewing the various drains and water pipes &c., which he had prepared according to the instructions of the Board.

It was reported that twelve cases of arrears of school fees had been entered in the Wakefield County Court, and that the hearing day was fixed for Tuesday the 21st instant.

LOFTHOUSE, CARLTON & THORPE CONSERVATIVE ASSOCIATION.

The members of the above Association held their annual meeting on Thursday evening, the 2nd ult., when Jos. Charlesworth, Esq., (the president,) with his customary liberality kindly provided a first-class supper for the members, of whom nearly forty were present. Full justice having been done to the repast and the usual patriotic toasts duly honored, "Success to the Conservative Association" was proposed by Mr. Hartley, of Wakefield, Conservative agent, who briefly reviewed the political situation of the Liberal party at the present time, and gave it as his opinion that before long a general election would probably be upon us and then the usefulness of such Associations as these would be felt; he urged all the members to use every opportunity to push forward the Conservative cause.

The chairman in responding, believed that the Conservative party was the real party of progress and stability in the nation. Although the Liberal party were continually proposing changes, and some of them violent ones, yet they were far from being really sound or beneficial. He instanced the Land Act of last session, which gave the tenants a vested interest in the land, presumably to assist the present and future tenants of Ireland. But, he asked, what will be the result? Only that the present tenants would be benefitted, and that really at the expense of both the present landlords and the future tenants of Ireland, for the present tenants, as cultivators of the soil, would be acquainted with all its capabilities for producing crops, and consequently upon its reletting, which must eventually take place, the present tenants or their descendant would demand higher prices for their invested rights than has ever been the case before, and thus a greater strain, which means less prosperity, would be put on the future tenants; and so the cause of disaffection is not removed, only postponed, when the depressed tenants will rise and demand further concessions, having their prospects of success whetted and strengthened by the confiscatory clauses of the present Act.

The health of the president was then proposed by Mr. H. Moorhouse in suitable terms, and the members drank his health with musical honours. The chairman responded, expressing his strong attachment to his native place, and his warm desire to further the prosperity of the village in any way that he possibly could. The report and balance sheet were then read, the former of which was of a very encouraging nature and showed that the association had done some real work during the past year, but the financial statement shewed the association to be slightly in arrears. The election of officers for the following year was then proceeded with, when the following was the result.

President—J. Charlesworth, Esq

Vice-presidents—Rev. R. Chadwick, Messrs. J. Appleyard, W. Hargreaves, T. Harrison, J. North, W. Lunn, T. Hargreaves, J. Andrews and G. Balme.

Treasurer and Secretary—Mr. H. Moorhouse; and the following were chosen as the committee with power to add to their number:—Messrs. J. H. Lee, G. Roberts, G. Batty, C. H. Green, B. Marshall, A. S. Geldard and W. Lunn, Jun., and the delegates to the central association were Messrs. J. Appleyard, S. Dobson, T. Harrison, W. Hargreaves and W. Grayson, besides the president and secretary.

A hearty vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding brought a most enjoyable meeting to a close.

WOODLESFORD CHORAL SOCIETY.

On Tuesday evening last, the members of the Minstrel Company in connection with the above Society, met at the Two Pointers' to have tea and enjoy a social re-union together as a fitting wind-up to the season's campaign. Ample justice was done to the liberal and substantial repast provided by Mr. and Miss Craven, and the party afterwards spent a most enjoyable evening under the genial presidency of Mr. Flockton. Several songs were sung, and complimentary toasts interchanged; the speakers all expressing the gratification they derived from their connection with the Society. It is satisfactory to know that during the four or five years the company has been in existence, not the slightest trace of discontent, jealousy, or disagreement has ever shewn itself, to mar the harmony and goodwill of members one toward another; as a consequence, the meetings for rehearsals, etc. have always had the character of friendly social gatherings, and have done good, if only in the way of creating kindly feeling and bringing members to a better acquaintance with each other. The principal object in forming the Company — to supplement the funds of the Choral Society by giving an annual popular entertainment, has always been satisfactorily attained.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and cheap compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

LEEDS ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY AT OULTON.

The treat afforded by the annual visit of the Leeds Amateur Orchestral Society to assist the funds of the Oulton Wesleyan Sunday School, (with which some of the members are connected) took place on Saturday evening last, when the room was nearly filled.

The Society has now attained such a high position in the musical circles of Leeds, and is so fully recognised among all who enjoy good music, that the fact of its originating from Oulton is apt to be forgotten. This, however, is the case, and it is therefore no wonder that, with Mr. Flockton as president, the members of the Society should willingly accede to the request for a concert at the Society's birth-place, and fill up an evening with a programme of musical pleasures. Besides the performance of several selections by this splendid band, the attractions of the concert were greatly enhanced by the efforts of Miss Bradshaw, Miss Walker, and Mr. White, who kindly rendered several songs during the evening.

The performance opened with an overture, "Loin du Pays." a brilliant little overture; the principal theme is a charming piece of melody which will doubtless linger long in the memory of those who once hear it.

Miss Bradshaw, who made her debut last winter on a similar occasion, followed with a novel but pretty song, "Should he upbraid," and evidenced the thorough knowledge she possesses of using a pleasing, well-balanced voice with skill and taste.

The next band piece was taken from one of Haydn's celebrated 12 grand symphonies, the Andante, Minuet and Trio, and Finale from the well-known "Surprise" symphony.

Miss Walker, as a representative of home talent was warmly received, and although not possessing the advantages offered to musical students in the town, she has a flexibility and range of vocal power, which with its general sweetness, made her song "The children's hour" take remarkably well, an encore being replied to with the popular "Twickenham Ferry."

This was followed by Coote's popular valse, "My Queen," in which the piccolo, cornet, and other instruments successively take up the air.

The last piece in the first part was a song "Sweethearts," by Mr. White, who, unfortunately, was suffering from cold.

Mozart's overture to "Figaro" commenced the second part of the programme. This is perhaps one of the best known and most popular of Mozart's overtures. It exhibits in a marked degree the power and happy facility of the great master, in the exposition and development of his themes. To the musical student it is most interesting and instructive to analyse the construction of such a masterpiece. To the general listener, it conveys, as we believe was intended, a vivid impression of the merry bustle and excitement attending the preparation for a marriage ceremony. Its treatment by the band was no exception to the general excellence of their performance.

The second appearance of Miss Bradshaw was in Molloy's song, "The Kerry Dance," which took exceedingly, and her rendering of it well deserved the encore demanded.

A noticeable feature in the instrumental pieces was the flute solo by Mr. Venus. The audience evidently highly appreciated his really fine performance, and in response to an unmistakeable desire for more, he gave a piccolo solo, "Jenny Jones," with very effective variations of his own. He was ably seconded at the piano by Mr. G. Waithman, who also, in the absence of Mr. Bowling, conducted the band performances.

Cowen's pathetic song, "The Watchman and the Child," was carefully and effectively given by Miss Walker, and a repetition of the last two verses was loudly asked for and given.

Of all the orchestral pieces, the selection from Sullivan's "Pirates of Penzance" found most favor with the audience. It was exceedingly well played, and in response to the general wish, the latter part of it was repeated. We scarcely consider this selection to be the very best that could be arranged from the opera, but at the same time it very fairly represents the sprightliness and 'go' of the music. The effect of the bassoon solo in the sergeant's song, with echoes from the 'cello, was irresistibly comical. Now and again occur passages of high class music of rare beauty, and it will be matter for regret if these are permitted to disappear with the transient popularity of a production like that of the "Pirates of Penzance."

Mr. White's second appearance in "The Sailor's grave" was better than the previous effort, but it was evident he was not in condition for singing. We shall be glad to hear Mr. White when in good voice.

Before the closing pieces of the programme, Mr. Mason rose, and expressed the pleasure he had derived from the concert and his wish to move a resolution thanking the members of the Leeds Amateur Orchestral Society for their kindness in coming out to give this concert, and also to Miss Bradshaw and Miss Walker for their valuable assistance.

Mr. Marshall, in seconding the motion thought that no other attraction would have drawn him from business on a Saturday night, but the pleasure of hearing the Leeds Amateur Orchestral Society. He had been highly gratified with the concert, and would be very glad if he could secure their services for Rothwell, at some time when a good audience might be assured.

The resolution having been heartily carried, Mr. Flockton, as president of the Society, suitably acknowledged the vote of thanks, and felt obliged to the members for so willingly coming out to help the school funds by giving this concert.

Another set of valses founded on Adams' "Blue Alsatian Mountains" completes the list of orchestral pieces, and with the National Anthem brought the concert to a close.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoas? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesome and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

OUR VILLAGE CHURCHES AND THEIR SERVICES.

No. 1.—SWILLINGTON.

On the Wakefield and Aberford Road, beyond Woodlesford, situate at the top of a gradually sloping hill is an old fashioned country church. The hill, surmounts a previous hill, shorter but sharper in ascent, and the latter is also preceded by an ascending road. The whole route thus indicated is exceedingly pleasant; the road on either side, for some distance, is lined with trees; the well-wooded park connected with Swillington House is on the east side, and very near, while on the other side may be seen a few scattered farmsteads, and through some of the openings, distant chimneys and spires in or about Leeds. A few cottages on or near the road side, at one point break rather than relieve the seclusion of the road, and the brooklet which runs under the path and gives out its poetic music, adds to the picture.

The church referred to is the parish church of Swillington, an interesting structure in the early English style known as Saint Mary's. Outside the edifice is that air of quietude which gives a charm to village churches. Within, the quaint mural monuments, the Squire's (in this case the Baronet's) pew, and other time-honoured features, serve to remind us of the virtues and the well-defined social distinctions of earlier days, and both without and within we feel the sober influences of the distant past, and rejoice to think that modernising adaptations have here but partially broken the charm of antiquity.

One would suppose that at such a seemingly out-of-the-world place the services would be of a very formal and unexhilarating character, a spiritless rehearsal of the Liturgy, robust rather than refined music, and the cut and dried sermon to finish with.

We will speak first and chiefly of the preaching, as it is intended to be the principal subject of this contribution. There is a similarity about pulpit oratory. A sermon is usually a prepared moral essay, arranged with a certain degree of mathematical exactness, and varying in interest according to the measure of fervour and elocutionary skill with which it is delivered.

At country churches, where attendance at the services is a matter of custom with a not inconsiderable portion of the congregation, rather than a result of spiritual enthusiasm, the sermon is perhaps mostly interesting because it is the immediate prelude to the concluding item of the proceedings for the time being; hence a village preacher has few incentives to anxious preparation or fervid oratory, feeling that such attributes would not much avail in awakening serious emotions in minds not easily impressed. When therefore we see a departure from the track of a dull and commonplace style, and a marked individuality on the part of the preacher, we infer zeal and conscientiousness and look with confidence for good results. Such qualities we certainly find in the preaching at Swillington, and also something more, and that something is preaching power. Instead of the time-honoured manuscript with the stereotyped divisions, the close attention to the written phrases which admits of only jerked glances at the congregation, and a style of reading like that with which a lawyer's clerk might tell out the section of an Act of Parliament, or read a vestry resolution, we have preaching in the real hearty sense of the term. Our Vicar steps into the pulpit attired in the black gown, now seldom seen in churches, with an earnest and, if we may use the term in a higher sense, a business-like air. His book is a pocket bible. Taking his text he begins at once to speak in loud, clear, and incisive tones, and in spite of yourself you listen attentively. He sticks closely to the text, he supports its doctrine, its precepts, its warnings, by other concurring passages of scripture, emphasises its points by apt and practical illustrations, draws inferences which seem at once to be the correct ones, and enjoins and exhorts in terms which appear only the necessary and natural conclusion to what has gone before. He has no arts, no tricks, no affectations. There is no Pharisaical stand-point, he does not strain after high-sounding words or packed sentences, or mystify you with sophistries vague and but half intelligible; he

but there is vigour, earnestness and singleness of purpose, which are more than eloquence, in their effect on his hearers, who come away favourably impressed and if it is their first visit resolve to go again. And yet there is nothing strikingly superior about the preacher. There is no new doctrine but only "the old, old story." The fact is you are listening to an Evangelist, not to a Priest, to a Preacher, nor to a Doctrinist, who would be shocked at a hairs breadth departure from a hard dogmatic creed, or a Ritualist to whom the observance of an obscure Saints' day is of far more importance than heart's grace or a generous impulse not provided for in the prayer book. I am speaking of Mr. Fawkes as I find him in the pulpit and throughout the service at his church yonder at Swillington. His manner is said to be rather brusque outside. But then he has been a sailor and the hearty straightforwardness which is one of the seaman's characteristics still sticks like a second nature. Altho' his capacity and zeal in his "high calling" might be made available to a greater extent in a wider sphere and his power of usefulness be thus enlarged, the Swillington parishioners and many others dissenters as well as church folks round about would feel it a misfortune to lose this earnest, broad, unbigoted and capable clergyman from their midst. The musical part of the service is decidedly primitive in quality. The organ was probably promoted from a barrel instrument with a handle as the "first motion," to its present dignity as possessing the higher attributes of key board and bellows; Miss Middleniss, however, makes the very best of it, and her playing is worthy of a much better instrument. After all, the fitness of things comes in here, for it is just nicely adapted to the unpretentious choir who, however, sustain in some degree, the old style of church music, which is by no means to be despised, for contrasting it with the artistic perfections of church singing as we mostly find it now, we may not unreasonably say of it

> "Compared with this Italian trills are tame
> The tick'ld ears no heart felt raptures raise,
> No harmony have they with our Creator's praise."

This shall conclude the remarks on Swillington Church and its services.

MR. SCOTT'S ENTERTAINMENT.

On Monday evening Mr. A. W. Scott, of Leeds, gave a dioramic exhibition by the 'Excelsior' lime-light, in the Mechanics' Hall, Rothwell, when some sixty scenes were depicted in and about Paris. The pictures were from coloured photographic transparencies, and were most striking and correct. A description of the various places was given by Mr. Scott, adding to the interest of the scenes.

There was also a series of very fine statuary exhibited, succeeded by some dozen scenes in 'Jane Conquest's life,' the poem being very cleverly recited by Mr. Scott. Several phantasmagoric designs and funny pictures concluded the programme. The hall was about half filled, and although not resulting in a loss, will leave only a small surplus.

POLICE NEWS.

WEST RIDING COURT.

MONDAY.

DRUNK.—John McGuire and Joseph Frost, the latter of whom did not appear, were charged with drunkenness at Rothwell. Police-constable Wilson found the defendants fighting in Commercial-street and afterwards in Church-street, and he had to take McGuire home, as he was very drunk.—Defendants were fined 10s, and 10s costs.

FOOTBALL.

ROTHWELL HARMONIC v. HULL TOWN CLUB

This match was brought off at Rothwell, last Saturday, before a good number of spectators. The day was fine, but a very cold wind was blowing right across the field, and the ground was rather treacherous owing to the rain which had fallen during the week. The respective teams were in the field in good time, and it was a treat to see a game start in the Harmonic field before three o'clock The Harmonic captain won the toss and chose to defend the pavilion goal. The visitors, who were a very heavy team were arrayed in a pretty yellow and black jersey, and the home team's scarlet and black formed a very nice contrast. Hull kicked off, and the ball being well followed up was soon in the home territory, one of the visitors in attempting a screw kick, twisted his knee and was obliged to retire from the field of action, but one of the Stourton Rovers being present he was permitted to play in his place, and quickly appeared in the grotesque costume of the Rovers. Another start was made, and very shortly after the first goal was secured by the visitors. The kick off from the centre failed to relieve the home team, who were very sorely pressed, and several unsuccessful shots were made. Taylor at length secured the 'bone of contention' and a raid into the Hull stronghold was the result but to no purpose as the leather was quickly again at the pavilion end, and a sharp shot again lowered the colours of the home team. This seemed to put the scarlet and blacks on their mettle, as after this they played a great deal better, and a very close scrimmage in the visitors' goal mouth, took place which looked like scoring, but the ball was 'headed' over the crossbar, and a six yards kick placed it in neutral ground. The scarlet and blacks once more returned to the charge. Taylor centreing nicely there was a short scrimmage during which the ball was put through the uprights from the foot of Taylor. During the first half nothing more was scored, although several neat pieces of play was witnessed; we could not help noticing that Swift was not at all up to his usual form, is it because he has had no practice lately? or is he getting into a careless way of playing? we hope it is not the latter, but he certainly played better at the beginning of the season than he has played the last two or three matches. Ends were changed and play once more commenced, but after a rather spasmodic attack on the visitors' citadel, they appeared to play very loose, and several corner kicks was the result, but happily these were got rid of without danger, and once more the Harmonic pulled themselves together to try to become even with their opponents; but it was not to be, and the visitors left wing man returned the compliment with a very fast run down the side and the leather once more dodged past Baines, the home custodian, making 3 goals for Hull to the Harmonic 1. The game throughout was a very pleasant one; keen, but not fast.

OULTON v. HUNSLET WESLEYANS.—This return match was brought off on Saturday last, on the ground of the former. The weather was favourable and an increased number of spectators watched the game. The visitors immediately became busy in the home territory but never once got dangerous, Wilmot and Jowitt guarding their fortress in an admirable manner. Kirkham and Matthew played well on the ball, but they could make no headway against the vigorous play of the home halves. Abbey was the first to invade the Wesleyan camp, and a beautiful cross by him gave the home forwards a chance, of which, however, they did not avail themselves. Play continued very even, inroads into the enemy's stronghold being made by the forwards of both teams, and, although each citadel was heavily besieged and bombarded neither was captured during the first half. On the resumption of hostilities one of the visitor's forwards retired, placing the Wesleyans at disadvantage. The home forwards at once commenced a heavy attack on the Wesleyan fortress, and Abbey was the first to secure its downfall. The visitors gradually fell off, with the exception of Gilstone, Kirkham, and one of the backs, and the home team had matters pretty much their own way, Wilmot fairly excelling himself, Gosney lowered the Wesleyan colours, and West and Britton followed suit. The game thus terminated in a win for Oulton by four goals to none. All the home team played well, while Kirkham and Passmore were the best of the Wesleyans.

ROTHWELL HARMONIC v. ROTHWELL.—A match between our own two clubs is sure to evoke a large amount of interest, and the struggle to-morrow will doubtless be watched by many spectators. We trust the favourable weather may continue, and that a warmly contested game may be enjoyed. Let us caution our friends, however on three points—Play fairly, keep our temper, and believe in the fair play of your opponents. To those outside, we earnestly hope there will be no betting or other disreputable conduct as regards the game. For the sake of our character as a town, let us act as respectable and respectful citizens.

EMIGRATION TO THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA.—The Rev Styleman A. Herring, B.A., and Mr. John James Jones, Member of the School Board for London, are making arrangements for the Emigration of large numbers of Mechanics, Domestic Servants and Labourers, to the United States and Canada, in April and June next. These parties will be assisted to obtain assisted passages and employment when they land on the other side of the Atlantic. Those of our readers intending to Emigrate should send for particulars to Mr. John James Jones, 98, High St., Homerton, London, E.

THROAT IRRITATION—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice For these symptoms use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 7½d. and 1s 1½d., labelled "JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received: "Gentlemen,—it may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, L.R.C.P.E. Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—These remedies are unequalled throughout the world for bad legs, wounds, foul sores, and ulcers. Used according to directions given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Many poor sufferers who have been patients in the large hospitals under the care of eminent surgeons, and have derived little or no benefit from their treatment, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, scurvy, and diseases of the skin there is nothing that can be used with so much benefit. In fact, in the worst forms of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, used conjointly, are irresistible.

KAY'S LINSEED COMPOUND, for Colds and Cough, cures nine cases out of ten sold by Chemists, 1s 1½d, 2s 9d.

MARKETS.

LEEDS CORN, Tuesday.—The wheat trade is very quiet, without any quotable change in figures. Maize, beans, and peas steady. No change in the price of flour.—Leeds Corn Millers' Association Report.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—The Privy Council restrictions having been removed, the market was open to-day in all departments, but many of the regular frequenters bitterly complain of what they assert is unnecessary interference with business by the closing of the market at any time. In the sheep market there was still a limited supply, but owing doubtless to the high prices ruling, butchers were indisposed to buy, and the number penned proved equal to the demand. A fair attendance at the pig market, but trade slow at the rates below.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

WAKEFIELD CORN, Friday, 12.30 p.m.—There is a limited demand for wheat this morning and prices are generally shilling per quarter lower than current last week. Barley meets a slow sale at rather less money. Beans, oats and maize steady. Weather continues fair, with occasional showers, the wind being high.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We have received a communication from F. J. in reply to "A Lofthouseite," but its length is so enormous, we are compelled to decline it. Three column letters are too much of a good thing. If reduced to a reasonable size, we shall be pleased to publish. Our correspondents will oblige by writing concisely and simply to the point.

We would particularly urge our friends to send in their letters and news, as early as possible, as we cannot accept contributions later than Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, except in the case of matters occurring on Wednesday or Thursday which should be forwarded within a short period after. Advertisements may be sent as late as Friday morning.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

I WAS extremely sorry to hear that one of our most prominent citizens was taken ill a short time since, but fortunately he has since been restored to convalescence. The lamentable occurence took place I understand at a neighbouring village on the same evening that our Woodlesford "niggers" were disporting themselves before a Rothwell audience.

The story so far as I can gather runs thusly. The gentleman alluded to had been having a conviviality with a few kindred spirits, and shortly after starting on his homeward journey at a somewhat late hour in the evening, he was observed to become slightly unsteady in his gait and after proceeding a short distance, to come to a halt; fortunately at this time two Woodlesford gentlemen happened to be passing and they observing that something was amiss at once volunteered assistance which was thankfully accepted as the gentleman was rapidly becoming worse, indeed he shortly afterwards relapsed into a semi unconscious state, losing to a great extent the use of both his limbs and tongue, and causing great alarm to his supporters, who with the utmost difficulty succeeded in conveying him safely home, and they were indeed thankful when they had once more restored him to the bosom of his family. Enquiries the following morning resulted in the discovery that the gentleman was greatly recovered and able to undertake his accustomed duties.

PEOPLE seem to think that Mr. John Turner, Junr., has not improved his position very much by the publication of his letter to the Leeds Mercury. It is very easy for Mr. Turner to say that he did not use the words attributed to him, but he fails to prove that; whereas those words were I believe sworn to by more than one of the witnesses, as for the cost of the trial being subscribed by a number of working men, all I have to say about it is this, that it does not reflect much credit upon Mr. Turner to allow the working men to spend their hard earned money in defraying the cost of his Bradlaugh-inspired antics.

FROM the small bills put out by the Oulton Football Club I see that the return match with the Rothwell Harmonic will take place shortly, and I hope that the good feeling which prevailed on the last occasion will again animate the contestants.

If each one concerned will remember that his opponents are fellow-men and near neighbours, and as such deserving of courteous treatment, there will be little fear of anything of an unpleasant nature taking place

I will also state that it is well known that these two clubs stand at the top of the tree in this district, and each well deserves the position which it holds, it would therefore be a great misfortune for those who should be looked up to for guidance to set a pernicious example by quarrelling amongst themselves

Finally, it can be no disgrace for either party to be beaten by the other and I hope that the losers may take their defeat with proper equanimity and fortitude. As neither side was possessed of that important functionary, a goal-keeper, on the occasion of the first match, I hope that the omission will be rectified the next time they meet. Of course I don't mean that each goal was left entirely, because there was a person standing between the posts on each side, but of what precise use either of them were has never since been explained.

Football will ere long have to make room for cricket and no doubt at the end of the present month, our village youths will cease to talk of football and turn their attention to the great summer game. It now seems to be an established thing, that as soon as the football players leave the ground after their last match, their places are taken by the cricketers who reign supreme until they are in turn deposed for six months.

I SHALL shortly have a few words to say to my readers, which will, I am afraid, cause them a certain amount of sorrow and despondency, but what that something is I will explain ere long.

THE FRACAS AT THE ROTHWELL MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

The members of the above Institute are indebted to your paper for a correct report of the above case as heard at the Wakefield Court House.

Your impartiality in inserting the defendant, Mr. John Turner's letter to the Leeds Mercury is also very marked, but as that letter contains so much that is at variance with the well known facts of the case, I trust to your fairness in allowing my protest against it.

Amongst friends of the Institute, who with myself are fully acquainted with the committee and its recent acts, the audacity of Mr. Turner's statements in his letter makes one almost question the writer's sense of moral responsibility.

First then; as to the charge against the acting Committee and its president of getting in the thin end of the wedge towards making it a Church or Conservative Institute. I cannot conceive that possible, for whilst its committee contains an exactly equal number of churchmen and dissenters, it has a Wesleyan and a Churchman for its two vice-presidents, as also the two secretaries. The majority of the whole committee is liberal in politics.

Now, although a lot of sentiment about neutrality is introduced into the letter it is well known that the dispute first arose from the committee refusing to allow its rooms (much needed for educational purposes) to be made the head quarters of a Liberal Association. Next, I candidly admit that the 'Church Standard' from its recently being issued with the 'Hand and Heart' was upon the news-room table by an oversight of the committee, and had he (Mr. Turner) as he writes 'mildly requested the committee to withdraw it,' they would have done so, but I most emphatically deny that its presence was occasioned by the committee's pro church-principles, or the presidency of the Institute by the Rev. G. Heberden, vicar of the parish. Further, the words on burning the Standard 'There goes Heberden's religion' and 'I want to have a row with the committee' are too well authenticated to admit of denial, and point to another motive, namely, Mr Turner's personal antipathy to the vicar and his religious opinions.

Perhaps the most daring mis-statement is, 'that a memorial demanding the immediate withdrawal of the Church Standard, and protesting against the action of the committee in prosecuting me, was presented to the committee some time ago, signed by more than half the bonâ fide members of the Institute.' In reply to this, I was present as a trustee conferring with the committee on the night before the trial, when a document, so mutilated and altered as to be repudiated by some of its 30 mostly youthful signatories, was presented, and if even that number were all bonâ fide, it only represents about one-fourth of the members.

An appeal against the expulsion from membership is to be considered at a special general meeting of members on Friday next, when it will be fully tested whether the members support the action of the committee.

Further, I am glad to state that the injury done to the glass and doors is set right, saving the necessity of further legal action; and lastly, I scarcely need add that my being a Wesleyan and a Liberal employer of labour places me above the suspicion of being under Conservative squire influence, if even such a thing could exist among our working men at Rothwell, who constantly exhibit the firmest political independence that I ever met with. The re-union of all shades of opinions upon the platform of our Mechanics' Institute has often given me great pleasure, and prompts the writing of this letter in defence of its executive, whilst badgered by reckless agitators, under the false plea of religious and political neutrality.

Yours most sincerely,
J. R. SEANOR.

Rothwell,

ROTHWELL MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

In your issue of the 3rd instant a letter appears from Mr John Turner relating to a dispute he has with this Institute. As it does not, however, give the history of the case, I ask that a plain statement of the facts should be put before your readers.

The Rothwell Mechanics Institute was undoubtedly built with funds subscribed by people of all shades of political opinion, and I do not hesitate to say (and feel sure that the members of the Institute will bear me out) that the committee have always been most particular and desirous to exclude anything that might be objected to by any member as sectarian or exhibiting partizanship.

Some years ago, the committee commenced taking in a paper called Hand and Heart, and have continued to do so up to the present time. About the end of last October a notice appeared in it stating that in future the paper would be added to and published in an enlarged form under the name of the Church Standard. The committee of the Institute were no parties to this change, nor did they wish it, nor were they cognizant of it, and the paper was delivered as usual and no objection to it was brought before the committee, who paid for it with other papers in due course. This appears to have annoyed Mr John Turner, and on the 19th of January last, he stated to Mr Taylor, the hall keeper, that he had a good mind to burn the Church Standard. Mr Taylor told him that he had better not do so, as he would get into trouble if he did, and that if he had any objection to the paper, he had better call the attention of the committee to it, when he was sure the matter would be duly considered; the reply was, 'he did not care, he wanted a row with the committee.' On or about the 21st January, Mrs Taylor, wife of the hall-keeper, went into the reading-room of the Institute to count the papers; Mr John Turner was there, and stated to her that there was one paper, (the Church Standard) he was going to burn. Mrs Taylor told him he had better not do so, as it would get him into trouble, and her also; that the proper course to pursue was to bring it before the committee. Mr Turner replied he did not care, he wanted a row with the committee, and he should burn it, and he then walked to the fire and put it in, remarking as the smoke and ashes ascended, 'There goes Heberden's religion out at the top.' He subsequently placed, or caused to be placed on the table of the Institute, two papers secular and political.

A committee meeting (at which the president was not present) presided over by one of the vice presidents and he not a Churchman, was held, and it was decided to write to Mr Turner for an apology. This was done, and a few days afterwards he was met by one of the secretaries, who asked him if he had received the letter. He replied that he had, and that the secretary 'might tell the president to go and be hanged, and he should take no notice of the letter.' Another committee meeting was held, at which it was decided that not having complied with the committee's request, Mr Turner should be expelled. Mr John Turner afterwards committed an assault upon the hall-keeper, who refused to admit him, and broke open two of the doors of the Institute with a paviour's pounder, doing damage estimated at £1 10s.

Three summonses were issued; on the first, Mr Turner was fined, as stated by him; the other two were dismissed on a technical point of law, the chairman stating that the magistrates regretted that they felt they had not power to convict, as it was a disgraceful case.

At a general meeting of the members, held last month, one of the committee stated that that body consisted of members, one-half of whom are churchmen and the remainder Dissenters, that it had always been and still was their desire to manage the Institute in an impartial manner to the satisfaction of the members, and without giving cause of offence to any person, whatever his political and religious views might be, that had any complaint been made to the committee respecting any paper in the Institute, it would have been at once considered by them, and if it had been desired by the members that it should be removed, it would have been decided, not simply by a majority of the committee, but unanimously to remove it. That no complaint or request of the kind had ever been made to the committee. Such are the facts of the case.

Mr John Turner's letter states 'The committee had had plenty of time to remove this obnoxious periodical, and though it had entered the room by an oversight, many of them were well aware of its presence.'— 'Had I mildly requested the committee to withdraw the Church Standard they would no doubt have done so.' It is not necessary for me to point out to you or your readers the proper and only course either ordinary or extraordinary which any educated man could adopt in this matter, but it was clearly done by the hall-keeper of the Institute and his wife, as stated by them in their evidence given before the magistrates (from which source the above conversations between the hall-keeper and his wife and Mr John Turner are taken.) I must state that I have never heard the Institute referred to as the 'Church Institute,' and no memorial or request of any kind was made to the committee to remove the Church Standard before the paper was burned or before the summons was issued. Thanking you for allowing me to put before your readers the facts of this case, and trusting that the working men of our village may not be led away into taking a wrong view of the matter, which is not in the least a sectarian or class question, but simply a determination on the part of the trustees to have the Institute governed in a proper and lawful manner and not to allow private individuals to destroy the property of the Institute, and put on one side the rules and common decency in order to gratify their own passions and prejudices.

I am,
Yours obediently,
A MEMBER OF THE COMMITTEE.

WOODLESFORD SCHOOL BOARD.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times

Dear Sir,

It is a well known saying that when a lawyer has a bad case in hand, he has nothing to do but cover his retreat by abusing the counsel of the opposite side. I shall not attempt to emulate Mr R. J. Smith in sarcasm and personal abuse, but will endeavour to show your readers that I have been unwillingly drawn into this correspondence.

A day or two after the report of the proceedings of the last meeting of the Board appeared in your columns (10th February) I wrote Mr. Smith respecting it, and asked him to make certain corrections. He replied to the effect, that what required correction should have requisite attention, and also intimated that when he found himself unable to write a report he would come to me for instructions. On receiving this, I withdrew my request that he would correct his report, and told him I should do so myself. As you are aware a letter of mine appeared in your issue of the 15th February. What I stated in that letter I still adhere to. On the same date appeared a letter from Mr. R. J. Smith correcting, as he judged, what required correction. Taking the text of the report of Her Majesty's Inspector as a basis, the correction is about as far off the mark as Mr. R. J. Smith's original report.

This letter would have closed at this point, had not Mr. Smith brought Her Majesty's Inspector into the field. I emphatically deny that Her Majesty's Inspector received any intimation from me as to the irregularity of the attendance of children.

Her Majesty's Inspector did get some information from me respecting the attendance, the circumstances of which are as follows:—

On the 21st of October last Mr. Taylor, assistant inspector came into my school at 9.30. a.m. He was on his way to examine the children attending the Rothwell Board Schools. He told me that a month ago he wrote to Mr. Smith for certain educational statistics which were required for a government return. A fortnight elapsed and no reply was forthcoming from Mr. Smith. A second letter was written to him by the Inspector; and another fortnight elapsed with the same result. No reply was received. As the matter was very urgent, I was requested to obtain the information which appears below, and forward it to him at Rothwell Schools by one o'clock the same day. Through the courtesy of the teachers in the other departments, the teachers of Oulton School, and also that of Mr. Whitehead, I was enabled to send the following to the Inspector at the time named by him. The Inspector on his visit to the schools, saw the registers and the log book, (which he has to examine) so how Mr. Smith can charge me with calling the attention of Her Majesty's Inspector to the irregularity of the attendance—not the 'small attendance' as he puts it I cannot tell.

I have been compelled in self defence, to supply this information to your readers. I should not have supplied it, had not Mr. Smith introduced Her Majesty's Inspector into the matter. As to the sarcasm and personal abuse which he has in a most uncalled for manner indulged in with respect to me, I can afford to pass it by.

I am,
Yours truly,
JOHN LONGBOTTOM.

P.S.—So far as I am concerned, this correspondence closes. The publication word for word of the reports of Her Majesty's Inspector is all I ask for. If that cannot be done, rather leave them out entirely, than publish a summary of them which does not do justice to all immediately concerned.

LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

To the Editors of the Leeds Mercury.

Sir,

Will you kindly insert the following suggestions I wish to make concerning the coming election.

Now, Sir, the suggestion I wish to make is this, that all persons claiming a vote ought to consider who shall be the candidate of their choice and not wait for other people to chose for them; in fact it would be better and give better satisfaction too, if all people who have claim to vote would make up their minds as soon as possible and then fill up the papers and seal them up too, for there is plenty of time to do that after the nomination papers are sent out before the canvassers go their round, for there is a certain party who make it a practice to go about every election time to beg votes for the candidates they are canvassing for; now I think if all parties could make it agreeable among themselves and stop at home, it would give everybody a fairer chance of voting. For instance, I heard of some canvassers who went the last election to voters and begged their votes; also had the privilege of filling up the papers for them, and leaving them unsealed for them to look at if they wished; but other canvassers followed them round and wished to look at them; some refused, but others gave them permission, and when the votes were counted up, it was found some of the papers had been tampered with, so that whoever they belonged to lost their votes; I hope that people will be very careful this time especially.

I am yours, &c.,

LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

The struggle for election on our Local Parliament is gradually becoming stronger, and increasing in interest. Though no large public meetings have been held yet, on behalf of one or other of the candidates, committees have been formed, smaller meetings have been conducted, and the interest generally is increasing as to the probabilities of the result.

Messrs. Charlesworth and W. Hargreaves, who alone have continued as representatives of the original Board, have issued an address asking the renewal of the confidence reposed in them for the nine years they have sat in our council, and pointing out the several great works which have been, or are now being carried out, and in which they have had a leading hand. They also claim that as large ratepayers, and representing large ratepayers, it is to their personal advantage, and therefore to the advantage of all persons paying rates, that the work of the Board should be carried on as thoroughly and as economically as possible. A strong committee has been formed for the furtherance of the candidature of these gentlemen.

Mr. H. P. Newsome, having served three years on the Board, and thereby attained a thorough knowledge of its working, has brought to bear upon its deliberations great business tact and financial ability. His connection with the Gas Company seems to have raised some objection to him in the minds of some people as regards the Bill being promoted by that Company, but although he was precluded from voting when the Bill was discussed by the Board, his efforts were directed towards obtaining a modification of its provisions, and especially the introduction of the "purchase" clause. Mr. Newsome has met crowded audiences in large rooms of the various Inns in the town during the past fortnight and also at Stourton, where he has more fully defended his action during the past three years. He asks a renewal of the confidence of the ratepayers at the coming election.

Mr. John Turner has been brought forward by the Liberal Association as their representative, and has addressed several meetings in the district, in furtherance of the views of the Society, and is being strongly supported by the members of the Association.

Mr. Clark was also nominated by the Association, but, we understand, has withdrawn.

Mr. Lockwood's name has also been freely spoken of as a candidate, and, on account of his position, experience in building and general information, and his strong common sense, is a most eligible person for a seat on the Board. We are not yet aware, however, of any active movement on his behalf.

Nominations are required to be sent in on or before March 24th; each person nominated is required to possess one of the following qualifications, to have real or personal property of the value of £500, or to be rated to the relief of the poor at £15 or more. The voting papers will be delivered on Saturday, April 1st, and will be collected on the fifth; the returning officer, Mr. Holmes, will commence counting the votes on the following day, during the afternoon of which the result will be declared.

DR. BARDSLEY'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS are now acknowledged by our best physicians to be the only sure and safe remedy for all diseases arising from impure blood, such as scrofula and scrofulous humours. Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s. 9d.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

The ordinary fortnightly meeting was held on Monday evening, present—Messrs. W. Hargreaves (chairman) Holmes, J. Hargreaves, J. Batty, J. Oliver, J. Sanderson, H. P. Newsome, and the clerk, treasurer, and surveyor.

The minutes of several meetings and committee meetings having been read and confirmed, the business of the evening was proceeded with.

SEWAGE.—Mr. Jowitt, clerk of the works, read his 13th report, from which it appears the contractors have laid in Oulton Lane 140 yards of pipes, 2 shafts, 2 lamp holes and made 4 junctions; across the Paddock and Dawson's Lane 150 yards of pipes, 1 shaft, 2 lamp holes, and 4 junctions; several connections have also been laid. A considerable quantity of tubes and other material have been received.

A conversation followed as regards connections, in which Mr. Newsome strongly objected to any connections being made, unless properly fitted with gulleys and other necessary means for preventing the sewer gas from getting into the houses.

The clerk read a resolution passed some months ago, that no sink pipes shall be connected direct with the main. The delay caused by not having the price of gulleys and of fitting in was commented on; and resolutions were passed offering 2s. each for the fixing of the gulleys, and that 5s. each be offered for the gulleys sent by Messrs. Brook & Sons.

It is however clearly to be understood, that no sinks may be connected with the main drain until properly trapped and guarded by gulleys, and approved by the inspector.

Mr. Brayshaw had sent a letter to the clerk asking the Board to grant an extension of time for the completion of works, arguing that delays had been caused by the want of pipes, the stoppages of previous contractors, and other means, and intimating that the present fine weather will enable him to get on with the work in a more satisfactory manner and with less inconvenience to the householders than if it had been in progress during the winter. He thought an extension of two months would enable him to finish the contract comfortably. The clerk was instructed to reply, and the matter to be further considered.

APPLICATION OF MEDICAL OFFICER.—A letter was read from Dr. Nowell intimating his purpose to apply, but regretting to find himself mistaken in hoping to have the support of the members.

Mr. Newsome was sorry Dr. Nowell had not applied, as he had not denied his support, and was prepared to vote for the best man.

The only application, therefore, was from Dr. Glaister, who in offering his best services, referred to his qualifications gained at College, and as resident Medical Officer at the Leeds Dispensary, and enclosing copies of high testimonials from Dr. Eddison, Dr. Mc.Gill and Dr. Wright, who recommended him as specially well acquainted with sanitary matters. On the motion of the chairman, seconded by Mr. Oliver, Dr. Glaister was unanimously elected.

RAILWAY BILL.—The question of crossing the upper portion of Woodlesford Lane was considered, the present plan being to extend the present hill, leading from Pontefract Road to the Vicarage, so as to enable the Railway to pass over the road. As this however, would make the hill very steep, and necessitate another short hill to get on to the level road near the Vicarage garden, the Board decided, rather than make the present hill longer, to ask the promoters of the line to cross the lane by a level crossing.

Mr. Newsome proposed that a petition be drawn up, sealed and signed on behalf of the Board in favor of the Railway Bill now being promoted in Parliament. Seconded by Mr. Batty and carried.

Some conversation followed as to the advisability of sending someone to London from the Board to represent the ratepayers in furthering the proposed line. It was questioned, however, whether the expenses incurred by sending a deputation would be allowed by the auditor. The matter was eventually adjourned to next meeting for further enquiry.

WATER.—A letter was read from Mr. S. Batty as to supplying him with water for the house only; the matter was referred to the Committee.

Mr. Sanderson asked the surveyor what he had done about the tank at Royds' Green.

Mr. Worth stated that he had made an estimate that for 6000 gallons, a tank would be required of 6 yards long, 3 yards wide and 2 yards deep.

After some conversation whether this was not too large, it was proposed by Mr. J. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Newsome and carried, that the clerk do advertise in the Rothwell Times for tenders for making a tank the above size.

Mr. Oliver enquired what had been done in regard to a suggestion made a month ago, for supplying Mr. Lawton with water by a private arrangement with Messrs. Charlesworth's. The chairman said that as general manager to Messrs. Charlesworth's there had been no overtures made to him by Mr. Lawton. Mr. Oliver thought the Board should take some steps to bring about an agreement in the matter. The clerk said he had had no instructions to move; but if so directed, he would write Mr. Lawton stating what had passed on the subject.

LOAN.—The Loan on behalf of the sewage scheme having been obtained from private sources for one year only, the clerk asked and received instructions to apply to the Public Works Loan Commissioners for £4380 repayable on the usual terms.

HIGHWAYS.—The draft agreement prepared by the clerk, between the Board and Mr A. Nichols having been read, its approval was agreed to, on the motion of Mr. Holmes and Mr. Batty.

Mr. Batty urgently complained of the old sewage residuum left in Carlton Lane, and asked that the surveyor should have it cleared away at once. This was ordered to be done.

The chairman pointed out that there was no stone on the roadside of Leeds and Wakefield Highway, and suggested that a lot be ordered without loss of time.

In accordance with the Board's request, the clerk had sought up the various regulations relating to Locomotives and heavy traffic on the highways, which he submitted to the meeting. Mr. Holmes thanked the clerk for his trouble, and expressed his wish that some means could be taken for recovering cost of damage done to grates and crossings by the extraordinary traffic. Some discussion ensued but no resolution was come to.

Mr. Batty drew the inspector's attention to the state of some ashpits on the Marsh; the matter will be attended to.

ROTHWELL MECHANICS' INSTITUTE AND MR. J. TURNER.

A special general meeting of the members of the Rothwell Mechanics' Institute was held on Friday evening, (Rev. G. Heberden in the chair,) to hear Mr. Turner's appeal against the action of the Committee in expelling him from the Institute.

There was a large attendance, the club room being quite full.

The Rev. G Heberden, as president of the Institute, briefly rehearsed the history of the case and then asked Mr. Turner to make his appeal.

Mr. Turner, before saying anything on the matter of appeal, took exception to the manner in which the letter addressed to him was worded, "demanding an ample apology." He intimated that had the letter been couched in milder language, these late proceedings might not have been taken, and throwing the blame on the secretaries who had sent so strong a letter. He further impugned the proceedings of the last general meeting to alter rule 7, as every member was not present, and the proper notice had not been given. He also held that, seeing that meeting was not legal, the rules remained as before, and therefore any person presenting himself to become a member on that day, had a right to become one, and to vote at that meeting. A person had applied to become a member that afternoon, and had been refused; he therefore held that the present meeting and all its proceedings were invalid.

Mr. W. Hargreaves said he knew of a person asking to become a member who was not in a fit state to know what he was about.

Mr. Turner said he should not appeal.

The president then stated that as Mr. Turner declined to appeal it was now the business of the meeting to consider a resolution endorsing the action of the committee. He asked Mr. Turner again if he wished to appeal, to which he replied that if he were expelled he would again make his way by force.

The president believed the committee had simply done what was their duty. As a committee they were responsible for what had been done and their duty was to uphold the order of the place, and to preserve the Institute. He believed they had done what any other committee would have done under the circumstances.

Mr. W. Hargreaves strongly animadverted on Mr. Turner's conduct in acting in so disgraceful a manner, and his threat that if expelled again, he would do the same.

Mr. Seanor had also hoped to hear a strong, logical, legal defence, but had been greatly disappointed in the result. Why not acknowledge he had done wrong and then get all set right again; he proposed a resolution endorsing the action of the committee on this matter.

Mr. B. Batty held that Mr. Turner had wished to compromise things, but the committee would not listen to him, and believed he was even now prepared to come to an amicable settlement Considerable discussion arose as to the action of the committee in having the Church Standard on the table and the way it came there, in which Mr. S. Batty, Mr. G. Armitage, Junr., and Mr. B. Batty joined.

This matter was ruled out of order on this occasion; the meeting having been called to hear Mr. Turner's appeal.

Mr. Butterick wished to know why the committee had not accepted Mr. Turner's apology; to which the president replied that they declined a verbal apology, but informed his messenger that they would consider a written one; with this Mr. Butterick was satisfied.

Mr. S. Seanor asked if Mr. Turner was willing to make an apology now or not, this would settle the matter in a few minutes?

Mr. Turner said if the committee would come half-way, he would come half-way, and be acknowledged he was wrong in the first step of burning the paper, but the committee was wrong afterwards.

After Mr. Abbishaw and Mr. Jas. Batty had spoken, from which it appeared evident the committee had never been asked to withdraw it, Mr. S. Batty moved and Mr. B. Batty seconded, that Mr. Turner be readmitted as a member.

Mr. J R. Seanor asked that this resolution might be withdrawn until the previous motion had been passed, endorsing the action of the committee. This resolution was then seconded by Mr. Geo. Armitage, as a trustee, who felt obliged to the committee for looking after their property.

This resolution was then put, 38 voting for it, none against.

Mr. S. Seanor then moved that Mr. J. Turner, having apologised for burning the Church Standard, be now re-admitted a member of the Institute.

Seconded by Mr. Batty, and carried unanimously.

The president expressed his pleasure at the satisfactory conclusion, and hoped Mr. Turner would hereafter be of great service to the Institute.

A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the meeting.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoa? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and 'sweetened.'" To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

ROTHWEEL HAIGH BOARD SCHOOLS.

The distribution of prizes gained by the scholars in the above schools took place on Monday afternoon, when a large number of children assembled, the boys in their own school-room, and the girls and infants in the girls' room.

Mr. J. R. Seanor, vice-chairman of the Board, conducted the proceedings, Mr. Marshall, the clerk, being also present, with the teachers. Mr. Seanor first addressed the children gathered in the girls' school-room, urging a more constant attendance, thereby enabling a larger number to secure prizes. Several songs were given by the girls, and a recitation and illustrated song by the infants, the prizes being presented in the course of the proceedings. The prizes were afterwards distributed to the boys in their class-room The following are the names of the successful scholars, the boys and girls having made over 400 attendances out of a possible 459 and the infants 350.

Jos. Fatkin and J. H. Hunt have not missed once all the year, and received a prize of additional value; two boys, Castlehouse and Hill, have also gained honour cards entitling them to the return of their fees, other three scholars having gained that distinction last year.

The drawing examination was conducted on Monday morning in the Boys' school-room at Rothwell Haigh, when 50 candidates presented themselves in the first grade, and 3 in the second. Mr. J. Parker and Mr. Marshall superintended the examination; some of the productions were exceedingly good; the exercises were collected and at once sealed up and sent to the Science and Art Department, South Kensington.

THE QUEEN'S JOURNEY TO MENTONE.

MENTONE, Thursday evening.—The Royal train conveying Queen Victoria and her suite arivedr here at twenty-five minutes past four o'clock this afternoon, and stopped opposite the Châlet des Rosiérs for the Royal party to alight. The journey from Cherbourg was accomplished without the slightest hitch, and the Queen and Princess Beatrice appeared on their arrival to be in excellent health, and but little fatigued. The English Vice-Consul received the Royal party at the temporary station, but, by Her Majesty's wish, there was no kind of official reception. Mr. Henfrey received the Queen and Princess at the entrance of the châlet, where every possible preparation has been made to ensure the comfort of the Royal visitors. A large bouquet has been forwarded to her Majesty at the châlet by the Municipality of Mentone.

THE ELEPHANT JUMBO.

One of the News Agencies sends the following message:—There is authority for stating that there is good reason to believe that if a sum of £15,000 can be raised or duly guarranteed, by Saturday, for the release of the elephant Jumbo, Mr. Davis, the agent for Mr. Barnum in this country, would be willing to telegraph to that gentleman for his sanction to an arrangement by which this valuable animal might remain in England, and probably would not dissuade Mr. Barnum from acceding to these terms. Appeals will be made to obtain the requested sum.

EAST AND WEST YORKSHIRE UNION RAILWAY.

The Wakefield Chamber of Commerce by resolution on Tuesday afternoon approved of a memorial drawn up by the Council in favour of the above scheme.

WE learn on going to press that Mr. Lockwood's committee are purposing to hold meetings next week, and that that gentleman is intending to go to the poll.

SPECIAL RELIGIOUS SERVICES are being held during this week in the Wesleyan Chapel, Rothwell, conducted by the Rev. J. Pickup, of Epworth, and Mr. Collingwood, the resident minister. The services are well attended, and a good number of persons have decided to lead a new and better life. The services are continued to-night and to-morrow.

ACCIDENT IN CARLTON LANE.

One Monday evening, a somewhat serious accident occurred in Carlton Lane, between two conveyances. Mr. George Barker, painter, of Rothwell, was driving down the lane towards home about half past seven, Mr. Daniel Crossley, of Carlton, coming up towards Carlton with his horse and cart, when by some misfortune the two conveyances collided, the drivers being both thrown from their seats, Mr. Crossley alighting in a stone heap and severely cutting his head, while Mr. Barker was thrown forward, sustaining a severe shaking and injuries to his arm and chest. Mr. Barker's horse, a valuable young animal, rushed off with the shafts down Butcher Lane and Church Street, and it is feared may be some time before it is sufficiently recovered to resume work. As the misfortune appears to have been a pure accident, we trust although great pain and considerable expense must be caused to both parties, that both men and horses will not have suffered any permanent damage.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE BY A YOUNG WOMAN.—A young woman named Sarah Wheatley, was brought up on a charge of attempting to commit suicide by throwing herself into the canal. Inspector Midgley said that the prisoner was the daughter of a miner residing at Methley, and about 18 months ago she went to a situation at Oulton in the house of a person named Willans, of Water Haigh Farm. On Friday last Miss Willans missed a ring, and on the following day she accused the prisoner of having taken it. The accusation so preyed on her mind that she threw herself into the canal. She was rescued by a man named James Westmoreland and a lad, the former going into the water with his clothes on. When she was taken out she expressed her determination to repeat the offence. She was, however, handed over to her parents, in whose custody she had been since. In answer to the Court, defendant said she would not commit such a rash act any more and as her mother said she would take care of her, the girl was discharged on Mrs Wheatley promising to pay costs, 8s.

Her Majesty the Queen, before her departure for Mentone, acknowledged in a gracefully worded letter the extreme pleasure it has given her to receive a special large paper copy of Mr. Tuer's "Bartolozzi and his works." Both of these sumptuous volumes are enriched with duplicates inprotective mounts of the principal illustration on satin.

FOOTBALL.

ROTHWELL v. ROTHWELL HARMONIC.

The match between these two clubs was brought off in the Harmonic Field, Carlton Lane, last Saturday, in the presence of a large number of spectators. The day was everything that could be desired, and the field was in splendid condition. The Harmonic captain won the toss, and chose to play with the little wind there was at their backs. Shortly after four o'clock the players took up their position in the field, where it was seen that a slight alteration had been made in both teams; J. R. Seanor taking the goal for the 'low end' instead of Tiffany, while Judson stood between the posts instead of Baines, who went half-back, in Jackson's place, he going forward to fill Woobank's vacancy, in the home team. The scarlet and blacks defended the pavillion goal and the blue and whites took charge of the Carlton Lane goal. Chadwick started the ball, and after a brief visit into the Harmonic quarters, they returned the compliment with a raid into their opponents' territory, where they claimed a foul near the Rothwell goal, a six yards kick, however, took it out of danger, and the forwards following well up, a shot at the Harmonic stronghold took place but without effect. Shortly after, Jackson made a long kick from the centre of the field, which was splendidly aimed, but Seaner was on the alert and a good catch was followed up by a good throw out, which relieved for some time, but the scarlet and blacks once more came down with a rush and a corner kick was gained which was entrusted to Harrison, who kicked it out. The free kick failed to bring permanent relief and for some time the Rothwell players were severely pressed, two corner kicks being taken by 't'Monic' but without any good result, Dobson getting the leather from the corner made a good run three quarters of the length of the field, where he passed over to Wilson, who unfortunately fell, and the scene of action was once more in the visitors' territory. During the remainder of the first half the play was more even, although nothing of importance occurred. The second half was commenced by a well sustained attack on the Harmonic goal, but a sharp bit of work by Taylor and Adamson, transferred the fight to the other end of the field, and a disastrous change it proved to be for the blue and whites, as a throw in about ten yards from the corner flag, was taken by Adamson, and Hartley, in attempting to head it, touched it with his cap and it shot between the uprights. This is not the first time that this trick has been done by the backs, and we would advise them to either leave those sort of balls alone altogether, or stand further from under the cross-bar, so that the custodian may have a chance. After this the Rothwell club worked well and two fierce scrimmages, several shies, and two corner kicks followed each other in rapid succession, but the Harmonic goal-keeper proved himself to be 'all there' and a very even game ended in a win for the Harmonic by 1 goal to nil. The game throughout was very keen, fouls were very frequent, and the umpires and referee were full handed.

The following are the names of the teams:—

HARMONIC.—A. Judson, goal; G. W. Blakey, G. Field, backs; T. W. Wright, A. Baines, G. Harrison, half-backs; H. Taylor, J. Whitehead, W. Jackson, W. H. Ward, G. Adamson, (capt.) forwards. Umpire, J. Woobank.

ROTHWELL.—J. R. Seanor, goal; F. J. Seanor, W. Hartley, backs; J. Rawson, H. Chapman, H. Waterhouse, half-backs; G. Dobson, G. Gibson, J. Wilson, J. Lawn, J. W. Chadwick, (capt.) forwards. Umpire F. Green. Referee:—W. Lambert.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr Epps, has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may by gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette—Make simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in Packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence for afternoon use.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—These remedies are unequalled throughout the world for bad legs, wounds, foul sores, and ulcers. Used according to directions given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Many poor sufferers who have been patients in the large hospitals under the care of eminent surgeons, and have derived little or no benefit from their treatment, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, scurvy and diseases of the skin there is nothing that can be used with so much benefit. In fact, in the worst form of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, used conjointly, are irresistible.

MARKETS.

LEEDS CORN, Tuesday.—There is a better demand for Californian wheat, at prices a little better than last week. Other kinds quiet. Maize 6d. dearer. Beans and peas at late rates. No change in the price of flour.—Leeds Corn Millers' Association Report.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—The Market begins to assume a more regular appearance than it has done for some time past owing to the restrictions that prevailed for a few weeks. The regulations, however, with regard to the cleansing, &c., of the market are of a more stringent character than hitherto, the supervision of the inspectors of the Privy Council being rigidly carried out. We had a larger supply of fat beasts and sheep compared with last week; and while prices for beef showed a decline of a farthing per lb, the rates for mutton were well sustained. The fat beasts included 20 pens of Lincolnshire animals, and 9 pens of Irish—the remainder being from the North. The quality generally was very good.

	this week	last week
No. of fat beasts	1600	1490

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

I SHOULD fancy that Mr. John Turner spent a very pleasant evening at the Mechanics' Institute last Friday, and his cup of joy would be full and overflowing whilst he was listening to the soothing remarks of Mr. Seanor and Mr. Hargreaves. No doubt we shall hear from Mr. Turner in these columns again, but I think that the public have now acquired sufficient information to be able to form a pretty accurate judgment on the unhappy dispute, and with the exception of a small but noisy section of the people, the verdict will be a strong condemnation of the action taken by Mr. Turner from first to last.

IF certain members of the School Board do not want the Church Sunday School to have quarters in the Board Schools, why dont they say so and have done with it, instead of fixing the rent at a prohibitory figure in the hope that it cannot be paid? The accommodation now asked for is not worth £15 a year, and it is not fair to ask such a rent for it.

LOOK out, ladies and gentlemen, there is to be another expedition to the County Court. If the present fine weather continues there is not much fear of my friend, the clerk to the School Board, getting lost in a fog again; and I hope he will get safely past a certain extensive establishment situated on the outskirts of Wakefield.

BY the way Mr. Smith seems to have come in for a pretty hot reply from Mr. Longbottom which will no doubt result in another epistle from the former gentleman. This sort of thing may be very interesting to those directly concerned in it, but it does not interest the general public, and I would recommend both the gentlemen to settle their differences in private, and wash their dirty linen in the proper place.

I SEE the new houses belonging to Mr. Snell at Oulton are just about finished, and I must congratulate him on the improvement which he has made in the appearance of the place; but a still greater improvement might be effected by the removal of the old cottages adjoining, and abutting on to the road, at any rate the end one, and the substitution of dwelling corresponding in frontage line and appearance with those lately erected; the effect of the houses as seen from Quarry Hill being at present quite spoiled by the old cottages just mentioned. Now Mr. Snell, what do you say? Will you confer a boon on the lovers of architectural fitness, and make the much desired improvement? Let us hope so.

I DO not wish to be thought disloyal in the least degree but I certainly am of opinion that far too much has been made of the occurence at Windsor the other day, both by the newspapers and in many other ways and the effect has been to elevate what was undoubtedly the irresponsible act of a brainless fool, to the dignity of a deliberately planned and atrocious attempt at regicide, and the drivelling wretch has acquired all the notoriety and importance which attaches to crimes of a grave and treasonable character. It is not at all certain that the chamber of the revolver which was discharged at the carriage of Her Majesty the Queen, was loaded with anything more serious than blank cartridge, no marks of a bullet having been found on the carriage, and scarcely any report was heard and that only by a very few people. We are all of us, of course most heartily thankful that the Queen was unharmed, and grave and profound indeed would be the sorrow of everyone should any evil befal her who in all respects wears "the white flower of a blameless life," but the act of Maclean was so harmless as to be almost beneath contempt and certainly not deserving of the notoriety which it has received.

THERE is apparently a movement on foot for the establishment of a new football club under Rugby rules, and a meeting of those interested is to be held at Oulton on Friday next. I hope that the project may be carried to a successful issue and that there may be a good club formed.

WHAT splendid weather we are having, to be sure. While I write these lines the sun is shining most brilliantly, and the air feels like that of a fine summer day. At the present rate of procedure, we are in for a very long summer, which will be both a novelty and a treat.

I UNDERSTAND that my old friend Mr. Lockwood is aspiring to a seat on the Local Board at Rothwell, and this time I hope he may be successful in attaining his object, for apart from the undoubted fact that a joiner is the most fitting person to have to do with a Board, Mr. Lockwood possesses business qualifications which eminently qualify him for the office, which is more than can be said for one or two candidates—one in particular.

Mr. Lockwood is apt to become just a little prosy in making a speech, and perhaps the other members may occasionally feel bored at having to listen to him if elected, but "taking one consideration with another," he will be the right man in the right place, and I hope he may be at the top of the poll.

LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

The Local Board election coming round with its usual preliminaries, I ask for your kindness in allowing me a review of the situation. To begin with, of course the self-elected 'Cross Parliament,' with its 'Attorney General,' have already decided the question by a small majority of its members, its decision being that the experienced Mr H P Newsome is to be shunted in favor of the renowned 'Church Standard Gladiator.' But possibly there may be a difference of opinion on this subject by the majority of the ratepayers, who although they have been classed as 'under Conservative squire and parson influence,' are still independent enough to judge the public reputation, personal character, and practicable business fitness of a candidate for the responsible position. The boasted ability of the Liberal Association to carry a member unfortunately does not give the highly necessary endowment of good business capability to the person elected, or we might leave our public men to their choice.

Politics too, may serve better than personalities as the principle on which such contests may be fought, but when too strongly developed in a candidate, they certainly hinder rather than accelerate public business. Times change, and we change with them, but it is not so very long ago as to be forgotten, that Mr John Turner in his 'Gas' letter, wrote something like this, 'that he had not either the inclination or qualification' to be a member of the Board. Next then, as regards Mr Newsome, he may not have pleased everybody by acting upon his own judgment, but we do believe that he has mastered the financial and other business of the Board as few men would have done in three years, probably better than some other honorary members possibly can if there for a lifetime. Whilst such men as he, along with Mr Joseph Charlesworth and Mr W Hargreaves offer themselves for re-election, there ought not to be any serious difficulty in coming to a choice at this election.

We would further emphasize an important point, namely, that the responsibility of paying so large a proportion of the rates is our best security that they will not sanction any useless expenditure, but carefully weigh every burden that has to be borne.

Irresponsible and pugilistic actions (especially legal ones) have made sad havoc in some townships not far away, and in order to prevent such things, we must have steady-going men on our Board, already well ballasted by personal and business responsibities.

But for the circumstances named, Mr G Lockwood would certainly have a claim upon the electors, many of whom were sorry that he just missed last year. We trust, however, that his good business sense will lead him to the dignity of standing aloof until another election, when his having done so will further establish his claim, and lead him, we hope, to success.

So trusting that these few words may have some weight in saving the expense and worry of a contested election,

I remain,
Yours truly,
A RATEPAYER.

Rothwell,
March 16th, 1882.

FOOTBALL.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

While reading the Times of last week, I came across a paragraph announcing a football match which was to take place on the Saturday, and thinking this would surely be a right match, I came to the conclusion that I would go and see it; I also noticed in the paragraph some very good advice "Play fairly, keep your temper, and believe in the fair play of your opponents." I went to see the match played and I can assure you that when I saw the two teams turn out into the field, I thought them very equally matched (for size account) but I suppose that's nothing to do with football playing. However, the ball was put in the centre and the men to their places allotted to them by their captains and then the first kick was made. I noticed at this point everybody seemed to have a feeling towards either one team or the other which was of course quite right, but what brought me to a wonderment was this, why should brothers as it were, play so bitterly against one another, for I heard some of the bystanders say that it would be a keen fight, but I suppose bigotry is the cause of this sad feeling amongst them, for I was given to understand while watching the play that the Harmonic had played very well of late and the other club too, but I suppose they could'nt call themselves champions so they thought they would send a challenge to the Harmonic, never expecting it would be accepted; but it was accepted, and if the Juniors had won they were going to ring it round that they were the premier club, as I saw it termed in a letter a short time ago. A great deal of agitation was created by the match and ill-feeling too, for I noticed that when the Harmonic got the goal, there was sure to be a quarrel amongst them. I think I never saw so much rough play before, not even in the match at Oulton which the Harmonic played some time ago. Now Sir, there is no one who wishes our two clubs better success than what I do, but I am of opinion that this match ought never to have occured, for I have come to this conclusion that it will have created such an ill-feeling between the two clubs that very likely will never be quenched so long as the clubs exists. However, I dont say but what it would be a great benefit to both clubs to play home and home every year and never heed what the spectators have to say about the Harmonic not going to have their own way in this match. I dont think they ever wanted their own way, but they did want fairness in all points, but they did'nt get it for I saw several foul plays from the Juniors, and I also heard some curious remarks made relating to the conduct of the referee, Mr. Walter Lambert, from the beginning to the finish of the match, for I stopped and heard all I could. Now Sir, what I think about the conduct of Mr. Lambert as referee is this, that he could'nt have done fairer to both parties than what he did, and I hope so long as he has had the honour of having the position this time I hope to see him in the same place again. Now I wish to say at the finish that if the spectators would not interfere the next match will come off much better, which I suppose is to take place on the ground of the Juniors; the result of this match will be given in your report I suppose.

Hoping no one will take an offence to what I have said respecting both our local clubs.

I am yours truly,
A BYSTANDER.

(We failed to see more ill-feeling or rough play, as our correspondent calls it, (that is, more anxiety and resolution to win) than we should have expected in so closely contested a game, and in an amusement like this, we presume players anticipate an occasional scuffle, tumble, or kick. The bigotry referred to we should rather consider as a rightful pride in believing that 'our club' is the best by both parties, and would not in any sense condemn it, so long as they do not deny the same right of belief to their opponents.—ED.)

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s 9d.

Box sent post free on receipt of 15 or 35 stamps by Wm. Mather, Wholesale Druggist, Manchester.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.

THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have their skins blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. The more delicate the skin the quicker its ruin. THE ALBION MILK AND SULPHUR SOAP is the purest, the whitest, and most purifying of all soaps, by its purifying action taking away and preventing all pimples, blotches, and roughness. It is recommended by the entire medical profession as the most elegant preparation for the skin that is known. A boon to sensitive skins. By all Chemists, in tablets, 6d. and 1s.—The Albion Sanitary Soap Co., 532, Oxford Street, London.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the teeth a peculiar pearly-whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke, "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s. 6d., of all Chemists and Perfumers. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Ask your Chemist for "THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER," sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere at 3s. 6d. per Bottle. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

HAVE IT IN YOUR HOUSES, and follow the advice of the eminent Doctors Prout, Stevens, Morgan, Turley, Dowsing, Gibbon, Sparks, &c., who have borne unqualified testimony to the value of LAMPLOUGH'S PYRETIC SALINE. It gives instant relief in headache, sea or bilious sickness, constipation, heartburn, scarlet and other fevers, smallpox, measles, eruptive and skin complaints. Use no substitute. H. THE SOURCE OF ENGLAND'S POWER

When schemes are being proposed for more closely connecting our own country with the continent by the Channel Tunnel, by a continuous line of easy, fast going steamers, and other ideas of a more chimerical character, it may be well to consider how England, the little isle of the sea, has become and is still, the greatest and most powerful among the world's kingdoms.

The source of the mighty power and commanding influence of this country amongst the nations of the earth is undoubtedly the sea. Our military force, Volunteers included, would make but a poor show against the legions of France, of Germany, or of Russia. The insecurity of a land frontier was plainly enough demonstrated eleven years ago in the war between the two first mentioned of these nations. The French, having been beaten on their own borders, were compelled to retreat, and the German army poured into France like an irresistible torrent. Nothing could stem the tide of the invasion. The only line which the French possessed had been broken, and they were completely at the mercy of the foe. Now, supposing an invader to have beaten the English fleet at sea, a very improbable contingency, he would still have the Artillery Volunteers to deal with when he attempted to land, and to silence the great chain of fortifications which runs round the coast.

The sea is so familiar to us that we can scarcely realise the feeling of those who having lived their lives in an inland country such as Germany gaze upon it for the first time. In the French invasion of 1870 it came to pass that a few Uhlans entered Dieppe by way of spying out the nakedness of the land: and riding on to the heights near the town suddenly looked out upon the vast shining bosom of the English Channel. They gazed with astonishment upon its depths, which seemed to tell them that thus far could they go, but no farther. The army of which they were the representatives could overrun France, but with that their mission ended. Whatever cause of quarrel they might have with England, they could not reach her shores by chariots and horsemen. The sea between England and France is not a deep piece of water; the towers of Westminster Abbey, 225 feet high, would, if plunged into at its deepest part, be 45 feet above the surface. But such as it is, it forms a very effectual protection against the invasion of our shores. Napoleon menaced us from the heights of Boulogne, but after collecting a vast army there, drew it away again. The days of Julius Cæsar had passed, and, for the matter of that, so had those of William, Duke of Normandy.

Some people call the sea a "waste of waters;" but so far from this being the case it keeps the earth from becoming a waste. Take away the sea, and no grass would grow in the fields, while the forests would perish. Water is as indispensable to vegetable and animal life as the air itself, and water is supplied from the sea. "All rivers," said the Psalmist, "run into the sea, yet the sea is not full." Because the ocean is continually forcing up into the sky as much water as all the rivers of the world are pouring into its bosom. It generally happens that if there is an excess of moisture in one hemisphere there is a lack in the other. This was the case during the late autumn, when at the very time that our lands were drenched with rain, there was a severe drought in the United States. The proportions of earth and sea remain as when they were first allotted; and there can be neither more nor less water upon the surface of the globe now than at the creation.

In all ages have graphic writers admired the grandeur, the immensity, and the power of the sea. Calm in its majesty, imposing in its sublimity, irresistible in its might, it is the fountain of all the fruitfulness and the birthplace of all the resources that feed and support the population of the world. Besides sending forth the clouds to the uttermost parts of the earth, it purifies the atmosphere. If the winds carry upon their wings the malaria of the lands over which they have blown, they are cleansed in their passage over the broad bosom of the ocean, and they are sifted from the impurities. The busy people in inland towns spend their brief holiday by the seaside, because the breeze sent upon the land by the great ocean has a wonderfully invigorating power. It is laden with health-giving properties, and restores vigour to the worn and weary frame. The sacred writers often made use of the sea to point a moral or to illustrate a truth. There is no more expressive passage from beginning to end of the volume than that in which the exile of Patmos described the end of things created by the sentence "And there was no more sea!" Three-fourths of the contents of the earth's surface had fled away, and thus was marked at once the end of Time and the plunge into Eternity.

YESTERDAY, in the COMMONS, Mr. Gladstone, in Committee of the whole House, proposed that a grant of £10,000 be made to Prince Leopold on the occasion of his marriage, in addition to the sum of £15,000 which His Royal Highness now enjoys; and a sum not exceeding £6000 a year to his bride in the event of her surviving him. Sir S. Northcote seconded the motion. Mr. Labouchere opposed the motion, and was followed on the same side by Mr. Broadhurst, Mr. Healy, and Mr. Storey, to the latter of whom Mr. Gladstone replied. On a division, 387 voted for and 42 against the motion—majority for, 345. The grant of £6,000 a year to Princess Helen in the event of her widowhood was also agreed to.

COLONEL FRED. BURNABY started yesterday morning from Dover on his balloon trip across the English Channel. The weather was very fine, and the balloon proceeded steadily. Colonel Burnaby, at his own request, was unaccompanied by any one. Up to the time of going to press no intelligence had been received of the descent of the balloon.

THE removal of the elephant Jumbo from the Zoological Gardens was effected during Wednesday night without accident. About half-past one the van was drawn out of the Gardens, and no obstruction was met with on the whole route to St. Katherine's Docks, which were reached about five o'clock. The van was then hoisted on board a barge, in which it was conveyed to the Assyrian Monarch, at Millwall, by the afternoon tide. According to present arrangements, the ship will sail to-day.

SACRED ORATORIO.

Last Monday, Farmer's sacred oratorio—"Christ and his Soldiers," was performed by a number of ladies and gentlemen from Rothwell, Woodlesford and Methley Choral Societies; about 60 singers and 20 instrumentalists joining in its production. The several portions of the composition were generally well and pleasingly rendered, a vast amount of time having been expended in mastering its somewhat difficult arrangements, especially by those who accompanied on string or wind instruments.

The various choruses were marked by power and a considerable measure of emphasis, and great credit is due to all who followed the baton of Mr. W. Lambert. To our mind the most effective choruses were those in which solo verses were introduced. The instrumentalists had a difficult task in the peculiar style which accompanies this beautiful oratorio. Perhaps the most taking choruses were "Ride on, ride on in majesty," and "Jesus lives," but in all they kept well together and in fair harmony. The only piece for "band only," is the march at the commencement of part second, and this shewed a degree of taste and attention which spoke well for the gentlemen who had spent many hours in its acquisition.

Miss M. J. Braime took the larger portion of the treble solos, and sang with an ease and power which told of complete mastery of her work, her best effort being the sweet song—"Our blest Redeemer," in which the accompaniment was nicely kept under.

Miss O. Braime took two or three of the soprano airs in a pleasurable manner; the solo and chorus "Hark a thrilling voice is sounding" being especially effective. Miss Teale's voice and demeanour are peculiarly well suited for the contralto airs in this oratorio, and her touching rendering of "By Jesu's grave" was very good; Miss Teale also sang "Rock of Ages" in the second part, which, while beautifully written was tastefully given, and resulted in a demand for its repetition. On Mr. T. West fell the heaviest share of work, but being in excellent voice, and well acquainted with the work, he went through his frequent solos with remarkable care and acquitted himself in a most admirable manner; if we may select one as being more successful than the others, we would point to the recitation "Christian seek not yet repose." The really "tit bit" of the evening was the unaccompanied quartett by Miss Braime, Miss Teale, Mr. Atkinson and Mr. West, "Jesus died for us." The perfect accord of the voices, the even balance of harmony, the tasteful expression, held the audience spell bound, and no wonder everybody asked for its repetition, which was given. Mr. Walter Lambert conducted, and deserves every credit for the careful manner in which he carried the work through.

Although an excellent concert, and entailing an immense amount of time and labour on all taking a part in its production, the audience was most meagre and we fear the receipts will not more than cover expenses. Such results must be exceedingly disheartening to those who endeavour to bring out good music for the people.

A hearty and well deserved vote of thanks was given to the performers on the motion of Mr. Lockwood, seconded by Mr. Parker. If any balance remains, it is to be devoted to the reduction of the Extended platform Fund.

EAST AND WEST YORKSHIRE UNION RAILWAY.

A court of referees sat on Monday, at the House of Commons to consider cases of locus standi in regard to different railway bills now before Parliament The court consisted of Mr. Pemberton, M.P., Mr. Parker, M.P., Sir. John Duckworth, Mr. Rickards, and Mr. Bonham Carter.—Mr. Pope, Q.C., appeared to support the locus standi of the Great Northern and Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railways, who have lodged petitions praying to be heard against the East and West Yorkshire Union Railways. He said no question of competition arose in the matter, but whether the petitioners should have a general or limited locus standi.—Mr. Bidwell, Q.C., argued that they should only have a limited locus standi, and the court of referees decided to give a limited locus standi in Clauses 49 and 50.

A petition in favour of the line was presented to the House on Tuesday, by Mr. Serjeant Simon, M.P., for Dewsbury, from the Batley Chamber of Commerce.

The petition from Rothwell is now complete and will be presented shortly.

LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

A meeting was held last night at the Queen Hotel, Stourton, in support of Mr. George Lockwood. Mr. J Oliver, Rothwell Haigh, presided, and said that he knew in Mr. Lockwood they had a most eligible candidate and one whose business qualifications and experience in buildings would prove a most useful acquisition to the Board; in his opinion he was the most suitable candidate for the third seat and earnestly commended him to the voters, and as Mr. Oliver had the largest amount to pay to the rates as a private person, he thought they might be sure he should not support a candidate whom he thought would not use the money of the ratepayers wisely and well. Mr. Lockwood he thought to be a man of good common sense and judgement, and he felt sure if they only knew him at Stourton as well as he did they would be sure to vote for him. Mr. Lockwood said he came before the ratepayers on non-political grounds, he failed to see what the colour of a rag had to do with the administrations of laws that were made to their hands. There were good business men in all shades of politics and his motto was "send the best man." He had been a worker all his life and would probably continue so to the end, and he thought he knew the interests of the working class as well as anyone, for what tended to benefit them also benefited him. He should if elected, use the abilities he possessed for the welfare of the whole township to the best of his knowledge; he was not prepared to make grand promises for he often found those that did only deceived them. He was grateful to Mr. Oliver for the kind things he had said about him and he hoped they would all present assist him by their votes; he thought the numbers of last year's votes fairly entitled him to their confidence and if they at Stourton would only support him as well as the voters would at Rothwell he had no doubt of the result. A vote was then taken in his favour and most of the people present supported. The chairman said it was unanimous, none against it. A vote of thanks to the chairman brought a very pleasant meeting to a close.

Mr Newsome has addressed several meetings out of doors and elsewhere, further vindicating his action on the Board, and answering questions as regards his past and future policy.

Mr. John Turner is also prosecuting his candidature in the same way, no address having yet been issued by either Mr. Newsome or Mr. Turner.

Mr. W Hargreaves has spoken on two or three occasions, and the committee are using their endeavours to preserve the seats of Mr. Charlesworth and Mr. Hargreaves.

There has been no large meeting yet on behalf of any of the candidates. Nominations cannot be accepted after to-day.

The voting papers will be distributed on Friday next; should any person not receive one who is justly entitled to a vote, he should apply for one before Wednesday the 5th, at the Board-room.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoas? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

ROTHWELL SCHOOL BOARD.

The usual monthly meeting of the above Board was held on Friday last; present, Messrs. W. Hargreaves, (chairman) J. R. Seanor, J. Batty, J. Parker, J. G. Turner, and the clerk and attendance officer.

The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, the clerk reported the distribution of prizes at Rothwell and Rothwell Haigh, and the drawing examination at Rothwell Haigh.

The report of Rothwell School was then presented.—The mixed school though in a fair state on the whole, was not quite satisfactory, owing partly to the inefficiency of the staff. The infants' school, under Miss Jowett, passed a good examination and was generally very satisfactory. The total amount earned by the Mixed school is £90, and by the Infants £60 14s; these with the Night school grant of £9 6s, make a general total of £160.

The Board resolved to advertise for an assistant mistress in place of Mr. Russell, and also to select two girls suitable for pupil teachers in the girls' and infants' schools. Lily Gill was also accepted as a P. T. candidate in the Rothwell Haigh infants' school.

The attendance officer reported a considerable decrease in Rothwell school, owing to the prevalence of measles and a few scarletina cases. At Rothwell Haigh the schools are generally well attended.

The fees of two children were remitted, and summonses ordered against several parents, unless an improvement takes place in the attendance of their children.

The salaries of teachers, £64 4s. 2d., of officers, £13 15s., and several accounts, were ordered to be paid, and the wants of the teachers granted.

The meeting then adjourned to Thursday, for the further consideration of Rothwell Haigh new school plan.

An Adjourned meeting of the Board was held last evening, present—Messrs. W. Hargreaves (chairman) J. Batty, J. G. Turner, J. Parker and the clerk and architect.

The clerk having received a letter from the Department sanctioning the plan of the proposed new school at Rothwell Haigh; it was resolved to advertise for tenders for the works in the Leeds Mercury, Yorkshire Post, and Rothwell Times.

There being a vacancy in the Rothwell mixed schools shortly, the clerk was instructed to advertise for a transfer 2nd or 3rd year.

WESLEYAN CIRCUIT MEETING.

On Monday last, the various meetings connected with Wesleyan Methodism in the Wakefield Circuit, were held in West Parade upper school-room, Wakefield.

The trustees connected with the various chapels in the circuit met at half-past one for the transaction of the usual annual business.

At half-past three, the stewards, leaders and local preachers held the Quarterly Circuit Meeting in the same room.

The Rev James Hughes, superintendent minister, presided; and there was also present the Revs. James Hind, G. W. Russell, and C. A. Collingwood, Mr. Cookson, and Mr. Skelsey, the circuit stewards, and a good attendance of representatives from the various societies in town and country.

A hymn having been sung, and prayer offered, the minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mr. Richardson, who had kindly filled the office of secretary pro tem.

The chairman then feelingly referred to the great loss sustained by the circuit generally, and by this meeting, in the death of the late Mr John Wilson, their secretary. Mr. Richardson having declined the office, the chairman suggested the name of Mr. Marshall, who, on the motion of Mr. Cookson, seconded by Mr. Skelsey, was unanimously invited to occupy the post of circuit secretary, in accepting which he expressed his high appreciation of the honour conferred. The meeting then passed a resolution conveying the condolence of the members with Mr. Wilson, junr., on the lamented death of his highly esteemed and greatly beloved father, who for many years had occupied important and honourable positions in connection with Wakefield Methodism, and at the time of his death as secretary to the Quarterly Circuit Meeting. The Rev. chairman then reported the numerical state of the circuit, which was most gratifying, there being now 1137 members on the books, with 60 on trial, and a large number in catechisism classes. This number shows an increase of 180 full members during the year, the largest increase it had ever been his pleasure to report. Arrangements were made to entertain 22 ministers by friends in this circuit during the forthcoming Conference in Leeds, and a committee was appointed for carrying out the necessary details. The financial statement was then given by Mr. Cookson, senior circuit steward, shewing an advance on the quarter of nearly £10 in the ordinary income of the circuit. The friends at Westgate End requested the sanction of a renovation scheme for their chapel, which was granted, at an estimated cost of not more than £1000. The collections towards the Thanksgiving Fund amounted to £23 17s. 11d., which with subscriptions, &c, previously received, brought up the total sum from Wakefield circuit to £431 4s. 5s. A suggestion was made of the advisability of one of the ministers residing in Warren Terrace being removed to another part of the town, and steps will be taken in that direction.

The very hearty thanks of the meeting were presented separately to each of the ministers, and a cordial and unanimous invitation given to remain another year in the circuit; several members of the meeting speaking in high terms of the efficient services and valuable labours of the rev. gentlemen. In accepting the invitation to remain another year, the ministers touchingly referred to the kind remarks which had been made, and willingly placed themselves at the service of the circuit. Several other matters having been reported, the meeting was brought to a close in the usual manner.

The friends afterwards took tea together, and the local preachers' meeting was then held.

MARKETS.

LEEDS CORN, Tuesday.—There is a better demand for Californian wheat, at prices a little better than last week. Other kinds quiet. Maize 6d. dearer. Beans and peas at late rates. No change in the price of flour.—Leeds Corn Millers' Association Report.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—The market was well supplied with stock, the quality of which was excellent. There was also a large attendance of buyers from this and the neighbouring counties. Twenty-two pens were filled with foreign animals in good condition, and there were also fourteen pens of Irish cattle, a like display of Lincolnshire beasts, and several droves of first-class north-country beasts. The beef trade ruled slow, notwithstanding that the weather was much colder, and prices were slightly in favour of buyers. A large number of the sheep were shorn, and they seemed to meet with a better inquiry than woolled sheep. There was a larger show of pigs than for some time past, and a fair trade was done at late rates. The sudden change in the weather considerably interfered with trade in lean beasts and milch cows.

		this week,		last week,
No. of	fat beasts,	1780,		1600
"	sheep	3600,	"	3400
"	milch cows &c	160,	"	115
"	Pigs	730,	"	200

Prices were as follows:—

Fat beasts, 7½d and 8½d per lb.
Sheep, ewes, 8½d. to 9d "
" wethers 9½d and 10d "
" small, 11d "
Milch cows, £16 to £24
Lean beasts, £8 to £14
Pigs, small, 15s to 25s.
" store, 50s to 70s.
" fat, 7/ to 7/6 per stone.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

WAKEFIELD CORN, Friday, 12.30 p.m.—Wheat is generally held for an advance of sixpence to a shilling per quarter on last week's prices, but there is only a limited extent of business passing. Barley in moderate request at rather less money; beans and oats steady. Maize, the turn in sellers favour. Weather to-day is cold, and rain seems likely to fall.

A BIG STEEL CASTING.

(From an American Contempory).

AN EIGHT TON COG-WHEEL OF BESSEMER STEEL MADE IN SIXTY-FOUR MINUTES.

At the works of the Pittsburg Steel Casting Company, March 1st, a piece of work was performed which will attract no slight degree of attention among iron and steel workers. It was the making of the largest Bessemer steel casting ever made in this country. The casting was a cog-wheel to form part of a blooming mill for their own works, and will weigh when turned and finished over 16,000 pounds. The same works have heretofore made crucible steel castings of three or four tons weight, but nothing at all approaching this in size has been cast of either grade or steel.

Beside the size of the casting the rapidity with which the work was performed and the grade of the steel make it a noticeable feature. The casting was made in two 'blows,' of thirty-two minutes each, one ladle being kept standing until the second one was filled, when both were taken to the mould and poured simultaneously. The steel was very low in carbon. The entire arrangements, which were carried out under the superintendence of Mr. Wm. Hainsworth, late of Rothwell, were remarkably perfect, and their success in every respect indicates the high degree of perfection to which the steel manufacturing business has been raised in Pittsburgh.

CORRECTION.—It appears a little error of description crept into our last issue concerning the accident in Carlton Lane, by which Mr. Barker and Mr. Crossley were thrown out of a conveyance and injured. The two gentlemen were riding together in Mr. Barker's trap, and the colliding cart belongs to Mr. Hallas, publican, of Lingwell Gate.

CHURCH BAZAAR.—As will be observed in our advertising columns, the friends of our parish church are purposing to hold a Bazaar at Easter, which we trust will prove eminently successful. It is quite a novelty to hear of a Church Bazaar at Rothwell. Our dissenting subscribers are thoroughly up to these matters, not a year going by without a Bazaar, fancy fair, or Christmas tree. We have no doubt the promoters of this effort will be pleased to see a large company.

SPECIAL services have been continued in the Wesleyan Chapel, Rothwell, this week, and have been remarkably well attended.

AFTER the warm, sunshiny weather with which we have been favored for some time, bringing out the hedges and field flowers a month earlier than usual, we have experienced a thorough change since Monday when a sharp cold wind commenced, quickly followed by snow. Tuesday was a wretchedly cold, wet day; Wednesday and Thursday being not quite so sharp, and without any rain.

FOOTBALL.

ROTHWELL HARMONIC v. HULL TOWN.—The return match between these two clubs was brought off at Hull last Saturday, and resulted in a win for the home team by 7 goals to 2. The Harmonic were rather unfortunate, and played the game from shortly after commencement with only ten men.

POLICE NEWS.

WEST RIDING COURT.

MONDAY

NEIGHBOURS AT VARIANCE AT ROTHWELL.—Sarah Eyre, a Rothwell woman, was charged with having used obscene language to Ruth Ellis, a neighbour, on the 10th inst. The evidence adduced for the complainant showed that on the day named defendant addressed complainant in language of the most filthy nature, and also behaved in a very unwomanly manner. Her offence was also aggravated by the fact that a funeral was passing at the time. The gravedigger at the Rothwell Church and the defendant stated that the complainant was the worst of the two. The case was dismissed, the parties being ordered to pay the expenses, 11s., between them.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We would particularly urge our friends to send in their letters and news, as early as possible, as we cannot accept contributions later than Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, except in the case of matters occurring on Wednesday or Thursday which should be forwarded within a short period after. Advertisements may be sent as late as Friday morning.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

I AM told that there was only a small attendance at the concert at the Rothwell Mechanics' Institute on Monday evening, but that those who were present were much enjoyed the programme, in which Farmers beautiful music was rendered by the band and chorus, although the instruments were at times rather too prominent, and the time taken throughout much too slow; with these exceptions, I am informed by those well able to judge, that much credit is due to the performers all round. The several lady principals sustained their parts with their usual success, the voice and style of Miss Teale apparently finding most favor with the audience, as that lady received the only encore accorded to any of the soloists. The favorite Oulton basso, Mr. T. West, sang with good taste and spirit, when necessary, and his future appearance at Rothwell will be looked for with interest. The beautiful unaccompanied quartette in the second part, 'Jesus died for us,' was so carefully and feelingly given, that an encore was loudly demanded and complied with, and in this matter the good taste of the audience was displayed, as the quartette is the gem of the whole piece.

By the way, I hear that Mr. T. West had a bit of a spill after the rehearsal on Saturday night, but fortunately for him, and the Rothwell concert goers, he escaped with little more than a good shaking; not so the cab-driver, who, report says had been indulging too freely, and came to grief in consequence.

THE time is now approaching for our annual meetings for the election of surveyors and overseers, and I see that the usual notices have been posted up respecting them. Last year it will be remembered I had a good deal to say about these meetings both before and after, but at present there does not appear to be any great question coming to the fore, such as the Galliard Ring which I had the honor of being the chief instrument in putting down. I think the only question likely to cause any difference of opinion is that concerning the place where the general township meetings shall be held, and I think there ought not to be much difficulty about that, if it is dealt with in a fair and unselfish spirit by those attending the meeting at Oulton. What is wanted by the Woodlesford people is a fair share of the public meetings, which have hitherto, in the absence of a suitable place at Woodlesford, been held at Oulton, but now that we have a school in the village which is public property and can be had free, I think we have a just claim to be considered, and I also think that our neighbours at Oulton will not hesitate to admit the claim.

HAS anybody heard the result of the recent expedition to the Wakefield County Court?

I AM told that Mr. R. J. Smith was there in full, and his trio of male and female supporters also, as they were seen to leave Woodlesford Station for Leeds pretty early in the morning; but how did they get on at the Court? that's what I want to know.

I HOPE the highway surveyors of Woodlesford and Oulton are keeping a look-out after that traction engine which hails from the Brewery, and is familiarly known as 'Timothy.' Such engines often make sad havoc of the roads, in which case owners are liable for damages, so I hope that our local surveyors will look after the aforesaid 'Timothy,' and make him pay if necessary.

ROTHWELL is getting a benefit just now in consequence of the Local Board election, and stump oratory is on the rampage: if the electors want the best men possible on the Board, let them consider which of the candidates possess the best business abilities, in addition to substantial property or other interest in the village, and cast politics to the winds; and they will not be long in arriving at a sound conclusion. It is not always the man who can make the longest and loudest speech, who is most worthy of a seat on the Local Board; far from it. I don't think my readers will find Mr. Charlesworth or Mr. Hargreaves stumping the village night after night, and yet they will both be elected; but who will be the third successful candidate I will not venture to say, but I think it will be Mr. Newsome, as he has already had three years' experience of the work, which should stand him in good stead. I should like to see Mr. Lockwood returned, but scarcely think that he is sufficiently well known personally to the electors as yet. Perhaps another year, when he has not to contend against three such formidable gentlemen as those above mentioned, Mr. Lockwood will stand a better chance. With regard to Mr. John Turner, I must say that from an educational point of view he is well qualified; but there his recommendation for election ends

ROTHWELL HARMONIC v. ROTHWELL.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times

Dear Sir,

In your last issue there appeared a letter (a magnificent piece of composition) respecting the match played between the above named clubs, and written, I suppose, with the purpose of giving an impartial report of the game, (at least such might be inferred from the opening sentences) but as the writer before proceeding far shows himself to be not an impartial observer, but a very strong partizan of the Harmonic, and as the missive contains several statements which are hardly correct, I, as one of the spectators present, wish to protest against the remarks made, out of fairness to both parties who engaged in the contest.

I am aware that when a letter appears in print signed as in this case, 'A bystander,' it is very difficult, or perhaps unnecessary, to surmise who is the writer, but although the author would have the public believe he intends his remarks to be unprejudiced, my suspicions (and I am not alone) rest upon a prominent member of the Harmonic, who, during the progress of the game, offered to bet 'two to one' on the home team, a very reprehensible proceeding, and one which showed 'bad form' on the part of that worthy, but rather noisy individual. Of course, this is mere conjecture on my part, still I believe my suspicions are not altogether unfounded.

I shall endeavour to take up one two points, which seem to imply that the greater part of ill-feeling shown during the match came from the Rothwell team (not Juniors) and their supporters. In my opinion, such games, (especially when played by two elevens of the same village) are not, or ever can be, indulged in, without a certain amount of feeling being infused into them, not necessarily ill feeling, but a desire on the part of each player to gain the victory for his own side.

Your correspondent makes a remark respecting who should be termed the 'champions,' and goes on to state that the Rothwell club, if they had won the match, were going to ring it round they were the 'premier' club. Where he got that idea from I am unable to say, but it is only one of the many questionable statements contained in his narrative. On this point I have been informed that when the Rothwell club had to play a certain team it was said, 'had we not better send to the premier club for assistance' meaning the Harmonic. Now Mr. Bystander is that correct?

Again, he mentions about the sending of a challenge, 'never expecting it would be accepted,' but forgets to state when this was done, the match was to be for the benefit of the Leeds Infirmary, (a good suggestion on the part of the senders) but this was declined by the Harmonic, who would only play for a certain sum of money per man, a course of action which cannot be condemned too severely. It appears, however, that better counsels have since prevailed, and two matches arranged, but with neither of the above objects in view.

Bystander also undertakes the self-imposed task of defending the referee, Mr. Lambert, and wishes to make it appear that all his decisions had been called into question. As far as I could see, whatever he decided was agreed to, minus the 'curious remarks' which your correspondent imputes to somebody; whether players or spectators, I am unable to gather from the clear and lucid manner in which he expresses his ideas, as shown in the able contribution under notice. I am not going to question what was done by the referee, but was it the best possible taste for him to clap heartily when the home team secured the goal. Did not this shew which way his inclinations went, or was he merely carried away by the exuberance of his pent up feelings? I sincerely hope the latter.

By the way there is one part of the letter I cannot fathom, viz.—"When the Harmonic got the goal there was sure to be a quarrel amongst them." Who is meant by them? The Harmonic? If so, why should they [illegible] a quarrel? [illegible] rather to the circumstance that the ball went in the opposite direction to the [illegible] still as a well known local cricketer often says, 'it counts.' [illegible] were free to take the opinion of "Bystander" as correct, but [illegible] As for the match having created an ill-feeling between the two teams I presume that will never be quenched. What never? I have not yet heard of any such fatal occurrence.

In conclusion, although not a football player myself, I am always glad to hear of the success of both clubs, and my purpose in writing is not to injure or defend the other, but a desire to put the question at issue, at least as fairly as done by the writer of the letter of last week, and I sincerely hope that whenever the teams meet again (still such games are not exactly to my taste) "may the best side win."

My parting advice to "Bystander" is, "that persons who tell all they hear, often tell more than they hear."

Yours Truly,
ANOTHER BYSTANDER.

FOOTBALL.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

If you will kindly allow me a small space in your valuable paper, I will try and put right the erroneous remarks of a correspondent under the nom de plume of "Bystander." It would have been a little fairer play if the Harmonic umpire had not called to his colleagues and directed them in their playing, for I was always given to understand that the work of the umpire was to see that the game is played according to the rules. Also he states "that the Harmonic had played very well of late and the other club too but I suppose they could not call themselves champions,' meaning I think the Rothwell Club, but if he will kindly peruse the correspondence of my friend 'Ajax' and 'Committee Man' he will find that the Harmonic club is termed the premier club. And with regard to the sending of the challange, I may say that no less than a dozen verbal challenges were sent by members of the Harmonic club to the Rothwell club committee, and I have authority for saying that they even went so far as to say that they would either play for money or play and let the proceeds be for the Infirmary; therefore I think that the majority of the Harmonic members were agreeable that a game should be played. Further he states that the Harmonic wanted 'fairness in all points but they did not get it for he saw several foul plays from the Rothwell club.' Well, all I have to say to this is that with such a splendid umpire as Mr. Woobank and a referee like Mr. W. Lambert (late umpire to the Harmonic) they had all the chance they could desire, and I think that 'Mr. Bystander' must have been one of the bigoted ones not to see any foul plays on the part of the Harmonic.

I can thoroughly concur with your remarks at foot of 'Bystander's' letter with regard to the ill-feeling and rough play, for I think the game was played in a manner far milder than was expected, and a milder game I have failed to see during the present season.

Hoping that my few remarks will create no ill-feeling against me, and with a few words of advice to the members of the Rothwell club, viz.—Ne cede males.

I am yours truly.
A PLAYER.

[As the two sides have now had an opportunity of airing their opinions, and a continuance of this correspondence can only lead to the ill-feeling both 'Player and Bystander' say they wish to prevent, we shall now close our columns on the subject, and trust the complaints or failures pointed out in these letters will simply lead to greater care, and a resolution to 'play fair' in the return match. ED.]

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

The Situation.
(A Moor(e)ish Legend.)

There was a little man.
And he had a little soul,
To his little soul he said 'Let us try, try, try
To make a little speech,
Th' Association for to reach,
And run Johnny for election with a cry, cry, cry,
And run Johnny for election with a cry.'

'As for Newsome, man of splutter,
We'll leave him in the gutter,
The old friend for the new one now must pass, pass, pass;
Exalt Johnny for our hero.
Sink Newsome down to zero,
For disobedience to our wishes 'bout the gas, gas, gas,
For disobedience to our wishes 'bout the gas.'

But Mr. Newsome changes colour,
Doesn't care for wire-puller.
When the pulling is not all in his direction, 'rection, 'rection.
Th' Association he will fight,
Has little meetings every night,
And plays the part of martyr to perfection, fection, 'fection;
And plays the part of martyr to perfection.

'The cry is still they come,'
There's another in the run,
With a motto in his cap for distinction, 'tinction, 'tinction;
His motto is 'Send the best man,'
Then the fate of all the rest can
Nothing less, sure, be than mere extinction, 'inction, 'inction;
Nothing less, sure, be than mere extinction.

Of course his cool assumption,
Is, that he's got all the gumption;
In consequence your duty's to send him, him, him,
He's the merit of persistency,
The unique quality consistency,
And will countenance no needless waste of tin, tin, tin;
And will countenance no needless waste of tin.

Then Messrs. Charlesworth and Hargreaves,
Of our little town the Margraves,
Their seats are pretty certain to be safe, safe, safe;
Newsome's chance is but a slight one,
Friend Lockwood's is a bright one,
But Johnny's sure to be the luckless waif, waif, waif;
Poor Johnny's sure to be the luckless waif.

ASMODEUS.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills—These remedies are unequalled throughout the world for bad legs, wounds, foul sores, and ulcers. Used according to directions given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Many poor sufferers who have been patients in the large hospitals under the care of eminent surgeons, and have derived little or no benefit from their treatment, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, scurvy, and diseases of the skin there is nothing that can be used with so much benefit. In fact, in the worst forms of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, used conjointly, are irresistible.

KAY'S LINSEED COMPOUND, for Colds and Cough, cures nine cases out of ten old by Chemists. 1s 1½d, 2s 9d.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may be secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and cheap compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy.'" Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s. 9d.

Box sent post free on receipt of 15 or 35 stamps by Wm. Mather, Wholesale Druggist, Manchester.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the teeth a peculiar pearly-whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s. 6d., of all Chemists and Perfumers. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." Ask your Chemist for "THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER," sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere at 3s. 6d. per Bottle. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.

THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have their skins blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. The more delicate the skin the quicker its ruin. THE ALBION MILK AND SULPHUR SOAP is the purest, the whitest, and most purifying of all soaps, by its purifying action taking away and preventing all pimples, blotches, and roughness. It is recommended by the entire medical profession as the most elegant preparation for the skin that is known. A boon to sensitive skins. By all Chemists, in tablets, 6d. and 1s.—The Albion Sanitary Soap Co., 532, Oxford Street, London.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS cleanse and purify the blood, strengthen and invigorate the nerves, and secure the perfecting of digestion and prevent the creation of those humours to which we owe erysipelas, scurvy, gout, and those slimy dregs out of which the stone and gravel within us are formed. The timely use of Brandreth's Pills has saved thousands of valuable lives. As an antibilious pill they are unequalled.

LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

The addresses of all the candidates are now out, and what with speeches and demonstrations, surely every ratepayer will be able to judge for himself who are the most suitable men for the much coveted seats.

Messrs. Charlesworth and Hargreaves having issued their address asking re-election, have not been further before the public during the week, and everybody, candidates and people, seem to consider their return pretty well assured. There is, however, "many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," and we would commend to their supporters the propriety of remembering this old proverb.

Mr. Lockwood's address refers to his last year's statements, and takes as his policy—"careful and steady progress, together with consistency of purpose," and basing his claim as a large ratepayer and representing others who are deeply interested in keeping down the rates as far as possible.

Mr. Newsome has published a long manifesto in which he refers to the part he has taken in attending to the individual interests of ratepayers, as well as furthering the large works undertaken for the protection of public health, and improvement of the streets at Stourton and in Rothwell, as also the water supply for Royds Green. Having been considerably connected with the finances of the Board, he maintains he has carried out the "principle of efficiency combined with economy," and would still do so.

On behalf of Mr. Turner a handbill has been circulated denying the report that he is an atheist; but stating his religious belief as a unitarian. In politics, however, he holds the propriety of admitting Mr. Bradlaugh to his seat in Parliament; and is "in short, an advocate for the removal of all religious disabilities and inequalities, and for the establishment of civil and religious liberty of the fullest and broadest kind." A bill was also circulated yesterday under Mr. Turner's signature, in which he relates his being brought forward by the Liberal Association; he offers his knowledge of sanitary and legal matters for the service of the ratepayers; he strongly condemns the action of certain gentlemen on the gas question, and pledges himself, "if returned, to act in a truly representative character, that is to say, to make myself the promoter of the wishes of the people, and I undertake to place my resignation in their hands, as soon as I fail to give satisfaction to the majority of the electors."

The voting papers, as we have before stated, are delivered to-day, and will be collected on Wednesday next. The counting of the votes will take place at the Board Room, on Thursday next, and the result be made known in our issue of that day.

As every person must have pretty well decided who are the gentlemen most likely to attend to the work of the Board, in the most effective, business-like and economical manner, we would advise the voter to place his intials against the persons for whom he wishes to vote, sign the paper, and at once seal the envelope. By this means he will be proof against all canvassers, and use his own judgement without outside bias. As the number of members required is three, let us caution the voter against initailing more than three names, otherwise the paper will be thrown out as "spoiled," Not doubting that the best men may be selected, and that the Board will still consist of gentlemen who understanding their work, will thoroughly and faithfully discharge the important duties devolving upon them, we leave the matter, and await the result with equanimity.

On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, Mr. Turner addressed meetings at Stourton and at Rothwell: on the latter occasion Mr. Turner spoke on several matters of public interest, among other things, referring to the prominent action he took in furthering the Railway Bill. He would consider efficiency first and economy as well in the use of the ratepayers' money, and although he would make no great promises of what he would do, if elected, he assured the members of the Liberal Association that he should feel it his duty to represent their wishes on the Board, and report to them the results of the various questions discussed, and if ever he ceased to represent the views of those who sent him, he would feel bound at once to place his resignation in their hands. Mr. Turner also did the Rothwell Times and its proprietor the honour of a few remarks which we thank him for, and will try to continue still to do our duty impartially as regards the reports of Local Board meetings. The usual vote of confidence was passed on the motion of Mr. B. Batty and Mr. Harrison, and to the chairman, Mr. R. M. Sykes, on the proposal of Mr. Turner and Mr. Batty.

Mr. Newsome held his final meeting yesterday evening, at the cross, at which he recapitulated statements which have been made at various places during the last three weeks. Three years ago he was sent as the nominee of the Liberal Association. After twelve months had elapsed, he began to hear whispers that he was becoming "too agreeable" on the Board, not sufficiently obstructionist. Then came the question of the land at Church Street corner, which, with great difficulty, the Board secured from Mrs. Meynell Ingram, for the purpose of street improvement at the low rate of 5s. a yard. An offer of 5s. for all the spare land was eventually made by the Leeds Co-operative Society. This offer was accepted at a meeting which he was unfortunately unable to attend, and he had no idea that the tender would be accepted. Against this small price being confirmed he used all his efforts, believing that a very much larger sum might be secured if everybody had known. Then came the gas question. On this matter he used his best endeavours to gain the various modifications asked for by the Association, and was the originator of the purchase clause. For the failure of the negociations he blamed the representatives of the Liberal Association, who not satisfied with the large concessions granted, still asked for more. For these causes he had been tabooed by the Association, and he now offered himself as an independent candidate.

The meeting afterwards became rather lively, a number of Mr. Turner's supporters being present, but a vote was eventually taken.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

The ordinary Board meeting was held on Monday, present—Messrs. W. Hargreaves, J. Holmes, J. Hargreaves, J. Sanderson, H. P. Newsome, J. Oliver, S. Bramley, J. Batty, and the clerk, treasurer and surveyor.

At the commencement of the meeting, neither the chairman nor vice-chairman being present Mr Holmes was unanimously invited to take the presidency, which that gentleman at once accepted

The minutes of last meetings were then read and confirmed.

As it was not stated in the resolution appointing Dr. Glaister medical officer, the clerk enquired whether it was the intention of the Board to apply to the Local Goverment Board to repay one half of his salary. As this is the purpose of the Board, the clerk was instructed, on the motion of Mr. J Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Bramley, to apply to the Board for one half the medical officer's salary.

ROTHWELL SEWAGE.—Several matters relating to compensation for damage done to crops, and also for tenant right were discussed with Mr. Haley, the Board's valuer, and it was found advisable to refer the matter to the Committee so as to give Mr. Haley further instructions what course to pursue in certain cases of a peculiar nature. In the course of the conversation, the clerk read a clause of the Public Health Act whereby it is enacted that a person cannot build over a main drain without the sanction of the Board, under a fine of £5 and a further daily penalty.

Mr. W. Hargreaves having entered the room, was asked by Mr. Holmes to take the chair, which he did.

WATER SUPPLY.—Mr. Lawton asked for an interview with the Board, and was introduced. He asked the Board to take up the question of supplying him with water. He had received an intimation from the clerk stating that he could have water from Beeston Pit at the rate of 4d a barrel from Messrs. Charlesworth's stand. In order to do this, he would have to have another barrel to fetch water, and this he could not afford; he had already two barrels to lead a day; and so badly off were they for drinking water that he had to go on a Sunday with two kits to Mrs. Wormald's to get water for breakfast.

In reply to the chairman's enquiry what he wished the Board to do, Mr. Lawton asked that they should do the same to him as to the inhabitants of Rothwell, and put the water into his house.

Mr. Holmes asked if that would be fair to put it into his house.

Mr. Lawton considered it would be as fair to do that for him as it was to curb the streets and put down sewage pipes on private property.

Several members strongly objected to the insinuation that pipes were put down on private property by the Board, and the inspector stated he knew of no such case.

Mr. Newsome felt that they must object to creating such a bad precedent as Mr. Lawton asked for; so far as he knew everybody had to be at the expense of putting in the water themselves.

Further conversation ensued, in which Mr. Lawton reiterated his desire to have water somehow, or he must leave the house. It appears that Lord Stourton had several times been applied to for this object but without any satisfactory result. The clerk read a clause from the Public Health Act whereby it is set forth that if any person declines to supply property with water, means may be taken, through the Local Government Board, to compel the owner to do so, or else for the Board to put it in, and charge the cost to the owner.

Mr. Lawton said he was quite aware that the Board had power to get him water, and he had come down to get the Board to put that power into action.

It was then resolved, on the motion of Mr. Batty, seconded by Mr J. Hargreaves that the whole case be laid before the Local Government Board.

HEALTH REPORT.—Dr. Glaister, the newly appointed Medical Officer, before reading his report, desired to thank the members of the Board for the honour they had done him in electing him their Medical Officer. The report is as follows:—

TO THE CHAIRMAN AND MEMBERS OF THE ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

Gentlemen,—I have to report 11 deaths and 10 births registered in the district during the past six weeks. For the corresponding period of last year we had 22 births and 5 deaths.

The causes of death were, one male, 1 year, and one female 18 months, bronchitis complicating measles; one male, 8¼ years, broncho-pneumonia complicating measles; one female, 8¼ years, debility following erysipelas; one male, aged 30, phthisis; one male aged 68, heart disease; one male, 8¼ years, empyema; one female, 17 months, convulsions; one female, 41 years, erysipelas and sloughing sore throat; one female, 5 hours, asphyxia; one male, 40, found drowned.

It will be seen that measles, which are at present epidemic in the district, has indirectly been the cause of three deaths; I am glad to say the number of cases coming under my notice seems to be declining. The scarletina is as yet within fair bounds; I am sorry to have to report 4 new cases in different parts of the district. As far as is possible these cases have been isolated, and the people seem anxious to do their best to prevent the spread of the disease.

Houses in which cases of fever have occurred will be disinfected as soon as it is advisable to do so.

JOHN GLAISTER, M.B.,
Medical Officer of Health.

In regard to the cases of measles and scarletina, he believed all was being done that was possible for the isolation of the cases, and the prevention of the spread of disease.

The chairman remarked on the unusual fact of the deaths being more numerous than the births, but Dr. Glaister said it was a matter which had to be considered on the yearly average. There had however been a much larger number of deaths this year than the corresponding weeks of last year.

ROTHWELL SEWAGE.—Mr. Jowitt, clerk of works, read his fourteenth report from which it appears the work has gone forward very satisfactorily during the fortnight. There have been laid in Dawson's Lane, 200 yards of pipes, 2 manholes, 2 lamp holes and 4 junctions, in the adjoining road 120 yards, 1 lamp hole, 1 shaft and 6 junctions, and in Holt's road 112 yards, 1 lamp hole and 1 junction.

The beck has been crossed twice in Holt's orchard and at the Vicarage, and 120 yards of 9 inch pipes laid in the latter locality.

In reply to Mr. Batty, Mr. Jowitt explained that they intended doing Church St. without stopping the traffic.

HIGHWAYS.—The clerk having prepared the agreement with Mr. Nickols, and obtained his signature, it was proposed by Mr. Bramley, seconded by Mr. Newsome, that the seal of the Board be affixed to the agreement. The seal of the Board was then placed on the document

A letter was read from Messrs. Marsden and Williams as regards the state of the Leeds and Wakefield Road and threatening an indictment against the Board. After some conversation on the whole question, it was decided on the motion of Mr. Jas. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Holmes, that the clerk be instructed to withdraw the application to be placed on the County list at present.

Mr. Sanderson thought they ought to have had a tramway laid down Bell Hill.

The chairman said that was one of his first proposals when the Board was formed nearly nine years ago, to lay a piece of tramway down the road every year; if this suggestion had been carried out, there would have been a good road now.

Mr. Holmes and the chairman both complained strongly of certain portions of the roads which were either improperly repaired, or requiring urgent attention and repairs. It was eventually agreed that the Highway Committee should inspect the road on the following day.

The clerk complained of the way in which Messrs. Green were sending the stone, without any means being used of knowing whether certain cargoes were for the Board, for Mr. Bulmer, or for somebody else; and a letter was ordered requesting these contractors to give information to the clerk, when and by what boat, a cargo was being sent for the Board.

Mr. J. Hargreaves asked when the sewage contractors were going to finish Windmill Lane; it was now in a most dangerous and disgraceful state. Steps were ordered for its improvement.

Mr. Hargreaves also referred to a piece of walling in Gillett Lane, belonging to Mr. Calverley which wanted attention; also a coping stone in Oulton Lane, at the entrance to Mr. Brown's grounds, which had been the cause of several very awkward knocks to persons passing by.

A letter was read from Mr. Brayshaw respectfully asking the Board to pay him something on account of a number of extras which had been done in the progress of the sewage works.

Mr. Parkinson intimated his willingness to extend the time for completing the works one month longer; he, however, complains that his instructions are not attended to as they ought to be.

In reply to an offer of the Board, Messrs. Brooke & Son agree to accept 5/ each for the gulleys sent.

ROYDS GREEN WATER SUPPLY.—The clerk read the specifications for proposed tank at Royds' Green, for which tenders had been asked in last week's Times. The chairman asked what Royds' Green was going to pay for this tank; he had had his attention drawn to the matter several times by ratepayers, and he thought they should pay water rents just the same as Rothwell and Stourton.

Mr Sanderfon objected that they would have it to fetch; they were helping to pay for the plant at Rothwell, and he thought there should be no charge at all.

Mr. Holmes, however, pointed out that Stourton had had to pay for its own supply and afterwards to help to pay for Rothwell. He understood this tank was only to cost £10, but by the specifications it would cost very much more than that.

Mr. Sanderson was pretty confident that water could be raised from the reservoir for Royds' Green. The chairman, however, showed by the ordnance map, that it was quite impossible to do so except by a tower and pumping.

It was finally resolved to hold over the consideration of the tenders till next meeting.

In reply to an enquiry of Mr. Holmes, the clerk read the resolution relating to this tank and it appears, a provision is made that the cost shall not exceed £10.

Mr. Sanderson accordingly gave notice to rescind that resolution.

The clerk also read a resolution relating to Mr. Batty's application for a supply of water to the house only. Some two years ago, it was agreed that where the rateable value of a house and shop is over £20, the rent of the house shall be deducted from the shop, the shop to be charged 6d. in the £ and the house according to scale.

RAILWAY.—The clerk read the engrossed petition, to be sealed and signed on behalf of the Board, in favour of the East and West Yorkshire Union Railways, setting forth the many advantages to Rothwell anticipated from such a line, and strongly supporting its approval by the House.

The petition was sealed and signed by the chairman.

FINANCE.—The collector has received, and paid over to the treasurer the following amount during the fortnight.

General District Rate	197	10	11
Water Rents	9	1	10
Miscellaneous	17	10	0
	£224	2	9

The next fortnightly meeting falling on Easter Monday, it was resolved to meet on Wednesday week.

LOFTHOUSE SCHOOL BOARD.

The usual monthly meeting of this Board was held on Wednesday night at Robin Hood School; all the members being present, viz.—Mr. Oliver, (chairman) Messrs. Jos. Appleyard, Jas. Armitage, Thos. Hargreaves, and Wm Keightley, with Mr. J. H. Lee, the clerk, the schoolmasters, and attendance officer.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The fees received by the treasurer were £9 19s. 3d. for Carlton School, and £9 4s. 8d. for Robin Hood. Cheques were signed for £48 8s. 4d., being for officers and teachers salaries and cleaning.

The Board signed a precept upon the Overseers which is equal to 2d. in the £ for the year ending September next, the amount for the preceding year was 7d in the £.

The Board have three applications for remission of fees, all the cases were very deserving and were granted.

The masters applied for several school requisites, which are ordered to be got; there was no other business of importance.

METHLEY MUSICAL SOCIETY.

The concluding concert by this Society was given on Tuesday last, to a moderately large audience. The piece de resistance was Romberg's Cantata "Transient and the Eternal," which occupied the first part of the programme. The second part consisted of miscellaneous orchestral selections, songs, &c.

The performance of the Cantata can hardly be considered to have been satisfactory. The chorus attacked its work in a hesitating undecided fashion, and only now and again rose to the demand made upon its powers, indeed the general effect would have been very uninteresting but for the effective colouring given by the orchestral accompaniment. For those who had the pleasure of listening to the fine interpretation of Romberg's "Lay of the Bell" at the beginning of the season, by the same chorus, the result was unaccountably disappointing.

The principals were Miss. C. Braime, soprano; Miss. Stead, contralto; Mr. J. Prime, tenor; and Mr. B. W. Higgins, basso. The efforts of the soloists somewhat relieved the general dulness of the performance. Miss. C. Braime deserves special recognition for the creditable manner in which she acquitted herself of a rather difficult task. But whatever shortcomings were noticable in the rendering of the Cantata, were more than atoned for by the splendid performance of the orchestral selections, which followed by the Band, composed of members of the Leeds Amateur Orchestral Society. We must specially notice the very brilliant execution of a picco' solo, "Danse de Satyrs" by Mr. J. Venus, accompanied by the Band. Both solo and accompaniment were given with exquisite finish, and the number was encored with something like enthusiasm. The Orchestral selections were conducted by Mr. G. Waithman, Mr. G. A. Atkinson conducting the performance of the Cantata.

The songs in the second part comprised "The Lost Chord" by Miss. Lancaster, "Won by a Rose" by Miss. M. J. Braime, "It was a dream" by Miss Stead, "The Miller and the Maid" (encored) by Miss. C. Braime, and "The Mariner" by Mr. B. W. Higgins. The Rev. H. M. Sims also contributed a couple of songs, "The brave old oak" and "Tom the Tinker."

At the conclusion a vote of thanks to the performers was moved by the Hon. and Rev. P. Y. Saville.

PARLIAMENT.

The great debate on the first clôture resolutions as regards parliamentary rules of procedure came to a close at two o'clock this morning, when the Government majority reached 39, a larger number than was anticipated by the prophets. The members voting for the government numbered 318. Against 279.

DEATH OF MRS. BENTLEY.

From our London correspondent we have received the painful intelligence of the much lamented death of Mrs. Bentley, the wife of Henry Bentley, Esq., of Eshald House, Woodlesford. As has several times been intimated in our columns lately, this estimable lady has been ill for some time, and fears have been entertained that she might not recover; we understand that for a week past the sorrowing family in London, have awaited the dread event which has just occurred.

Mrs. Bentley died at the Midland Grand Hotel, London, on Wednesday evening about ten o'clock. Her loss will be severely felt by many poor and sickly people in Woodlesford and Oulton, her hand and heart were always ready to relieve and comfort such; no tale of actual want or suffering failed to secure her sympathy and assistance. It is therefore with sincere and heartfelt sorrow we present our personal and representative condolence to Mr. Bentley, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin, and the rest of the family, in this their deep and crushing sorrow.

POLICE NEWS.

WEST RIDING COURT.

LAST FRIDAY.

STEALING TOBACCO PIPES AT ROTHWELL.—Walter Blackburn, a lad of 13, living at Rothwell, and the son of a colliery banksman at Rothwell Haigh, was charged with stealing three wooden tobacco pipes, value 1s. 6d., the property of Mr. Joseph Stead, tobacconist, Rothwell. It appeared from the evidence of the prosecutor and his wife that on Tuesday noon the defendant went into the prosecutor's shop whilst Mrs. Stead was upstairs and stole three pipes out of a box in the shop window. A young man, William Fox, bought the pipes from the prisoner and two other lads for 3½d., Blackburn stating that they had bought them with money they had found. It was stated by Police-Sergeant Turton that the lad was much neglected, and had a bad name. The Bench committed the lad to the House of Correction for 14 days, and afterwards to a reformatory for 5 years.

OBSTRUCTION OF THE HIGHWAY.—Joseph Ward, coal dealer, Holbeck, was charged with having caused an obstruction of the highway at Rothwell Haigh. Police-constable Wilson and a witness proved that on Saturday, the 11th inst., the defendant left a broken down cart on the Leeds and Wakefield Road, and allowed it to remain there till Sunday morning. The defendant, who said he had the cart removed as soon as possible after his unfortunate break down, was ordered to pay the costs only, 16s. 4d.

ALLEGED THREATENING TO MURDER.—William Whittlestone, miner, Lofthouse, was charged with having threatened to murder James Watson, miner, Lofthouse. Watson's case, as stated by himself, was that on the 18th March, while in the Elephant and Castle public house, the defendant went in and asked him to fight him, and when he declined said he 'would murder him twice.' He was afraid Whittlestone would do him some harm, as he was the ringleader of the lot of six men who assaulted himself and wife some months ago. Two witnesses were called by complainant, but neither of them would, if they could, state anything against defendant, beyond this, that they heard him calling the complainant names, and asking him to go out to fight him. The Bench considered the evidence unsatisfactory, and dismissed the case.

'FIGHTING IT OUT FOR TWO SHILLINGS.'—Joseph Arundel Thomas Davis, John Ward, and John Braim, all miners, from Carlton, were charged with having obstructed the free passage of a highway by fighting upon it. Police constable Taylor stated that on the 18th of March he saw Davies and Arundel fighting upon a footpath near the village of Carlton, and the other two were acting as seconds. They all made off but Arundel on witness's approach, and he was lying on the ground bleeding, and stated in reply to a question, that they were 'fighting it out for 2s.' Ward and Davies only appeared, and all the defendants were fined 8s. each, with costs.

MARKETS.

LEEDS CORN, Tuesday.—Wheat is in fair demand at the full prices of last week. Maize rather dearer. Beans steady. Peas firm. No change in the price of flour.—Leeds Corn Millers' Association Report.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—The market was well attended by buyers from various parts of the country, but the supplies of beef and mutton (particularly the latter) were unusually light, and trade ruled brisk at prices in favour of dealers. There seemed to be an entire absence of Irish cattle; but a score of the pens were occupied by good Lincolnshire beasts, a dozen pens were filled with foreign cattle, and there were several droves of prime north-country animals. The supply of sheep consisted of fully 600 less than last week. It is stated that at the present time the stock of sheep in England is considerably smaller—some estimates put it at 2,000,000—than it has been for many years past, and the primary cause is said to be the liver rot, which caused serious losses in sheep in the midland counties during the wet season of last year. It is believed that it will be two or three years before the great loss is made good; but no doubt the present lambing season, which is most encouraging, will have a tendency to improve the present state of affairs. Farmers give very encouraging reports with respect to their lamb crop, many of them stating that their ewes are dropping couplets and triplets.

RATEPAYERS' MEETING AT OULTON

A meeting was held last night in the Oulton National School-room, at 7 o'clock, for the purpose of electing Overseers of the Poor, and transacting any other business which might be brought up. It was proposed that Mr. Sanderson take the chair, which that gentleman did, and the business of the meeting at once commenced.

On the motion of Mr. Farrar, it was unanimously passed that the two late officers, Mr. King and Mr. R. J. Smith be again elected.

The question about the place of meetings was brought up by Mr. R. J. Smith, who spoke in favour of Woodlesford having its share of meetings, and said that the excuse of not having a room which they could use was done away with now, as they could have the Board School free of charge, and he proposed that all the meetings be held in Oulton one year and Woodlesford next. Seconded by Mr. Jno. Nichols.

Mr. Farrar moved as an amendment, that the meetings in connection with the overseers business be held at Oulton as heretofore. He said he did not like to alter old customs, and that Oulton was the most central, and convenient for a number of large ratepayers. Mr. Wood Higgins seconded the amendment, and said he thought that mistakes would arise if the place of meetings was held alternately at Oulton and Woodlesford.

On the chairman putting the amendment it was carried by a large majority.

A meeting was also called at the same place for half-past seven, when Mr. Sanderson was again elected chairman. Business:—Appointment of collector of Sanitary Rate. Election of Highway Surveyors, and any other business.

Mr. Farrar proposed, and Mr. R. J. Smith seconded, that Mr. Flint be appointed collector of Sanitary Rate, and if necessary he be re-appointed at a salary of £10 per half-year. Carried.

A statement of accounts was read by Mr. Flint by which it was seen that the income had been £471 4s. 2½d, and the expenditure £435 12s. 2½d., being £63 less than last year. On the motion of Messrs Whitehead and Farrar, the Highway Rates were passed.

The chairman complimented the Oulton people on their good roads, and also on their good fortune in getting half back from the County Authority of what they expended on the Leeds and Barnsdale Road.

On the motion of Mr. Gould, seconded by Mr. J. Nichols, Mr. Lewison and Mr. Farrar were appointed surveyors of the Highways.

Mr. Flint was re appointed as collector of rates for the ensuing year at £35.

Mr. Ezra Stead asked what the aggregate value of the bricklayers' and masons' work for the past year was and if it had been tendered for.

Mr. Flint replied that the aggregate value was £25, and that some had been tendered for and the rest given privately.

Mr. Stead moved that all future work be let to the cheapest man.

Mr. Farrar objected to the motion of Mr. Stead's, and he said that as he had been put into office by those present, he would act as he thought best.

After some warm discussion by various gentlemen present, Mr. Stead withdrew his resolution.

A vote of thanks to the chairman brought the meeting to a close. About 22 were present.

CARLTON.

RATEPAYERS' MEETING.—The annual meeting of ratepayers for the election of town officers took place at half-past four on Saturday at Robin Hood schoolroom, when Mr Wm Armitage and Mr Jabez Parker were elected as surveyors for Lofthouse. A similar meeting was held at seven o clock on Monday evening at Carlton school, when Mr Richard Dobson and Mr George Armitage, junr., were appointed as surveyors, and Mr Thomas Harrison as churchwarden.

PRIMITIVE METHODIST ANNIVERSARY.—Last Sunday, at the Primitive Methodist Chapel, Carlton, two sermons were preached by the Rev J Spensley, of Hunslet, in connection with the chapel anniversary. Both services were well attended, and collections were taken at the close. On Monday the public tea at 5.30, and the meeting at 7, was held in the chapel, and was addressed by the Rev J Spensley, Mr Conyers, Mr T Stephenson and Mr H Hall. Mr H Ward, of Carlton, occupied the chair.

VOCAL CONTEST.—On Friday last, a contest took place at Carlton, when Mr Maxwell, auctioneer, offered a cruet stand for the best comic song. The following persons entered the lists: Messrs W Walker, W Butler, James Fox, J W Blackburn, the prize being adjudged to J W Blackburn, who sang 'As true as the shamrock.' A recitation was afterwards given by Henry Bell, entitled 'Briton's all.'

FOOTBALL.

ROTHWELL HARMONIC v. OUDTON.

A good number of spectators assembled in the pleasant field of the Oulton Football Club, Methley Lane, last Saturday, to witness the return match between the above clubs. The early part of the day was most unfavourable for football, rain falling in torrents, and the wind very boisterous, causing very serious thoughts to be entertained whether play would be practicable, but the rain ceasing after dinner and the sun shining at intervals, decided the verdict in favour of playing. About a quarter past four, the Rothwell players arrived on the ground. Rothwell won the choice of ends, and chose to play with the wind in their favour. T. West started the game for Oulton by touching the ball back to Hutchinson, who made a good kick over the heads of the advancing forwards, to Boothroyd who ran it up to the corner, where it went out and a "six yards" placed it once more in neutral ground. After a few minutes give and take play the leather was again taken into dangerous proximity to the visitors' stronghold, and their custodian in attempting a kick a few yards out was sent 'to grass,' when the home team after playing 10 minutes secured their first goal from the foot of Gosney. The kick from the centre failed to bring relief, and a close scrimmage near the Rothwell goal took place, a foul by one of the visitors gave a free kick to Oulton, but without good result as Gosney fouled the ball through the goal. A free kick was taken by Blakey, but was well returned by the Oulton backs, and a long shot hit the crossbar, the ball dropping behind the goalkeeper but he turned round and threw it out. The Oulton umpire claimed a goal, which Woobank, the visitors' umpire disputed, and on appealing to the referee he gave his verdict in favour of Oulton. On his decision becoming known a "scene" took place, and the Rothwell players put on their coats preparatory to going home. Ultimately, at the request of the home team, their captain asked the referee if he would take it as an insult if they did not count the point, the referee's reply was that he would not alter his decision, but he would leave it to Mr. Boothroyd's discretion about playing on. The field was therefore cleared and the game once more commenced. The visitors succeeded in gaining a corner kick and several good shies were made, but without the desired effect. After a change of ends Oulton played better than ever, and the Harmonic team, with the exception of Taylor, never played worse. All the second half was played in Rothwell territory, excepting a run by Taylor, Ward, and Jackson which caused the Oulton custodian to use his hands, but it was no use as two more goals were added to the credit of Oulton, and the last 20 minutes the home team had their opponents "in a band," and the wonder is that more goals were not scored. All the Oulton team played well especially Coope, who is a young, but very promising player. Rothwell were unfortunate in having their captain absent, as he would have made a great alteration. Swift would probably have been half-back, and we are sure it would have been his right place; the backs worked hard to prevent defeat, but they did not play so well as we have seen them. Oulton won therefore by 3 goals to none, thus having their revenge for their defeat at Rothwell. The following are the names of the teams:

ROTHWELL.—A Judson, goal; G. W. Blakey, (capt) G. Field, backs; J. Chadwick, T. W. Wright, A. Baines, half-backs; H. Taylor, T. Swift, W. Jackson, J. Whitehead, W. H. Ward.

OULTON.—J. Bradley, goal; H. Wilmot, R. Jowitt, backs; W. Hutchinson, F. Parkinson, T. A. Coope, half backs, Brittain, A. Gosney, T. West, G. M. Abbey, E. Boothroyd, (capt) forwards.

CORRESPONDENCE.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our correspondents. ED.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

THE local public and myself have been looking out the last two weeks for the continuation of the series of articles on "Village Churches and their services;" the one which recently appeared in this journal being headed "No. 1 Swillington." it was naturally inferred that it was but the forerunner of others, but up to the present time we have been disappointed, and some people have gone so far as to say that the article in question was only a gigantic newspaper "puff" in favour of the rector of Swillington; with this opinion however I scarcely agree, although it was a decided case of "laying it on thick," and I still expect to see the remaining churches reviewed in due time; meanwhile, I shall reserve my opinion as to the partiality or otherwise of the writer and calmly await the issue of events and the remaining articles.

IT almost looks as if Messrs. Longbottom and Smith had taken the hint which I gave them a short time since, and settled their difference out of court; whether this is the case or not I beg leave to compliment them on their good sense in discontinuing the weekly infliction of milk and watery sarcasm and grammatical atrocities.

On dit that my referrence to Mr T. West as "the favorite Oulton basso" has given great offence in certain quarters, but I cannot help that; in using the term, I expressed the opinion of the public and not of a single individual.

As I was unfortunately prevented from being present at the great football contest on Saturday between the old rivals Rothwell Harmonic and Oulton I took care to depute a reliable person to furnish me with a fair and impartial account of the game and in consequence shall ground my remarks upon his information. Before dealing with the play itself, I must strenuously protest against the gross unpunctuality of the Harmonic players who did not arrive on the scene of action until considerably after four o'clock, despite the fact that the match was advertised to commence at three o'clock, and it was close upon half past four when the ball was first set in motion; and as a similar delay occurred on the occasion of the first match at Rothwell though of shorter duration, and also caused by the Rothwell team, I think that spectators have just cause for complaint, unfortunately want of punctuality is not the only charge which I have to bring against my Harmonic friends on this occasion; I wish it were, as my remarks may seem to savour of prejudice against them and I wish it to be distinctly understood that beyond taking a pardonable pleasure in the success of our own representatives I have no interest in praising one and blaming another unjustly, and my remarks on the first match will verify this statement.

In my opinion the action taken by the Harmonic team in impugning the decision of an independent referee and refusing to continue to play unless the goal awarded to Oulton by him was disallowed, cannot be too strongly condemned, as such action strikes at the very root of the system of appointing referees in important matches, where the umpires are too often carried away by a spirit of partisanship to admit of their giving unbiassed opinions; and I am exceedingly sorry that such a mistake was committed on Saturday. In addition to delaying the game for a long time, the dispute gave rise to a great amount of ill-feeling amongst the spectators and players also, and charges were made, which I am sure that those making them would in their cooler moments, be most ashamed of. Into the nature of such charges I shall not enter as I deem it best to let sleeping dogs lie. And now to turn to the play. It is not advisable to describe a football match at which you have not been present but opinions as to the merits of the players individually or collectively may be advanced with safety. I think it will be freely admitted that the Oulton team had the best of the game during much the greater part of it, although the Harmonic made frequent incursions into the Oulton dominions in the first half, but only to be repulsed by the impassable Oulton backs. The Rothwell men made one attack after another on the Oulton fortress at one period but without success as they invariably failed to carry the ball near enough to the goal before making the final shot the consequence being that the sphere was forcibly repelled by the defenders, or flew harmlessly wide of the coveted eight yards of space between the Oulton posts. The Rothwell men did their very best and at times showed very good play, but they were completely overmatched at all points by their opponents who had never played in better style, the whole team played well to a man, the combined play and unselfish passing being a treat to look at.

The Oulton captain stands at the head of a good team which with careful management may in the the course of another season or two be trusted to achieve something more than mere local fame and honour.

Probably the strong team from Sheffield which is to visit Oulton to-morrow will show our village men "how it's done," but I confidently expect that the latter will not disgrace themselves, and some good play will be exhibited all round, as the game will without doubt, be the best exposition of association football that has been witnessed in the district.

On the receipt of the melancholy news in Rothwell that the "scarlet and black" had suffered such a severe defeat a spirit of gloom and sadness settled upon the sorrowing villagers, the voice of harmony and gladness was hushed, it being even suggested that the passing bell should be tolled at the church; and the dejected "Swan" was observed to hang its head and drop its feathers while brooding moodily over the fallen features of its vanquished knights.

There was a creature present at the match bearing something of the semblance of a human being, but which for the credit of humanity must be classed amongst the ape species, which specially distinguished itself by its coarse blatant voice and filthy disgusting language which savoured of the most purlieus of our large towns. The animal wandered about amongst the spectators disgusting everyone within hearing distance which embraced the whole field by its abominable behaviour. It was ascertained that the animal came from Rothwell and had escaped from custody through an oversight on the part of those entrusted with its keeping, but it is to be hoped that in future they will be more careful and keep the brute securely locked up.

The Oulton policeman and a sergeant from Rothwell were both present, why did they not put the stopper on?

Mr. Boothroyd's lemon made its customary appearance at half time in the great match.

As the township meetings have been fixed so late in the week I am unable to say anything about them in this week's "Whispers" but intend to give them a turn in the next issue of this journal.

As I have a highly important communication to make next week I would advise my friends to be sure and secure a copy of the Rothwell Times in good time for fear they should miss it and regret afterwards.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoas? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Mr Editor,

Mr Newsome, during his three years apprenticeship, has improved in his qualifications; he has learned to keep a strict watch over expenditure, and he tells us of 'one of the rules he has followed,' which is a very remarkable one, especially to himself. A central Solon in the village for receiving 'complaints and appeals for advice,' his time has been freely given, and his services in that direction (query, which?) have been appreciated;' but, Sir, he would much value a seat on the Board when the main trunk of the sewer is completed, as it (the trunk?) 'would enable him to act with authority,' &c.; query,—wouldn't a waggon outside a public house, or a chair inside, with sundry glasses for those under his authority, be more in the gentleman's style? His belief in 'drainage works' and good sanitary regulations, is as remarkable as 'one of the rules he follows,' and shows his astuteness; but his knowledge of cause and effect, and of the names of diseases, is stupendous and must be alarming to the medical profession. Enumerating half-a-score of 'em he continues, 'after these come drain fevers,—sore throat, headache, loss of appetite, feverish symptoms of various degree'; and I would suggest, after this—Vicars' Croft for Aitch P. We Roddillers don't want clap-trap; Mr John Turner tacitly admits that he has been pushed forward. I would just say that a man's political belief ought not to weigh a straw in his eligibility, and to Mr J Turner that learning does not constitute wisdom; Acts xxvi v. 24. I think, nay, I am sure, that in Mr Lockwood we have a man of shrewd judgment, technical knowledge, and above all, freedom from clap-trap and high falluting, that point him out as the most likely man of the Three.

Yours truly,

BLUNT STICK.

March 30, 1882.

DEATHS.

BENTLEY—March 29th, Jeannie Walker Hoyle the beloved wife of Henry Bentley, Esq., of Eshald House, Woodlesford, aged 47 years.

NICHOLS—March 27th Herbert, son of Abraham and Sarah Ann Nichols, of Rothwell, aged 13 months.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr Epps, has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette—Make simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in Packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence for afternoon use.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—These remedies are unequalled throughout the world for bad legs, wounds, foul sores, and ulcers. Used according to directions given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Many poor sufferers who have been patients in the large hospitals under the care of eminent surgeons, and have derived little or no benefit from their treatment, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, scurvy, and diseases of the skin there is nothing that can be used with so much benefit. In fact, in the worst forms of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, used conjointly, are irresistible.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may be secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and cheap compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

DR BARDSLEY'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS are now acknowledged by our best physicians to be the only sure and safe remedy for all diseases arising from impure blood, such as scrofula and scrofulous humours. Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s. 9d.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS cleanse and purify the blood, strengthen and invigorate the nerves, and secure the perfecting of digestion and prevent the creation of those humours to which we owe erysipelas, scurvy, gout, and those slimy dregs out of which the stone and gravel within us are formed. The timely use of Brandreth's Pills has saved thousands of valuable lives. As an antibilious pill they are unequalled.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS are the infallible remedy in all Coughs, and Colds, Lumbago, Sciatica, Rheumatism, and all local pains. See you get the genuine, which has "Thomas Allcock and Co." on the stamp. Beware of vile imitations that contain lead.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.

THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have their skins blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. The more delicate the skin the quicker its ruin. THE ALBION MILK AND SULPHUR SOAP is the purest, the whitest, and most purifying of all soaps, by its purifying action taking away and preventing all pimples, blotches, and roughness. It is recommended by the entire medical profession as the most elegant preparation for the skin that is known. A boon to sensitive skins. By all Chemists, in tablets, 6d. and 1s.—The Albion Sanitary Soap Co., 532, Oxford Street, London.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the teeth a peculiar pearly-whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke, "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s. 6d., of all Chemists and Perfumers. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

IS RHEUMATISM CURABLE? Yes, if you take WOODCOCK'S RHEUMATIC MIXTURE. Speedily cures Rheumatic Pains in the Limbs, Rheumatic Pains in the Head, Rheumatic Pains in the Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatic Swellings and Stiffness; in fact, every phase of Rheumatism; no matter how acute or long standing, it never fails. OBSERVE—This is not a quack remedy warranted to cure everything, but a genuine SPECIFIC FOR RHEUMATISM only. Of any Chemist. In Bottles, at 1s. 9d. and 2s. 9d., or sent free to any railway station in England for 25 or 38 stamps. (Three 2s. 9d. bottles, carriage paid, for 102 stamps or P.O.O.) By the Proprietor, Page D. Woodcock, Calvert Street Norwich.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Ask your Chemist for "THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER," sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere at 3s. 6d. per bottle. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s. 9d.

HAVE IT IN YOUR HOUSES, and follow the advice of the eminent Doctors Prout, Stevens, Morgan, Turley, Dowsing, Gibbon, Sparks, &c., who have borne unqualified testimony to the value of LAMPLOUGH'S PYRETIC SALINE. It gives instant relief in headache, sea or bilious sickness, constipation, heartburn, scarlet and other fevers, smallpox, measles, eruptive and skin complaints. Use no substitute. H. LAMPLOUGH, 113 Holborn, London.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES cure Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis.—Medical testimony states that no other medicine is so effectual in the cure of these dangerous maladies. One Lozenge alone gives ease, one or two at bed time ensures rest. For relieving difficulty of breathing they are invaluable. They contain no opium nor any violent drug. Sold by all Chemists in Tins, 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each.

LAND AND ITS VALUE.

More than any of its predecessors, and in all probability more than in any Session since Parliament first met at Westminster, has the recent legislative year been devoted to the question of land tenure. Almost the entire time of Lords and Commons was devoted to the solution of a problem which was sufficiently difficult to tax the ingenuity of philosophers and statesmen. At times it was impossible to keep out the range of debate the laws of political economy, and the principles which regulate the production, the exchange, and the distribution of wealth. No doubt there are three requisites of production, without the combined agency of which no wealth can be produced. These are Land, Labour, and Capital, but it is the land with which we have more particularly now to deal.

A few moments of reflection will reveal the indispensable nature of the service which land renders to the production of wealth. Looking at this fact in its naked light it would appear strange to the finite vision that only a quarter of the earth's surface is solid ground, and that three-fourths are water. Recognising the value of the sea as a vast highway between continent and continent, and as the great purifier of the atmosphere surrounding the universe, it is at the same time obvious that there is no article of commerce, whatever might be its importance, the origin of which cannot be traced either directly or indirectly to the land. This statement might in its naked form appear open to challenge, but reflection will show its inevitable truth. There is no solid material upon which the eye can alight that did not come from the land. The people in the busy town, who live away from the calm pursuits of agricultural life, may think little of this as they move through street, and mart, and square; but every day as they sit down at their tables, they are silently reminded of the land's value. Let any one look around the room in which he sits, or at the clothes he wears, and he will notice that he can see nothing whatever that has not been derived from the soil. Take, for instance, the dinner table, spread with a meal of whatever kind, sumptuous or frugal. The table itself is constructed of wood, grown from a tree, which has possibly had its roots in the ground for generations. The vegetables have been grown in the soil; the animal food has been reared from it; the wine is the produce of the grape, also indebted for its existence to the land. It is only the fish which has been contributed by the sea or the river. Then take the wearing apparel of the diner. He wears a piece of woolen cloth, the wool of which has been originally taken from the back of a sheep, whose existence depended upon the produce of the soil. Calico can be traced even more directly to the land, as the cotton plant, from the fibres of which it is made, is the immediate production of the soil. All manufactured articles are made either of animal, vegetable, or mineral productions, all of which are derived from the land.

The more the subject is looked at, the more indispensable does the land appear as a factor in the production of wealth. The days of miracles are past, and manna no longer descends from heaven as a contribution to the food of the people. They have to look to the land for what they eat and wear. They get nothing from the air, and water only from the clouds. In fact, the importance of land as an agent of production is so great, that the French economists in the time of Adam Smith, asserted that land was the sole source of wealth. Without going so far as this, it may be pointed out that land is a commodity which man with all his ingenuity cannot increase in quantity. It may be reclaimed from the margin of the sea occasionally, though not often, and from the banks of rivers more frequently. But reclamation is not creation. Man can multiply his own manufactures—can reproduce pictures and works of art, however beautiful and costly; he can increase the productive power of land by his own care and attention, by artificial manures, and by the application of machinery; but not a single foot of land can he make. And, as the population of the globe is constantly increasing, and occupying more and more of the soil, it is manifest that the soil must become of more value year by year and age by age. A limited quantity, there it is for man to make the most of, for he cannot add to its superficial area. It is no wonder that, in the face of such considerations, the tenure of land becomes an increasingly important question, one that is bound to take precedence of many others that have heretofore occupied the attention of mankind.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

The usual meeting was held on Wednesday this week instead of next Monday (Easter Monday) present—Messrs. W. Hargreaves (chairman) J. Hargreaves, H. P. Newsome, J. Batty, J. Oliver, J. Sanderson and the clerk, medical officer, treasurer, and surveyor.

Mr. W. Hargreaves had been desired by Mr. Charlesworth to apologise for his absence owing to Mrs. Charlesworth having happened an accident a few days ago, from which she had not yet recovered.

The minutes of the last meetings were then read and confirmed.

HIGHWAYS.—Mr. Sanderson reported that the Committee had visited Leeds and Wakefield Road, and found several bad pieces which required special and immediate attention, and suggesting certain means of improvement. The Committee recommend that before any more "covering" is done, the hills be "picked" down into the holes, so as to make the roads more even.

Mr. Newsome mentioned the necessity for some new paving being undertaken in certain bad positions, and thought also that the scrapings should be again removed. The chairman pointed out some bad places, and would like to have something done in Church Street and Butcher Lane, especially the latter. Mr. Newsome expected to have these streets put into order when the sewage pipes had been laid. After some complaints had been made as to the slow manner in which the leading was being done on the Leeds and Wakefield Road, the matters of paving and scrapings removal were left over till the new Board is formed.

On the motion of Mr. J. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Oliver, the clerk was instructed to reply to a letter sent by the clerk to the magistrates respecting Leeds and Wakefield Road, apologising for the unsatisfactory state it was in, and as the Board have only had the road a few months, asking more time to get it into repair.

In reply to Mr Sanderson, the chairman thought the road ought to be "covered" the entire length, and rolled with a heavy roller. The clerk reminded the Board that some legislation was promised on the subject, which might materially alter their position. Mr. Oliver thought their position would not be altered this year, anyhow.

HEALTH.—Dr. Glaister attended to report that no new families had been attacked by scarletina, but that there had been two deaths, cases previously reported; all the other patients were convalescent. The number of cases of measles is diminis The medical officer complained of the ov crowding in some houses, which in epide produced fearful results; he was not, ho ever in a position at present, to take a action.

FINANCE.—A number of accounts and t salaries of the clerk of works and survey were ordered to be paid on the motion of M Newsome, seconded by Mr. Batty.

WATER.—Mr. Sanderson moved that resolution relating to the making of a t at Royds' Green for a sum not exceeding be rescinded.

Mr. Newsome seconded the motion, wh was carried, Mr. Batty being neutral.

Some discussion followed as to wheth another resolution on the subject could taken, Mr. Newsome fearing it could until the present minutes were confirm Mr. Sanderson and Mr. J. Hargreaves lieving they might proceed. Mr. News and the chairman both mentioned enqu made by ratepayers as to what Royds' Gr was going to pay for this tank. Mr. Ba certainly thought there ought to be a cle understanding on this subject; if they w going to give this to Royds' Green, wh about Rothwell Haigh.

Mr. Sanderson eventually agreed to several ratepayers at Royds' Green submit a suggestion of the chairman clerk, that Royds' Green people shall pay a year towards the cost of making the and to report at next meeting.

The clerk then read draft of a lette be sent to the Local Government Bo relating the facts as regards Mr. Law application for water, and in conformity w a certain clause bearing on the questi asked Their Lordship's direction in matter.

ROTHWELL DRAINAGE.—A letter was from Mr. Parkinson, signifying his satis tion with the present manner of getting with the work by the contractors, and hold out the hope that he might be able to a sum to them for extras done. The c complained of the want of attention sh by the Contractors as regards any letters addressed from the Board. Mr. J. H greaves stated that Mr. Brayshaw had d a little at Spibey Lane, but complaints w general on the shocking state in which he leaving the roads.

Mrs. Nichols asked to have her road ac the Paddock put into order again, and clerk was directed to ask for this work to done within a fortnight.

A question of compensation was refe along with similar applications, to the C pensation Committee after the new B has been formed.

BUILDINGS.—As this night was Building Committee's meeting, Mr. J. H greaves reported that the Committee examined plans for the building of a school at Rothwell Haigh; two shops house for the Leeds Co-operative Soci Limited, in Church Street, and certain erections belonging to E. Calverley, Esq the motion of Mr. Hargreaves, secon by Mr. Batty, the seal of the Board attached to the above as approved.

RATEPAYERS MEETING AT WOODLESFORD.

Last Friday evening, a ratepayers' mee for the purpose of electing High Surveyors for the coming year and trans other business, was held in the Woodles Board School at half-past seven, about a gentlemen being present.

Mr. R. J. Smith was invited to ac chairman. Mr. E. A. Flint read the calling the meeting and also the state of the income and expenditure for the which showed that at the beginning o year there was a considerable balan band, and that now when the arrears of have been collected, it will just clear Sissons' bill which is the only one unpaid.

Mr. Nichols proposed and Mr. Cr seconded, that the accounts be passe satisfactory. Carried.

Mr. Thompson, Mr. Sissons, and Kay were then proposed as surveyors of highways, and on the vote being taken three gentlemen received respectively e five and three votes, thus Mr. Thom and Mr. Sissons still retain their fo position.

Mr. Smith complained of the road le from the Railway Bridge towards his h and suggested that all the loose stones be removed, as it is probable they will n required for some time.

Mr. Craven also complained of the state of Stockings Lane and said that alth a resolution was passed at a similar me to the present a year ago, that it shou repaired, nothing had been done; a discussion then arose as to whether it sh or should not be put into proper repair which Mr. Craven proposed that it shou properly repaired at the expense of ratepayers; seconded by Mr. Smith.

Mr. Robinson moved as an amendm that the matter be left in the hands of surveyors, seconded by Mr. Little.

The amendment and the resolution put to the meeting and the amendment ca by a majority of four.

Mr. Flint was re-appointed as collect the Highway rate at the usual salary.

The thanks of the meeting were pre to the chairman on the motion of Mr. B and Mr. Craven, this item bringing business to a close.

OUR RIVAL BANDS.—It is not ch town the size of Rothwell is able to s two brass bands. We have however reminded during the week that such case. The old Band turned out on Sat in their neat new uniform of navy blue gold braid and played through the s The new Band, which is composed en of teetotallers, also made their appearan Tuesday evening, consisting, we under of some 14 members. Canvassers have friends to assist in defraying the cost of instruments, which exceeds £100, and they have been successful.

There is nothing more nourishing and wa cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, b difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This m secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large fast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, whi three times as far as the adulterated and compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest pack ing fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MRS. BENTLEY.

The funeral obsequies for the late respected lady of Eshald House, Woodlesford, were performed on Monday morning last. As has before been intimated, Mrs. Bentley a few weeks ago went on a visit to Norfolk, in the course of which she unfortunately caught cold, a severe and painful illness supervened, and other help failing, Mr. Bentley had the sick lady conveyed to London, where the highest medical assistance was consulted, but without any good result, and on Wednesday evening, the 29th ult., surrounded by her sorrowing family, the sufferer passed away about 10 o'clock.

On Friday evening, by the five express, the body arrived at Woodlesford station, where a large concourse of persons had assembled, and amid respectful silence and sadness, was quietly taken into the once loved home of the deceased, where it remained until the time of interment.

In passing through the villages of Woodlesford and Oulton, we observed a number of the cottages with the blinds drawn, and all along the route the funeral was to pass, tokens of respect were exhibited. It had been intended to hold a choral service at Woodlesford church, in the erection and sustentation of which Mr. and Mrs. Bentley have been the principal supporters, but owing to the painful memories such a service would bring up, Mr. Bentley specially asked that this additional burden of grief might be spared him. The remembrance of his wife's close connection and interest in the raising of the edifice, her constant attendance at the services, the widely different scene which took place there not nine months ago, at his daughter's wedding, would all have come up again in mocking liveliness, and have made his sorrow all the heavier.

Exactly at twelve o'clock, the massive oak coffin was brought out at the front door, and placed in the artistic and appropriate new hearse, (designed and built by Messrs. J. W. Smith and Sons, the undertakers) through the glass sides of which could be seen the large and exquisitely beautiful wreaths placed above and around the coffin. Then came four splendidly fitted coaches and pair, containing the family and relatives of the deceased lady. Following these was the family coach, in which were the female servants of the house, the empty carriages of Sir Charles Lowther, J. B. Charlesworth, Esq., J. T. Leather, Esq., W. Wood, Esq., C. Jewison, Esq., and other gentlemen. The procession was preceded by the gardeners and male servants of the establishment, the bearers being employés at the brewery. There were also present, the Hon. & Rev P. Y. Savile, Rev. H. Ripley, Major Stocks, Captain Grayburn, J. B. Charlesworth, Esq., J. Shaw, Esq., E. Shaw, Esq., C. E. Charlesworth, Esq., J. G. Turner, Esq., T. W. Jewison, Esq., J. W. H. White, Esq., R. J. Hudson, Esq., (Secretary of the Company) and other gentlemen and ladies. The sad cortegé moved slowly along from the house, and up the road towards Oulton church, which was reached about 12.25. The route was lined with people who shewed the sense of loss they had sustained by the sorrow depicted on their tearful faces.

Arrived at the church gates, the body was taken out of the hearse, and followed on foot by the mourners and friends, was carried towards the church, where the procession was met by the Rev. G. Heberden, M.A., vicar of Rothwell, the Rev. R. H. Hamilton, vicar of Oulton, and an enlarged choir in their surplices. The church itself was filled with villagers, the majority of whom were women, many feeling that in Mrs. Bentley they had lost a real friend in need. The service was commenced by the chanting of the 39th Psalm, after which the vicar of Rothwell conducted the part of the burial service usually performed in church. The procession then re-formed, and on arriving at the grave, the service was continued by the vicar of Oulton, concluding at one o'clock. The place of sepulture is on the south side of the church, and consists of a brick built vault of unusual width, leaving room right round the coffin. It is built in two portions immediately over the remains of Mr. Bentley's father and mother, and consists of two separate parts, raised side by side from about eight feet below the surface, and each divided into two portions. The body of the deceased lady is placed in the first vault, and will be covered by a large stone slab resting on a ledge prepared, and this will form the foundation for the next interment. The sides of the entire sepulture were most tastefully and lavishly covered with rare and beautiful flowers, while the coffin was literally hidden by the numerous and carefully prepared floral wreaths placed there by relations and friends.

The body was encased in a shell, which was then enclosed in lead, the outer coffin of massive polished oak with heavy brass mountings, and bearing a plate with the inscription

Sacred to the memory of Jeannie Walker Hoyle,
Wife of Henry Bentley, Esq.,
Aged 47 years.

The funeral was under the management of Messrs. J. W. Smith and Sons, undertakers, of Leeds, who carried out the arrangement with the utmost attention and in a highly satisfactory manner.

At Woodlesford church a muffled peal was rung 1882 changes, Oxford Violet and New London Pleasure, in 1 hour and 5 minutes by James Harrison, Rothwell; William Haigh, Joseph Robinson, James Haigh, (conductor) Fred Denison, Joseph Haigh, Woodlesford.

It is a melancholy but pleasing fact that according to her usual custom, Mrs. Bentley had got ready a large number of articles of clothing for poor women in Woodlesford, to be given to them on her birthday, which fell two or three weeks ago; owing to her absence from home ill, she had sent word that not being at home on the day, she would present these articles when she came back. Truly "Her works do follow her."

We understand that on Friday last, the Bishop of Ripon instituted the Rev. Richard Collins, M.A., to the Vicarage of Kirkburton, Huddersfield, and the Rev. Frederick Browne Manners, M.A., to the new Vicarage of St. Silas, Hunslet.

OULTON BAND OF HOPE.

The concluding meeting for the present session was held on Saturday evening last, at the Wesleyan Sunday School, and took the form of a Children's festival, to which adults and non members were admitted at a small charge.

Mr. J. Fearnside, president of the society, was chairman, and in the course of the evening made a few appropriate remarks concerning the society, and also with reference to the temperance question generally. The chief items of the entertainment were, however, the reciting of pieces and the singing of temperance hymns by the children, in both of which exercises they did themselves great credit, some of the pieces being exceptionally well given as coming from children. Miss Walker also sang two songs, which gave a pleasant variety to the proceedings.

Mr. W. Mason, junr., gave a short statement as to the position of the society and its progress, from which it appeared that the number of members is about 102, and the average attendance is from 40 to 50. No subscriptions are required, the expenses, which are only small, consisting chiefly of the amounts paid for gas and for cleaning, having been met by private contributions by adult members and friends.

A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings, which were throughout interesting, and seemed to be heartily enjoyed by the little folks. It may be well to state that the society is non-sectarian, and merely holds its meetings at the Wesleyan School as being the most convenient place to be had.

OUR VILLAGE CHURCHES.—Our correspondent promises No. 2 of these interesting papers next week, when we shall endeavour to publish it; it may, however, happen to be delayed should our Easter news prove too heavy; if so, the paper will appear the week following.

LOFTHOUSE WESLEYAN CHAPEL.

On Saturday evening last, a service of song entitled 'Pilgrim's Progress' was given by the choir of the above chapel, to a very good congregation. The Rev C A Collingwood, of Rothwell, gave the connective readings, and Mr W Jenkins presided at the organ. The service was attentively listened to by the congregation. On the motion of Mr Stephenson, seconded by Mr Foster, a vote of thanks was passed to the reader and singers, after which the anthem 'Jerusalem my happy home' was well rendered by the choir. The benediction brought the meeting to a close at about 9 o'clock.

LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

The probabilities as regards the election, have been the principal topic of conversation all the week, and various have been the conjectures and guesses as to the result to be revealed by the casting up this afternoon. Each candidate, from his party's point of view, has been placed in the winning list, the principal doubts resting on who was to be third, most people placing Messrs. Charlesworth and Hargreaves at the head.

The voting papers were duly delivered on Friday, and within a very short time sundry couples of visitors might have been noticed entering and leaving house after house, their countenances bearing marks of satisfaction or otherwise according to the reception accorded to them. Throughout Friday and Saturday these visits were continuously prosecuted in every part of the district, and we should imagine there is no ratepayer but has been respectfully waited upon by three or four pairs of visitors, soliciting "your vote and interest." So long as visiting alone has been carried out, well and good; we would fain hope no such illegal actions have transpired this year as had to be so strongly complained of last year. Never before, we should think, has such a thorough canvass of the district been carried out, and we anticipate a larger record of votes this year than has ever before been registered.

Yesterday, amid the damping influence of the rain, the papers were collected and forwarded to the Board-room, where Mr. Holmes, the returning officer, with Mr. S. Hargreaves, the clerk, and assistants, proceeded at twelve o'clock to-day to count the votes.

The counting of the votes commenced today at twelve, under the superintendence of Mr. Joseph Holmes, returning officer, assisted by Mr. S. Hargreaves and Mr. W. Price. There were also present Messrs. W. Hargreaves, G. Lockwood, H. P. Newsome and J. Turner, gentlemen nominated for the vacant seats. Mr. Charlesworth was represented by Mr. T. Hargreaves.

The total of papers sent out was 1010, of which 35 were spoiled.

RESULT OF THE POLL.

Joseph Charlesworth	861	Elected
William Hargreaves	862	Elected
George Lockwood	191
Henry Peter Newsome	342
John Turner	523	Elected

The greatest anxiety has prevailed all day, and the result has been looked for since three o'clock.

LOFTHOUSE SCHOOL BOARD.

In our report of the above Board's meeting last week, an erroneous impression would be conveyed as regards the estimated cost of the schools. Last year the two half-year precepts amounted to a sum equal to 7d. in the £. The present year 1881-2 will only cost 6d. in the £ to the ratepayers, made up of the last half year's rate of 4d. and this half-year at 2d.

A PENNY EXHIBITION.—A novel and interesting exhibition, composed of articles purchasable for one penny, is being arranged at the Alexandra Palace for this Easter. Anyone who has noted the number of ingenious articles offered for sale in the streets of London for this small sum, will comprehend how attractive such an exhibition will be.

REV. R. S. BOULTER.—During the last two or three days, the above-named gentleman has paid a flying visit to his parents and friends in Rothwell. Nearly ten years ago he left Rothwell for his station in India as a Wesleyan missionary, and after this long sojourn he has returned with his wife on a visit to his friends. He anticipates spending some weeks here later on in the year. We very heartily welcome him home again.

MARKETS.

LEEDS CORN, Tuesday.—The demand for wheat is quiet; prices are barely those of last week. Maize is 1s to 1s 6d per qr. dearer. Beans 1s more money. Peas steady. No change in the price of flour.—Leeds Corn Millers' Association Report.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—We had a larger supply of both beef and mutton to-day, and prices were as a consequence somewhat easier than they were a week ago. The fat beasts included 18 pens of Lincolnshire beasts, 12 pens of Jutland beasts, and the remainder being from the North and various parts of the surrounding district. There seemed to be a smaller attendance of buyers, and trade ruled heavy at a decline of about £1 per head, or a farthing per stone. A slow trade was done in sheep at prices in favour of buyers to the extent of fully ½d per lb. Between 40 and 50 Hampshire lambs were offered and they made from 60s to 70s each or 1s 6d per lb. There was a good supply of fat calves which met with a ready sale at 9½ to 10½d. There was literally nothing doing in milch cow and lean beasts. For pigs we had a fair inquiry at late rates.

	this week	last week
No. of fat beasts	1800,	1500
" sheep	4000,	3000
" Pigs	650,

Prices were as follows:—
Fat beasts, 8d and 8½d per lb.
Sheep, ewes, 8½d to 9d "
" wethers 9½d to 10d "
" small, 11½d to 1s "
" clipped 9d to 10d "
Pigs, small, 15s to 30s.
" store, 35s to 60s.
" fat, 6/ to 7/3 per stone.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

WAKEFIELD CORN, Thursday 12.30 p.m.—Our market being held off the usual day, there is a small attendance, and a limited business passing, in which prices are about the same as last week. Barley quiet, beans and oats steady, maize 1s per quarter dearer. Weather to-day is much milder than for some days past, and with more sun.

WEST RIDING SPRING QUARTER SESSIONS.

(At the Sessions yesterday, the following local cases were tried.)

ALLEGED LARCENY BY TRICK.—James Newsome and Patrick Dolan, two young men living in New street, charged on remand with having obtained 2s 6d by trick from Thomas Earle, of Lingwell Gate, at the Boy and Barrel Inn, Wakefield, a few days ago, were remanded until next Monday.

THE BURGLARY AT WOODLESFORD STATION.—Edmund Hardy, 37, painter, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the counting house of the Midland Railway Company, and stealing therein a waistcoat, a pair of boots, a pair of trousers, a pair of cuffs, and the sum of 3s 6d, the property of the said Company, at Oulton with Woodlesford, on 27th of January. Mr Thompson prosecuted. There was a long list of previous convictions, and we understand that among the exploits of the prisoner was the fact that he had at one time personated a detective at Derby. It will be remembered that the prisoner was very gallantly apprehended by Police-constable Clarke. The Court sentenced him to five years' penal servitude, and five years' police supervision.

FOOTBALL.

OULTON v. SHEFFIELD.

This match was played at Oulton last Saturday, in the presence of a fair number of spectators, although the threatening weather doubtless kept a large number away. The match had been arranged as a sort of bonne bouche to finish the season with, but owing to unforeseen occurences, Oulton has another match or two to play. The players arrived in the field just after three o'clock, when it was learned, to the great disappointment of all present, that Gregory and Hunter had not come, Gregory being too late for the train, Brittain and Key playing in their places. Oulton won the toss, and chose to play with the wind. Shortly after the kick-off, a corner kick was gained by Oulton, and the leather was soon after put between the uprights by the home forwards, but it was disallowed on the plea of a foul. At this stage Key retired to give place to Gregory, who had come down by a fast train. The free kick was well returned by the Oulton backs, and Abbey succeeded in obtaining the first goal. After the kick from the centre, a short visit was paid by Sheffield into the home territory, where Mosforth showed his 'grit' by a fast run up to the corner, but the play was soon again in the visitors' quarters, and two throws in and a corner kick were taken by Oulton. The 'corner' was entrusted to Abbey, who hardly allowed enough for the wind, and a 'six yards' placed the ball in the centre, and was taken by Gregory right through the home team, and a splendid shot captured the Oulton stronghold for the first time. During the remainder of the first half no more goals were secured, but some excellent play was shown by Oulton, Hutchinson being especially prominent throughout the game; the home team succeeded in gaining several corner kicks, and once looked very much like scoring, but the goal was well defended by Bentley, who took that position shortly after the commencement, owing to being slightly hurt. At half-time one goal each had been registered. After a short rest, play once more commenced, and an onslaught on the Oulton goal took place, the second goal for Sheffield was soon secured from the foot of Mosforth, Gregory directly after followed suit by the best shot o' the day. Things were beginning to look serious for Oulton, as for some time the play was in dangerous proximity to their goal, and although several plucky attempts were made to break away, both by the centres and wing-men, their career was stopped before they placed their opponents' stronghold in danger. After one of these incursions, a long shot added the fourth goal to the 'Blades' score, Bradley being puzzled by the wind. A nice bit of passing by Abbey, Gosney and West, charged the scene of action for a short time, but it was again returned, and a splendid corner kick was taken by Malpas, which produced a hard scrimmage in the goal mouth, but was luckily got rid of without scoring, as Gregory essayed a shot over his head which only just cleared the cross-bar. Calverley and Boothroyd each made several good runs, but without the desired effect, and just before time was called two corner kicks were taken by Sheffield, but without adding to their score. A pleasant game thus ended in a win for Sheffield by 4 goals to one. We must say that Oulton has improved very much this season since the 'Cup ties,' and we are sorry that the fixtures with their opponents in the final have not been played; we hope, however, that the matches will be continued as usual next season. The following are the names of the teams:—

OULTON.—J. Bradley, goal; H. Wilmot, R. Jowitt, backs; W. Hutchinson, F. Parkinson, T. A. Coope, half backs, G. M. Abbey, T. West, (left wing), A Gosney, (centre), H Calverley, E Boothroyd, (capt), (right wing), forwards.

SHEFFIELD.—Bentley, goal, Ledger, Helliwell, backs, Buttery, Brittain, half-backs, Malpas, W Bentley, Allen, Ollerenshaw, Mosforth, Gregory, (capt), forwards.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—These remedies are unequalled throughout the world for bad legs, wounds, foul sores, and ulcers. Used according to directions given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Many poor sufferers who have been patients in the large hospitals under the care of eminent surgeons, and have derived little or no benefit from their treatment, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, scurvy, and diseases of the skin there is nothing that can be used with so much benefit. In fact, in the worst forms of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, used conjointly, are irresistible.

DR BARDSLEY'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS are now acknowledged by our best physicians to be the only sure and safe remedy for all diseases arising from impure blood, such as scrofula and scrofulous humours. Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s. 9d.

KAY'S TIC PILLS, a specific in Neuralgia Face-ache, &c., 9½d., 1s 1½d, postage 1d. Of Chemists Kay Bros., Stockport.

NEWSPAPER & BANK DIRECTORY OF THE WORLD.

We have just received from the publisher, H. P. Hubbard, Esq., of New Haven, U.S.A., the most remarkable and admirably got up literary work of the age. Its 2598 pages, every one of which is full of interest and information, include lists and descriptions of the 35,000 newspapers of the world, and 20,000 banks in every known quarter of the globe; the first page of many of the newspapers being pourtrayed in miniature.

The handsomely printed frontispiece, and portraits of eminent editors and other distinguished gentlemen, the unblemished typography, the unusually elegant, tinted paper, and the very tasteful binding and lettering with titles, English, French, German, Spanish and Chinese, complete two volumes which would adorn the library shelves of the most fastidious literary man.

It is too soon yet to give any detailed idea of the contents of this wonderful work, on which a whole army of gentlemen have been engaged for seventeen months, under the able superintendence of the enterprising and courteous proprietor. The one feeling which pervades the mind is that of astonishment and ever-increasing interest. We may return to a further description after more fully discovering its hidden stores of intellectual wealth.

The cost of the work is two guineas, but it is well worth the money as a standard reference and a literary curiosity. We shall be pleased to shew the volumes to anyone calling at our establishment during business hours.

To give an idea of the vast resources of Mr Hubbard's office, and also as an interesting study to many, we may mention that a verse of the bible is given in no fewer than 160 different languages.

HOW ROYAL LOVERS "SPOON."

Prince Leopold has been photographed, and the portraits are published for public circulation. The reader will, of course, observe that there is nothing very startling in this information, and that he never passes a picture shop without observing a display of portraits of all the members of the Royal Family. But the speciality about the portrait I am referring to is the position in which the Prince is taken, and to explain this it must be mentioned that at the time when he visited the photographer's he was not alone, but accompanied by his betrothed, the Princess Helene, who is also represented in the portrait. The duke was taken seated, with one arm round the waist of the young lady, the latter's head resting upon his shoulder in as loving and spoony a manner as if the parties had been apprentices from Manchester out for the day on New Brighton sands. This photograph was intended only for family circulation, but the photographer, misunderstanding his instructions, issued it to the trade in the usual manner. The mistake was quickly perceived, and the cartes issued were instantly recalled, but not before a few had got into circulation and had been displayed in the shop windows. It may be expected that Prince Leopold's betrothed is not over pleased at the incident, and that the young man will have got a smart brushing-up for his carelessness; but lover's quarrels are proverbially pleasant episodes, and the couple are not likely to have any serious reason to regret the misadventure which has revealed to the world the way in which royal princes and princesses get on with their courting.

STEPMOTHER TO HER BROTHER.—The relationship brought about by marriage is often ludicrously singular. Quite a sensation has been caused in fashionable circles by the announcement that the Duke of Westminster is betrothed to the Hon. Catherine Cavendish, third daughter of Lord Chesham, and sister of the Countess of Leicester and the Baroness Lyttleton. The Duke is fifty-seven; the Duchess elect is twenty-five. As her elder brother married in 1877 the Duke's second daughter, Miss Cavendish will, on becoming Duchess of Westminster, occupy the unique position of being stepmother to her brother.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT has signified his intention to patronise the Exhibition of Means and Appliances for the Protection and Preservation of Human Life, to be held at the Alexandra Palace in June.

DEATHS.

LANCASTER.—April 1st, Jane Edith, daughter of William and Ann Lancaster, of Rothwell, aged 7 years.

TODD.—April 1st, William Todd, of Leeds, late of Oulton, aged 52 years.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We would particularly urge our friends to send in their letters and news, as early as possible, as we cannot accept contributions later than Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, except in the case of matters occurring on Wednesday or Thursday which should be forwarded within a short period after. Advertisements may be sent as late as Friday morning.

CORRESPONDENCE.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our correspondents. ED.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

FROM a report given me by a trusty friend, it appears there was not so much fun at the town's meetings last week as was the case a year ago, although Mr. Stead created a little diversion in the shape of a very simple question as to whether certain work had been let by contract or not. It was all very well for Mr. Stead to say that he asked the question independently of anybody, and for Mr. Higgins to disclaim any knowledge of Mr. Stead's intention, but some people still hold to the opinion that there was some collusion between the two, and as this is not the first time that Mr. Stead has taken up the cudgels on behalf of Mr. Higgins, this opinion does not seem altogether an unwarranted one, but here I will leave it.

I must say however that Mr. Higgins did not raise himself in the estimation of those present by his attack upon Mr. Jewison, who calmly ignored the insult—and the apology also.

IT seems that Mr. R. J. Smith did not receive much support from the Woodlesford people on his proposal to share the town's meetings; this is a pity as we have a right to our share of these meetings, and I fancy if the thing were properly managed we could get it too.

PEOPLE are wondering what it is that I have to say which is of such great importance, and numerous have been the guesses as to the nature of my promised communication, but no one has to my knowledge hit the mark as yet, so I will put the anxious ones out of their misery in as few words as possible.

The fact is, that I shall next week pen my last contribution to the Rothwell Times as a regular correspondent. I am very sorry to have to make this announcement, but necessity knows no law, and I shall therefore have to take a reluctant leave of all my numerous friends—and enemies; several of the latter will I know, jump for joy, when they see this, as they will then feel safe, which they have not done for some time now.

The approach of the severance of my connection with this journal causes me to feel very sad and melancholy, and I really do not feel able to give my readers the usual quantity, but they must fain be content, and hope for more next week.

AJAX.

[The intimation a short time ago, of our correspondents intention to discontinue his regular letter, has, as may be imagined, given us considerable pain, and at first, quite took the wind out of us. As however, on account of business and other engagements, the step seems now resolved on, we have pleasure in stating that we have arranged for a continuance of 'gossip' by a writer who will, we doubt not, amuse, or vex, tickle or enrage, the numerous readers who, have revelled in the witticisms and smart raps of our old friend Ajax, while the scope of the 'Whispers' will probably extend over a wider area than 'Woodlesford.' Groaning under the anticipation of so tremendous a grief as the loss of our worthy friend, our readers will not be surprised that we cannot say much more on the subject at present, and crave permission to retire to our private room and have a 'weep.' ED.]

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 7½d. and 1s 1½d., labelled "JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received: "Gentlemen,—it may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, L.R.C.P. Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills,' long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy."—Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s. 9d.

Box sent post free on receipt of 15 or 35 stamps by Wm. Mather, Wholesale Druggist, Manchester.

KAY'S LINSEED COMPOUND, for Colds and Coughs, cures nine cases out of ten. [illegible] by Chemists. 1s 1½d, 2s 9d.

Dr Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa.—"When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoas? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles.

LIBERALS & CONSERVATIVES UNITED!—This may sound strange but it is nevertheless true, the Liberals and Conservatives alike are unanimous in declaring that BUDDEN'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND AND COLTSFOOT is the best remedy for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and in fact, any Affections of the Chest and Lungs. One dose relieves, one bottle cures. Ask for "BUDDEN'S BALSAM," and take nothing else.—Bottles 1s. 1½d. 2s. 9d. Agent for Rothwell — Marshall, Stationer and Patent Medicine Dealer.

REMEDY FREE! A victim of youthful imprudence causing Premature Decay, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood etc., having tried in vain every known remedy, has discovered a simple self cure, which he will send FREE to his fellow-sufferers.—J. H. REEVES, Esq., 43, Chatham St., York City, U.S.A.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.

THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have their skins blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. The more delicate the skin the quicker its ruin. THE ALBION MILK AND SULPHUR SOAP is the purest, the whitest, and most purifying of all soaps, by its purifying action taking away and preventing all pimples, blotches, and roughness. It is recommended by the entire medical profession as the most elegant preparation for the skin that is known. A boon to sensitive skins. By all Chemists, in tablets, 6d. and 1s.—The Albion Sanitary Soap Co., 532, Oxford Street, London.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the teeth a peculiar pearly-whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s. 6d., of all Chemists and Perfumers. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Ask your Chemist for "THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER," sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere at 3s. 6d. per Bottle. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

A CARD.—TO ALL WHO ARE SUFFERING FROM THE errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a recipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City, U.S.A.

JOHN DYSON.

THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, LIMITED.

THE scheme to amalgamate the two Italian operatic houses of London, and to concentrate this form of entertainment within the walls of Covent Garden is about to be brought forward under the most favorable auspices. Practical men of business have taken the matter in hand, plans have been fully discussed, and the details of the prospectus well digested. Some of the highest personages of social life have expressed their acquiescence in the scheme which has already been supported by the promise of large sums of money by intending shareholders. Another Season has paved the way for the accomplishment of the views of those who believe amalgamation the best course to pursue in the interests of both enterprises. It is an open secret that the Italian Opera Season last year at her Majesty's Theatre was not a success, nor did Mr. Mapleson care to risk an Italian Season in the autumn. It has been thought better that Mr. Mapleson, reinforced by certain members of the splendid troupe of Covent Garden, shall confine his energy to the United States, where his experience of American affairs will be at the service of the Royal Italian Opera Company, Covent Garden (Limited). Freed from the limited competition of Her Majesty's Theatre, the whole staff of the Italian Opera singers, and the entire body of Italian Opera goers will be drawn towards Covent Garden, the Prospectus of which house for the forthcoming Season includes the names of the most attractive artists the Italian Operatic Stage can boast. Competition has always been disastrous to Italian Opera, both commercially and from the point of view of art. A large amount has been already subscribed to the Opera Company, Limited, and the Directors have now decided to issue the Prospectus to the public. The Scheme promises to pay from 11 to 15 per cent., and may be worth the consideration of every class of investor, small and large.

To the Electors of the
ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD DISTRICT.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

We beg that you will accept our sincere thanks for the magnificent support which you have accorded to us at the recent election of the Local Board, and to assure you that we shall use our utmost endeavours to deserve the confidence which you have hitherto shewn in us.

Again expressing our thanks,
We beg to remain,
Your obedient servants,
JOSEPH CHARLESWORTH,
WM. HARGREAVES.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD ELECTION, 1882.

To the ELECTORS of
ROTHWELL, ROTHWELL HAIGH, STOURTON and ROYDS GREEN.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

On behalf both of myself and of the Rothwell Liberal Association, I beg to tender you my most sincere thanks for the proof you have given of your confidence in me by electing me as a member of your Local Board.

I am happy to believe that your choice has caused very little of that ill-feeling which so often attends local politics in country towns.

I shall at all times be glad to give my personal attention to any matters about which I may be consulted, and to bring before the notice of the Board any complaints which may in my opinion require the exercise of their authority.

I fear the neglected condition of the roads and the execution of the sewerage and several other public undertakings will cause the imposition of a heavy rate during the next few years, but I hope that by a judicious and discreet expenditure, the ratepayers may become reconciled to the calls which will be made upon them.

Again asking you to accept my thanks for the favour you have shewn towards me, and to rest assured of my devotion to your interests,
I beg to subscribe myself,
Ladies and gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
JOHN TURNER.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

We are pleased to announce that arrangements have been made with a correspondent for weekly disclosures of "The Whispering Gallery," and who will be able to spread his gossip over a wider area than our old friend Ajax has usually covered.

No. 2 of "Village Churches and their Services" will appear next week:—crushed out this time.

WITH reference to the recent election of members for the Local Board, we are desirous to point out to our readers some of the defects of voters in exercising their voting power at this election. We observed that in some instances a person in recording his vote, instead of placing his initials (in the manner prescribed by the Public Health Act, 1875,) opposite the candidate's name for whom he intended to vote, placed the figure 1 opposite such names; this of course invalidated his vote. Another voter, instead of putting his own initials, had written the initials of the candidates, thus spoiling his paper. In another instance the voter evidently signs his own name to the paper, but his initials are in another person's handwriting; this paper is under these circumstances spoilt. It is clear according to the Act of Parliament before referred to, that the initials of the voter must be written by himself if he can write; if not, that the witness who attests his (the voter's) mark should also write the initials. While on this subject, it should be clearly understood that unless the voter himself places his own mark to the voting paper, it (the voting paper) is invalid, as, his being unable to write, the mark constitutes his actual signature. Several of the papers had evidently been filled up in one person's handwriting; this would lead to the suspicion that some of the canvassers for the candidates had taken more than one of the voters' papers and filled them up, without having reference either to the voter's signature or mark. Papers filled up in this manner, it is needless to say, are bad, although the person who filled up the papers might have obtained the express or implied consent of such voters, or of members of their families. We noticed that several respectable and intelligent men in the district, although they placed their initials properly to the candidate's names, they omitted to sign the paper, and thus the votes were lost.

We would observe, as several people complained that although owners of property they could not vote in respect of such ownership, that an owner must make a claim in writing on some one of the first six days in March in any year, as advertised in our issue of February 24th, and that the chairman will revise such claim, and if found to be a valid one, the claim will be entered upon the register of owners, and the owner will be entitled to vote on such claim so long as he keeps the property in his own hands.

It is gratifying to remark that not one voting paper has been spoilt at this election by the voter recording his votes for more candidates than the number required.

Our only object in making these remarks, and pointing out these defects, is to secure as perfect and complete a representation, so far as the proper filling of the papers is concerned, as possible.

LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

As we very briefly announced last week, the result of the voting for three members to fill the vacant seats on the Board was as follows:—

Joseph Charlesworth	861	elected
William Hargreaves	862	elected
George Lockwood	191
H. P. Newsome	342
John Turner	523	elected

After the announcement had been made, Mr. Wm. Hargreaves, as being at the head of the poll, expressed his great pleasure in proposing that the best thanks of those present be presented to Mr. Holmes, the returning officer, for the able and impartial manner in which he had conducted the election. Everything had gone on most agreeably, and without the slightest jarring string, and he was sure they were all satisfied that Mr. Holmes had acted fairly and courteously to everyone. He also thanked Mr. Holmes, on behalf of all, for his generous hospitality in entertaining them to so capital a luncheon.

Mr. G. Lockwood, though he had lost the election, had very much pleasure in seconding the resolution, and agreed with every word that had just been spoken; he was sure Mr. Holmes had acted most impartially.

Mr. J. Turner very cordially supported the motion, as did also Mr. Newsome, and Mr. Thos. Hargreaves, (on behalf of Mr. Charlesworth.)

The resolution having been heartily carried, Mr. Holmes, as returning officer, felt he had tried to do his duty, and had endeavoured to act fairly and impartially towards all. From the first it had been his determination to carry out the election in the best and most thorough manner he possibly could. He had stated at the commencement of the counting-up, that he should feel obliged if every candidate would keep secret the manner in which the various ratepayers voted, so as to protect the voters as much as possible, and he again asked that any remarks which had been made by the different gentlemen present might not be divulged.

A vote of thanks was afterwards passed to Mr. S. Hargreaves, (the clerk) and Mr. W. Price, (collector) for the very efficient manner in which they had assisted the returning officer in carrying out the election.

The state of the poll was declared at 5.40., and at 5.55. the news was published in the columns of this journal—Not so bad for Roddill.

THE "FANCY FAIR."

The old style of "Bazaar" is now rapidly becoming stale and unattractive, and novelties must be provided in this department of entertainment as in every other. Swiss fêtes, fancy fairs, ancient streets, grotesque or long-ago costumes, are some of the variations adopted to secure the attention and attendance of the people now-a-days. Not by any means the least pleasing and effective was the fancy carried out by the promoters of the Rothwell Church Bazaar, in opening "a new street in Rothwell," as was stated in the introductory ceremonial of Monday last.

The idea, as well the general superintendence of the varied labour and study necessary for the production of a street in "an old English village" belongs to Mr. William Wright, solicitor, of Rothwell and Leeds; and any one having had experience of the demands required for the preparation of an ordinary bazaar, will have some perception of the large and varied ability, taste, and perseverance, necessary for the perfecting of this very pretty design. The "street" was laid out in the infants room of the National Schools, and consisted of several neat little gable cottages, erected on one side of the room, with red-tiled roofs, white washed boarded fronts, and diamond pared lattice windows, the lower story being open as stalls. Another larger cottage in the same style of architecture served as a refreshment stall, and was erected at the bottom of the little street. To speak of the perfect similitude and artistic beauty of these small erections is not easy, every portion and detail so closely delineating the original of the former age, and the design and painting of the whole being something remarkably good; as an instance of the complete illusion accomplished as regards the representation of the windows, persons could not believe but that they really were glass, until they approached so closely as to feel, instead of smooth glass, the plain deal board. Most deservedly is Mr W. Wright to be complimented on the success of his work, as architect, clerk of works, and especially as scene painter. To Mr. Thompson, who has ably and constantly assisted in the preparation and completing of these cottages, is also due proportionate credit and praise.

Entering the new 'street' however, with one's expectations high and lively, a feeling of thorough disappointment falls on one, that the effect of the well-designed and cleverly painted erections is so spoiled by the smallness of the room; and general sorrow was expressed that a larger and more commodious place could not be found for the proper display of the novel and pretty designs. There were, however, counterbalancing reasons which led the promoters to hold to the present buildings, in the fact that there are other rooms easily accessible fo the entertainments to be given during the evening. Before visiting the various attractions, we will first attend the opening proceedings, at which there was only a moderate attendance.

Rev. G. Heberden, the vicar, in commencing the proceedings, shortly after two o'clock, referred to the novelty of holding a Bazaar in Rothwell for church purposes, and stated that like many other undertakings, this had risen from very small beginnings. A few friends had met week by week to make articles of clothing; these had been assisted by other very kind helpers who presented various gifts, till it had eventually been resolved to erect a new street in Rothwell such as they now saw. It was a very difficult duty he had now to perform, the introduction of a gentleman who was better known in Rothwell than he was himself. In looking round for a suitable gentleman to open the bazaar, they were unanimous in selecting Mr. Saville, whose name was a familiar one in nearly every Yorkshire village. He was sure Mr. Saville was the "right man in the right place" and he had great pleasure in asking him kindly to open the bazaar.

The Hon. & Rev. P. Y. Saville, vicar of Methley, was warmly received, and returned thanks for the kind words which had been spoken respecting him, and for the honour which had been done him, in inviting him to open the bazaar. He had very great pleasure in assisting in this good work. Rothwell had always been ready to help Methley, one instance being the kind manner in which the Rothwell Band headed the club procession to Methley Church every year. To hear the band play the Hallelujah chorus in the church had a most thrilling and pleasing effect. Referring to his long residence in the neighbourhood, Mr. Saville spoke of the time when the late lamented Canon Bell was vicar of Rothwell, when John Flockton was churchwarden and William Gibson, clerk. In a characteristic interview he had with Gibson, he said to Mr. Saville, "Methley church is a very nice church, no finer in the district, but you know, sir, Rothwell has a cathedral" (applause). After a delicate allusion to the manner in which the young ladies would sue for the honour of placing a bouquet in the button hole of the gentlemen, Mr. Saville was sorry that Rothwell had not yet got its railway open, but he had no doubt they would get it by and bye,

"There's a good time coming,
Wait a little longer."

He was sure Rothwell had his very best wishes and he trusted there would be increased prosperity in the town. He would now take the opportunity of pronouncing this 'new street' open for the purpose of 'buying, selling, and being sold.' (Laughter and applause.)

The several ladies' cottages were supplied with the usual variety of useful and ornamental articles tastefully arrayed and offered at reasonable prices, attended by Mrs. Jos. Wright, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Cordingley, Mrs. Lockwood, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Sheldon, Mrs. T. Armitage, Mrs. W. Chapman, Miss Cockerham and Miss Webster.

Mr. Jewison, Mr W. Wright and Mr. Lees, Junr., also acted as shopkeepers in a little cottage where they offered pictures, inkstands, and works of art and vertu, a number of copies of Mr. Wright's excellent etching of Rothwell Church finding ready sale.

Besides the cottage stalls, another novel place of sale stood in the corner in the form of an open rustic grotto of cork and moss, ornamented with fern baskets and choice flowers. From beneath the roof of this romantic little house, Mrs. Heberden and the following ladies temptingly offered goods of different descriptions. With Mrs. Heberden were Mrs. John Brown, Mrs. Tennant, Mrs. Lees and Misses Heberden, several of these ladies and the younger daughters of Mrs. Heberden and Mrs. Brown were attired in the plain, neat costume of the "olde tyme" and their appearance added considerably to the pleasure of the scene.

The refreshment stall was profusely stocked with necessaries and luxuries for the more material requirements of visitors, and Mrs. Clayton, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Abson and Mrs. Taylor very courteously and speedily attended to the numerous demands made for the good things under their care.

A large and very pleasing exhibition of stove and greenhouse plants was displayed on a platform at the further end of the room, kindly lent by Mr. T. Fielding and Mr. J. Clayton, to whom we are sure, every visitor must feel greatly obliged.

A model house, the work of Mr. Walter Lockwood, was exhibited by Misses Lockwood, and attracted a number of "pennies" as it deserved to do, all carpeted and properly furnished as it was.

Misses Kidd and L Parker were also very successful with their fortune telling; Miss Lizzie Parker netted a respectable sum by selling slices of a special sort of bride cake; Masters Heberden, too, getting a good number of peoples "fingers" in their "bran pie." A local 'post office' also afforded an excuse for filching payment for unpaid missives out of the pockets of unfortunate gentlemen.

During the afternoon, but specially the evening, quarter hour concerts, vocal and instrumental, were given in the girls' school-room by several ladies and gentlemen and the members of the Church Glee Party.

Two magic lantern exhibitions were given during the evening by Mr. W. Wright and Mr. Thompson, which were well attended and very satisfactory.

A large number of persons visited the bazaar during the day, the entrance money amounting to £13

Among those present were members of most of the leading families in the neighbourhood, some of whom purchased liberally.

On Tuesday the "fair" was re-opened, there being a fair attendance, magic lantern and concerts affording amusement and profit during the evening.

The 'row' of cottages was built by Mr. Lockwood, and the refreshment stall and grotto by Mr. Copley, both of whom have willingly rendered a considerable amount of time and labour gratuitously.

The total amount realised by the two day's sale is £103 10s, which with the entrance money £15, makes a gross total of £118 10s; a sum far beyond the fondest anticipations of the friends of the movement. The money is for providing new choir desks and the reflooring of the north aisle of the church.

Holloway's Pills.—Indigestion and Liver Complaint.—The digestion cannot be imperfect or seriously disordered without the effects of such derangement becoming visible on the countenance. These Pills at once remove the disorder and its unpleasant consequences. They stimulate the digestive and assimilative functions, and consequently promote that great blessing—a good appetite. Holloway's Pills most satisfactorily remove all deranged or diseased action of the many organs engaged in extracting nourishment for our bodies from our various diets—as the liver, stomach, and bowels, over all of which they exercise the most salutary control. By resorting at an early stage of the malady to these purifying and laxative Pills, the melancholy and jaundiced dyspeptic is speedily restored to health and strength, and his sallowness gradually vanishes.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may be secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and cheap compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

MARKETS.

LEEDS CORN, Tuesday.—Notwithstanding the holiday season our market was fairly attended to day. Last week's prices for wheat were maintained. Indian corn 9d to 1s dearer. Beans 1s more. Peas firm. No change in the price of flour.—Leeds Corn Millers' Association Report.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—There was a good attendance of buyers this morning, but as this is a holiday week, butchers made smaller purchases than usual. The supply of fat beasts was considerably less than last week. A score pens were filled with Jutland cattle, eight pens were occupied with Lincolnshire beasts, and the remainder were from the north of England and various parts of Yorkshire. The best beef made fully 8¾d per lb., useful sorts 8½d., and inferior qualities from 8d to 8½d. The supply of sheep and lambs showed nearly the same falling off in numbers as the fat beasts. Trade ruled heavy in this department, and prices were rather lower, a reduction of ½d per lb being accepted in many cases in order to effect sales. Lambs met with a very slow sale, at from 65s. to 70s. each. There was only a small show of fat calves, which sold at about 9d per lb. Pigs met with a slow sale at late prices.

WESLEYAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION.

The annual meeting of teachers and officers of the various Wesleyan Sunday Schools in the Wakefield circuit, was held on Good Friday, in Lofthouse Chapel. In the afternoon, at half-past two there was a teachers' conference under the presidency of the Rev. C. A Collingwood, at which Mr. J. Sugden, of Wakefield, read a carefully written and temperate paper on "Sunday School Anniversaries," several gentlemen speaking on the subject afterwards, the general sense of those present being in favour of making the anniversary a children's day, and against the extravagant use of musical instruments, difficult music, and unmeaning hymns.

Tea was served from half-past four o'clock in the school-room, the arrangements under the charge of Mr. H Hall, being most complete and satisfactory.

In the evening, the annual public meeting was held, when every available seat was occupied The Rev. G. W. Russell occupied the chair, and after the devotional exercises, the report was read by Mr. J. Marland, of Stanley, shewing 16 schools to be connected with the Union, every item of statistics having advanced, especially the number of teachers and scholars who are members of Society. Addresses were delivered by the Rev. C. A. Collingwood, Messrs. J. R. Seanor, Armitage, D. Bell, Cawood, Stephenson, and other friends, and the meeting concluded about nine o'clock, after votes of thanks had been passed to the ladies, Mr. Sugden, and the speakers.

STOURTON WESLEYAN BAZAAR.

The friends of Wesleyan Methodism at Stourton have been making an effort to clear off the debt of some £60 remaining on their school chapel, and have succeeded remarkably well. The chapel was built some years ago, when Stourton was in its infancy, and although the members are nearly all working men, they have steadily maintained their hold, and have by various means gradually reduced their liabilities till now they can rejoice in seeing the end of the debt.

A bazaar was held in the neat and commodious room on Tuesday, when Jabez Woolley, Esq., of Garforth, opened the proceedings at two o'clock.

The Rev. A. B. Gardiner having conducted a short devotional service, called on Mr Swales to introduce Mr. Woolley. In his own cheerful and appropriate manner, Mr. Swales referred to the past kindness of Mr Woolley, and after stating how willingly that gentleman had accepted their invitation, assured him of the pleasure and happiness his presence afforded the Stourton friends, and asked him to open the bazaar.

Mr. Woolley was very heartily received, and in the course of an earnest kindly address, mingled generous sympathy and encouragement, with a deep tone of spirituality. He rejoiced in the cause which had brought them together, and he had no doubt but they would attain their object and get out of debt, naively adding, "he supposed they would no sooner get out of it than they would be head over ears again in order to get up a new chapel in front of the present school-room" Whatever they did, he advised them, when they came to consider plans for a new chapel, to be sure and make it wide enough and high enough. Let them have faith in God and in themselves, and give plenty of room for further extensions. After other valuable remarks, Mr. Woolley declared the bazaar 'open,' sincerely praying God's blessing upon all their efforts.

Mr. George Ward then moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Woolley for so kindly coming forward to assist them with his presence; seconded by Mr. Cliffe, and carried with acclamation. Mr. Woolley suitably replied.

The stalls were neatly arranged and abundantly supplied with articles of every description, as may be gathered from the following list: Sewing Meeting Stall, Mrs. Swales and Mrs. Bullas; Teachers' and Scholars' Stall, Mrs. Webber, Miss Wormald and Miss A. Wormald; Book and Fancy Stall, Miss Swales; Refreshment Stall, Mrs. Fatkin, Mrs. Brock and Miss Kirk; Earthenware Stall, Mrs. Cliffe.

Various attractions and amusements were provided for the young people.

A capital tea was spread on a table in the room, to which a large number of persons sat down.

The total amount realised is £91 1s 1d., a magnificient result, not only clearing the debt, but leaving a "nest egg" of £30 for their new chapel, we very heartily congratulate the Stourton Wesleyans on the well-earned total, raised as it is by the determined and united efforts of a few working men, assisted by ladies and gentlemen who gladly "help those that help themselves."

FOOTBALL.

SEVERAL football matches have been played in the cricket field, Royds Lane, during the holidays but none of any note, excepting the match between the Harmonic and Rothwell. On Easter Monday, a Rugby match was played in the presence of a large number of spectators, by a team of the Rothwell Football Club versus Lofthouse, with the following result:—Rothwell 1 try 3 minor points to Lofthouse 1 goal.

ROTHWELL v. ROTHWELL HARMONIC.

Last Saturday the return match was played in the Cricket Field, Royds Lane, between the above clubs The fine weather induced a good number of spectators to be present, and speculation was rife as to the result of the match, Rothwell seemed to be slightly the favourites. Four o'clock was the time advertised for the kick off, and just before that time the scarlet and blacks arrived, but the home team were not all present and it was half an hour past the time when the ball was started. During the first half the Harmonic played with the wind in their favour. A visit to each end showed the play had begun in earnest, and a loose scrimmage in the Rothwell goal mouth took place, but was got rid of by a "six yards." The play was very fast and each side seemed determined to win. Chadwick secured the ball from a long kick, and made a run, in which he succeeded in passing the backs safely, but unfortunately fell before he could shy. Several fouls were made by both sides, and throughout the game fouls were frequent. Dobson contrived to make a good run down the low side of the field, when he centred splendidly but the forwards were not up, and a good chance was missed. The Harmonic now made a visit into their opponents territory and a scrimmage on the goal line ensued, during which the first point was scored. During the remainder of the first half play was very even, but no more goals were secured. On ends being changed the home team at once assumed the offensive, but Taylor broke away, and although his shot failed Adamson was ready and a splendid screw kick captured the Rothwell citadel for the second time. The ball was again started and the Harmonic fortress received a severe bombardment for some time without effect, until a grand rush by the home forwards secured the desired point. The leather was once more started and was again taken into the Harmonic territory where Dobson missed an easy goal. As the time went on the home team seemed to play better than ever while the visitors were acting on the defensive. At last, however, a goal was secured, but the Harmonic umpire disputed it, and an appeal to the referee (Mr Hutchinson, of the Oulton F. C.) was made, and he gave his verdict in favour of Rothwell. The Harmonic team immediately left the field although the time was not up, thus the game remained unfinished 2 goals each. The following are the name of the teams:—

ROTHWELL.—J R Seanor, goal; W Hartley, H Waterhouse, backs; J Rawson, H Chapman, A Ward, half backs; J Wilson, A Fowler, J Lawn, G Dobson, J W Chadwick, (capt) forwards

HARMONIC—A Judson, goal; G W Blakey, G Field, backs; G Harrison, T W Wright, A Baines, half-backs; H Taylor, J Whitehead, W Jackson, W Ward, G Adamson, (capt) forwards.

OULTON v. ALTOFTS.

This return fixture was brought off at Oulton on Saturday last, in brilliant weather, and before a numerous company of spectators. The visitors chose to play with the wind, and Oulton kicked off. Play was very even for a short time, the ball travelling rapidly from end to end. The ease with which the home team played, and the style of play adopted proved their superiority, for while the Altofts forwards worked very hard, they never once got dangerous. Half-time intervened without any score being made. On changing ends, the home team had wind and slope in favour, and immediately commenced business by lowering the visitor's goal. From now to the finish an incessant bombardment of the Altofts stronghold was kept up, and three more goals were secured. The losers were completely overmatched, and the dry ground just suited the home team, some of whom showed rare turns of speed. The match thus ended in a win for Oulton by four goals to none. The Oultonians wind up their season to-morrow (Saturday) with an exhibition match at Wakefield, their opponents being the famous Sheffield eleven.

ROTHWELL HARMONIC v. STOURTON ROVERS.—On Monday last, the return match was played between the above teams on the ground of the Rovers, and ended in a win for the Harmonic by 2 goals to nil.

EASTER FESTIVITIES.

On Good-Friday morning, special services were held in the various churches, evening prayers having also been conducted in some of them each day of last week.

On Easter-Sunday, the joy-bells from the several belfrys, heralded the birth day of the 'resurrection,' and suitable services took place in the different churches and chapels.

The Rothwell Temperance Band marched out of the town on Good-Friday about 10 o'clock, to fulfil their first public engagement in connection with the grand Band of Hope Demonstration at Leeds. Their playing on leaving Rothwell was greatly praised, and it is evident we have a likely Band of teetotallers. They arrived in due time at Hunslet Temperance Hall, where they took the lead of the Hunslet Bands of Hope, and arrived in front of the Town Hall shortly before two o'clock. Here some 5000 children sang several temperance melodies, and listened to addresses, afterwards dispersing to their various schools, the Rothwell Band again leading the Hunslet contingent home.

GALA.—The Rothwell Model Brass Band held galas in a field kindly lent by Mr J Clayton, on Monday and Tuesday, both being well attended, and apparently successful. The Band played a capital and suitable selection of dance and operatic music with their usual excellence and effect.

DANCING CLASS BALL.—Last Monday night, the 'wind-up' ball of the season in connection with the above class was held in the Rothwell Mechanics' Institute, when a nice company of about 30 couples were present Dancing commenced shortly after 9 o'clock, and as the evening wore on, songs were given in the intervals between the dances, by several members of the Company, which were heartily enjoyed by those present. A very pleasant party broke up about 4 o'clock on Tuesday morning.

RODDILL FEAST was celebrated during the holiday in the usual hilarious style, though there appears to have been fewer stalls than last year. The principal attractions were at the lower end of Commercial Street.

WOODLESFORD CHURCH.—The services in the above church on Easter-day were of the usual joyous character. The processional hymn, No. 134, was sung morning and evening at the commencement of the service. The services in the morning were Jackson in F, and in the evening Ebdon in C. The anthem taken was Dr Elvey's 'Christ is risen.' The kyrie 'All Saints' was an original one written by the organist. The sermons both morning and evening were preached by the Vicar, the Rev A J Irvin, B.A., and bore immediate reference to the great subject of the day. An Easter offering in the shape of a very handsome banneret for the pulpit desk, has been presented to the church by Mrs Barker. The church was tastefully decorated with beautiful and choice flowers from the gardens of Eshald House.

WOODLESFORD WHISPERS.

I HAD occasion, when referring to the recent football match between Rothwell Harmonic and Oulton, to speak in condemnatory terms of the action of the former team, in disputing the referee's decision; and at the same time expressed my regret at the necessity for such remarks; and it has been said by certain of the partisans of the Harmonic club that my language on that occasion was unjustifiable; but I will ask, what have the Harmonic contingent to say for themselves now that a precisely similar thing has again occurred? I refer to the game which was played last Saturday between the rival organisations of Rothwell, when the referee (who is specially retained in such matches for the purpose of avoiding unseemly disputes and squabbles) awarded a goal to the Rothwell club, and the Harmonic men following up their Oulton tactics refused to be bound by that decision, and as their opponents rightly supported the referee and would not agree to the point being disallowed, the game was brought to a premature conclusion, and the seeds of any amount of soreness and ill-feeling were sown between the two parties, in a few moments, that will require probably as many years to completely eradicate.

Now what iota of reason or justification can the Harmonic players have to offer in support of their twice repeated action? In the first instance the referee was engaged from Sheffield and was therefore entirely free from partiality, although some of the Harmonic players were very swift to accuse him of being previously influenced and even bribed; but fortunately such abominable accusations always recoil with double force upon the heads of those framing them On Saturday last a member of the Oulton team had the misfortune to be selected for this important position and it has indeed been said that the contending clubs should have gone further afield in search of a referee, but taking the match at Oulton as a criterion, it does not much matter from what quarter that official hails.

Those best acquainted with Mr. Hutchinson can testify to his entire freedom from any particle of partiality or prejudice and as he is also an experienced player himself it is probable that it would be difficult to select a more fitting person for the post. It seems now to be quite clear that unless the Harmonic are allowed to have their own way in all cases of dispute they do not choose to play. Does not this sort of thing seem to indicate that the players have returned to the days of infancy, and remind one of a very common argument advanced by very little boys, viz:—"Now if you don't let me win, I won't play."

I think it does, and I would earnestly recommend these gentlemen to set up a more manly standard in their play and accept defeat when inevitable, in a creditable and unflinching manner; to be defeated by a good club is not a disgrace by any means, but for a party of young men—and Englishmen too—to exhibit such a miserably childish and cowardly spirit on two occasions within as many weeks, is doubly disgraceful.

The Harmonic players should remember that the reputation which they are acquiring for fractiousness and disputant proclivities, will spread very rapidly, and they will ere long find it a difficult matter to induce respectable clubs to make engagements with them, as people don't care to compete with men who cannot bear to lose, and who will get up a dispute rather than do so.

I expect we shall have quite a flood of correspondence about this match, and that the bulk of it will be of the usual quality.

WHAT highly artistic plates the Sanitary Authority have affixed to the walls here and there, specifying the position of the stop cocks and fire plugs in Woodlesford and Oulton; they are really charming, and so neat, don't you know.

I FORGOT to mention last week that I had observed a paper attached to the front door of the Woodlesford Board School, which upon closer inspection, proved to be an official announcement that the account books of the School Board were to be deposited for inspection on certain days at the house of Mr. R. J. Smith previous to the annual audit at Hunslet, and I have been told that a similar paper was posted in the room occupied by the Mechanics' Institute, and I looked at all the church and chapel doors to see if the notice was posted there likewise, but in vain. Now why was that notice not affixed to the several places of worship in the usual manner? Other public notices are and why not those of the School Board? and especially when the subject of such notice is the financial transactions of the Board. Opportunity is given, by means of such notice, for the ratepayers to inspect the accounts, and if they find anything in them objectionable, they can attend the audit and prefer such objection in a formal manner. This being the case I maintain that the notice in question should be given as publicly as possible, and although the doors of our places of worship are not the very best positions for posting public notices, they are at any rate more likely places than the door of the schools or the inside of one of the rooms of the building.

As only two gentlemen were nominated as guardians for Oulton and Woodlesford those gentlemen have been duly elected, and although I have not a word to say against either Mr. Whitehead or Mr. Sanderson, but on the contrary I consider them both well adapted for the office in many ways, yet in one respect it will be freely admitted by everyone, that neither of them are properly qualified to act as guardians, and that is, that they are neither of them sufficiently familiar with the two villages and the people residing there. Mr. Whitehead lives at Meanwood, and is only to be found here during business hours; and what chance has he of becoming acquainted with the wants of the poorer section of the people? or what opportunity have they of consulting him with respect to straitened circumstances or intended application for relief at Hunslet. The same objection but in a greater degree, applies to Mr. Sanderson who resides on the very outskirts of a detached portion of the township, and how can people be expected to travel to Royds Green and back on the uncertain chance of finding Mr. Sanderson at home, and when they do find him, how is he to know whether they are telling him a straightforward tale or not? having no knowledge of the people of Oulton and Woodlesford at all

Would it not have been possible to find two gentlemen nearer home equally eligible? and is there no one in Woodlesford who could be induced to act as guardian instead of going to Oulton for both gentlemen. In making these observations I again disclaim the slightest trace of personal objection to Messrs. Whitehead and Sanderson, my object being solely to have the most eligible persons selected as guardians, and I consider that one of the most important qualifications possessed by a guardian is that he should be easy accessible to the poor people.

Poor Mr. Lockwood! It is really too bad that he should be at the bottom of the list again, I certainly thought he would have stood a better chance; there is however no help for it and he will have to wait a little longer. Now that Mr. John Turner has found a seat upon the Board we may expect to hear of wonderful things taking place; and in all probability the mature and learned schemes which are from time to time hatched amid the fumes of bad tabacco and fetid radicalism, in the murky atmosphere of the Liberal Club, will be duly ventilated and promptly sat upon, at the meetings of the Local Board.

As I intimated last week, this letter closes my career as the weekly caterer of local gossip for the Rothwell Times and now that the time for taking leave of the scene of my somewhat lengthy labours, has actually arrived, I must admit that I feel very reluctant to abandon my pleasant duties.

I have now supplied for over sixteen months, without a break, a regular weekly instalment of "Woodlesford Whispers" and I can safely say that during the whole of that time, in Woodlesford and Oulton at least, the writings of Ajax have been the most eagerly looked for portion of this journal, even by the bitterest of my enemies; and I can also assert with confidence, that although the good taste of my remarks have occasionally been questioned, yet the truth of my statements has never once been shaken.

One word as to the long vexed question of the identity of Ajax. I remarked a few weeks since that the guesses at the popular mystery are as far off the mark as ever and although a select party of choice and kindred spirits in the two villages loudly boast of having solved the problem, I can tell them plainly that they well know their statements to be false, and that the only reason they have for making charges against others is that they have occasionally and justly felt the smart of the Whisperer's lash and are anxious that someone else should suffer as well as themselves.

In conclusion, allow me to tender my best thanks to my readers for their sustained interest in, and kind approval of my efforts to afford them gratification, and although I may perhaps have caused a little soreness in the minds of certain individuals I am persuaded that the general verdict will be that "Ajax was not a bad sort after all." That I have done a little good will I think be admitted, in proof of which I will point to the non-use of gas tard on our roads and the free minstrel concert last winter, which last will I hope become an annual institution.

I have also to thank Mr. Editor for his watchful care over my treasured secret, and the kindness which he has shewn in finding space every week for my quota of gossip; also my old friend the 'devil,' who, although I have had to complain of him at times, has upon the whole exercised very great care in setting up my letters, and I am correspondingly obliged to him for that care. FAREWELL.

AJAX.

(The severance of a long standing friendship is indeed a painful matter, and all our readers will easily comprehend the specially unpleasant sensation of losing a friend, by whose writings our subscribers have been entertained and the circulation of this journal materially increased. Whether we ask the opinion of friend or foe of Ajax, we are sure they will acknowledge the unusual and extensive acquaintance he has displayed in treating local and general questions, the sprightly wit, the cold steel sarcasm, the vivid imagination and power of description, and the generally correct conclusions, shewn in the weekly 'Whisper.' We would fain hope that though leaving us, we may anticipate occasional letters from our old correspondent, when he happens to be in this locality, and that the remembrances of past days may now and again be revived by a line. Sincerely thanking Ajax for his constant contributions, and grieving that we may see his face no more, we bid him a sad farewell.—ED.)

THE LATE LOCAL BOARD ELECTION.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

I wish through the medium of your journal to thank cordially all those who gave me their independant support in the late election.

I wish also to take the earliest public opportunity to contradict most emphatically a report which was circulated through the district, to the effect that I had expressed the opinion that 'seventeen shillings a week was sufficient for any working miner.' All who know me, especially those who have had dealings with me in matters relating to labour and wages, would at once recognise the statement as a foul and infamous libel. With comparative strangers the case is different, the dodge fully answered the purpose intended; but I cannot envy the success of the person responsible for the circulation (for electioneering or any other purpose) of such a gross, dishonest lie.

The opinion I hold, and have always expressed, is that a fair day's work is worth a fair day's wage; as a proof of this, I may say that I never advertise for the lowest price for work done on my own account, but always find out a good man and give a fair price for his work.

One word more.—I am able to say that I have always advocated the rights of working men, in times when it was not very popular to do so; now of course every adventurer pets, and makes a handle of, the 'free and enlightened working man' when it is convenient to do so.

In conclusion, I would warn all concerned against sudden friendships, and extravagant professions. Found your judgment on the whole tenor of a man's life, and his actions, and you will be less liable to disappointment.

"Good name in man,
Is the immediate jewel of his soul.
Who steals my purse, steals trash,
But he who filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed."

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
GEORGE LOCKWOOD.

SONG OF THE TEMPERANCE BAND.

Contributed by a Rothwellite.

The Teetotal Band it sounds so grand,
While playing through the street;
It makes the publicans pull a face,
And gives the temperance friends a treat.

They say us men with little heads,
Are bursting with brains and wit;
We turn our eyes up to the sky,
And cannot play a bit.

They say that water will not do,
To blow through lumps of brass;
But we will stick to temperance, boys,
And see how it will last.

So let us have cold water, boys,
The drink it will surpass;
And help to keep our wind, my boys,
And blow through lumps of brass.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoa? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

LIBERALS & CONSERVATIVES UNITED!—This may sound strange but it is nevertheless true, the Liberals and Conservatives alike are unanimous in declaring that BUDDEN'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND AND COLTSFOOT" is the best remedy for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and in fact, any Affections of the Chest and Lungs. One dose relieves, one bottle cures. Ask for "BUDDEN'S BALSAM," and take nothing else.—Bottles 1s 1½d. 2s. 9d. Agent for Rothwell, Marshall, Stationer and Patent Medicine Dealer.

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY. I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s 9d.

Box sent post free on receipt of 15 or 35 stamps by Wm. Mather, Wholesale Druggist, Manchester.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.

THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have their skins blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. The more delicate the skin the quicker its ruin. THE ALBION MILK AND SULPHUR SOAP is the purest, the whitest, and most purifying of all soaps, by its purifying action taking away and preventing all pimples, blotches, and roughness. It is recommended by the entire medical profession as the most elegant preparation for the skin that is known. A boon to sensitive skins. By all Chemists, in tablets, 6d. and 1s.—The Albion Sanitary Soap Co., 532, Oxford Street, London.

FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the teeth a peculiar pearly-whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s. 6d., of all Chemists and Perfumers. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Ask your Chemist for "THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER," sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere at 3s. 6d. per Bottle. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

JOHN DYSON,

THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, LIMITED.

The scheme to amalgamate the two Italian operatic houses of London, and to concentrate this form of entertainment within the walls of Covent Garden is about to be brought forward under the most favorable auspices. Practical men of business have taken the matter in hand, plans have been fully discussed, and the details of the prospectus well digested. Some of the highest personages of social life have expressed their acquiescence in the scheme which has already been supported by the promise of large sums of money by intending shareholders. Another Season has paved the way for the accomplishment of the views of those who believe amalgamation the best course to pursue in the interests of both enterprises. It is an open secret that the Italian Opera Season last year at her Majesty's Theatre was not a success, nor did Mr. Mapleson care to risk an Italian Season in the autumn. It has been thought better that Mr. Mapleson, reinforced by certain members of the splendid troupe of Covent Garden, shall confine his energy to the United States, where his experience of American affairs will be at the service of the Royal Italian Opera Company, Covent Garden (Limited). Freed from the limited competition of Her Majesty's Theatre, the whole staff of the Italian Opera singers, and the entire body of Italian Opera goers will be drawn towards Covent Garden, the Prospectus of which house for the forthcoming Season includes the names of the most attractive artists the Italian Operatic Stage can boast. Competition has always been disastrous to Italian Opera, both commercially and from the point of view of art. A large amount has been already subscribed to the Opera Company, Limited, and the Directors have now decided to issue the Prospectus to the public. The Scheme promises to pay from 11 to 15 per cent., and may be worth the consideration of every class of investor, small and large.

EAST AND WEST YORKSHIRE UNION RAILWAY.

The furtherance of the above Railway still proceeds most satisfactorily, many petitions having been presented in favour of the scheme the latest being one on Monday evening, by Mr. Illingworth, from the Bradford Chamber of Commerce, and a long list of bankers, merchants, etc.; another on Tuesday by Mr. Serjeant Simon, from the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of Dewsbury.

We understand the Parliamentary committee for the consideration of the scheme is fixed for Monday, the first of May, the Hon. W. H. B. Portman, M.P., for Dorsetshire, being chairman.

We are pleased to know that several petitions against the Bill have been withdrawn, arrangements having been come to with the signatories, and that the way has been very materially cleared for the successful passing of the Bill.

From all we hear, it seems probable that the shares of the Company will be quickly taken up, many people in this district being anxious to secure an interest in the line, while several very wealthy and well-informed gentlemen are purposing to apply for large numbers of shares.

A meeting of the Committee is held to-night at the Institute.

TO CRICKETERS.

We are pleased to announce that a series of articles on our grand English game of "Cricket" will appear in the columns of this journal, during the present season. They will be written by a gentleman thoroughly and practically conversant with the game, and we are quite sure will be thoroughly studied, carefully worded, and written in the best style. The first paper will appear next week, if possible.

May we further intimate that we shall be exceedingly pleased to receive reports of any matches in the neighbourhood, which, provided they arrive by Wednesday, will be duly published in the current issue.

ROTHWELL DEBATING SOCIETY.

The wind-up meeting of the above Society took place on Wednesday evening, in the club-room of the Mechanics' Institute, when about 50 persons met together, and spent a few hours most enjoyably.

Mr. W. Batty, the indefatigable secretary of the Society, presented a short report, showing the class to be financially clear.

He then referred to the work of the six month's session just concluded, and felt there was every reason to look back on it with pleasure. The result of the debate on the 'Abolition of oaths' was equal voting, the chairman giving his 'cast' in favour of their retention. The two night's debate on 'Free Trade v. Fair Trade,' was certainly the debate of the session, there being a large majority in favour of 'Free Trade.' The question whether Queen Elizabeth was entitled to the name of Good Queen Bess, was decided in her favour. 'Does education unfit for rough work' was answered in the negative. The decision as to 'Vaccination' went against its being retained in its compulsory form. This, the first part of the session, was eminently successful in debates, the average attendance being 24. Since the new year, there have been three debates, one resulting in favour of 'Capital Punishment,' the second in favour of 'Local Option,' and the third declining to find 'Parliament justified in the execution of Charles 1st.' Four valuable and interesting papers had also been read on 'A glimpse of the heavens,' by Mr. Denton; on 'Paris Electrical and London Smoke Abatement Exhibitions,' by Mr. Turner; on 'Art,' by Mr. W. Wright, and on 'The study of an old Parish Book,' by Mr. John Batty. The intervening evenings had been spent in readings, recitations, &c. The latter portion of the session, the attendance has gradually dwindled away.

Mr. Harms, president of the society, expressed his pleasure in being spared to preside at the closing meeting of the season, and to meet so large a number of friends. He was sorry, however, that the hopes entertained at the commencement had not been fully realised, and would mention two or three causes which had, he believed, produced the failure of these anticipations. He thought one great reason was the absence of subjects on which a good debate could be carried out; most of those introduced were of a somewhat one-sided tendency. Local occurences have also drawn away some of the more prominent debaters to other places during the last two months. Events over which the society had no control had also tended to alienate some of their members. He hoped, however, that, at the commencement of the new session, all would be bright and cheery. There was, nevertheless, great reason for congratulation. They had had successful debates, a larger attendance, and increased interest manifested. He thought the debate on Free Trade was a model debate for such a class; that on Queen Elizabeth was also good. He had been pleased with the efforts of some of their junior members, who had displayed considerable power and logical sequence in their addresses. The class had also been very advantageous to older debaters, and he had wondered in his own mind how much was due to the influence of this class, of the brilliant harangues in which some of their members had been indulging at the 'cross' and in other parts of the district. He thought they might certainly claim to have made their mark on the constitution of the Local Board, in the return of Mr. Turner as a member; he only hoped that the relations of that gentleman with the chairman of the Board might be as agreeable and pleasant as they had been with the president of this society. (Laughter and applause.) As to the social meetings, he had been thoroughly disappointed They were not without utility and enjoyment, but members came unprepared; he urged an improvement in this particular. Touching on the papers read, Mr. Harms spoke in the highest terms of the research and pains shewn in those of Mr. Denton and Mr. Batty, and warmly complimented Mr Wright and Mr. Turner on what he considered exactly the style of papers suited to such a class. After mentioning the advantages he had himself received from the weekly meetings of the class, and the advance evidently made by others, the president concluded his pleasing, instructive and well-delivered address with the hope that all present would be able to join in the re-union of next October.

Mr H. Thompson, (vice-president), expressed his great pleasure in moving a vote of thanks to their president for the very able manner in which he had conducted the class during the session, and for his excellent address that evening. He was sure they had no better qualified man to carry out the various duties of chairman, and he heartily moved the resolution.

Mr. J. Turner, (vice-president), very cordially joined in seconding the vote of thanks to Mr. Harms, feeling assured they could not possibly have a better chairman—so well qualified and gifted. After a jocular reference to the prophecies of Ajax, as to his action on the Local Board, he rejoiced in seeing so large a gathering, and repeated his pleasure in seconding the vote of thanks.

Mr. B. Batty, in supporting the motion, explained his object in suggesting another chairman, that they might have the advantage of Mr. Harms' debating power. He also referred to the rule prohibiting political subjects, and wished that rule could either be abrogated or else form a Parliamentary Debating Society.

The vote of thanks was carried unanimously. Mr. Harms, after replying, moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. W. Batty, their indefatigable secretary, eulogising his services.

Mr. A. Drew, in seconding, fully endorsed what had been said, both as regards the president and secretary. He suggested that a Volunteer Rifle Corps might be formed in Rothwell out of the Debating Society; thus filling up their leisure time in summer, out of doors.

The motion was very cordially carried.

Mr. W. Batty in returning thanks, said he had done his work as a labour of love, and so long as he was connected with the class, would use his best endeavours to make it a thorough success.

On the motion of Mr. Denton, seconded by Mr. James Armitage, thanks were presented to the vice-presidents, treasurer, and committee for their services during the session.

This concluded the business portion of the meeting, and after a little refreshment had been taken, the party resolved into little groups for the inspection of certain rare, artistic and pictorial works kindly lent by several members.

During the evening, readings were given by Messrs. J. Batty, A. Drew, J. Turner, and A. Batty, (a specially amusing affair, being a sermon parody on 'Mother Hubbard.') Songs were also interspersed by Messrs. Longbottom, B. Batty, W. Harrison, A. Batty, and a glee party. A well-rendered charade was submitted, Messrs. Harms, R. Batty, J. Turner and W. Batty being the dramatis personæ; also some excellent conundrums propounded and stories told. The evening's entertainment concluded shortly before midnight, every one expressing himself as highly gratified.

WOODLESFORD SCHOOL BOARD.

A meeting of the above Board was held on Monday evening, at which all the members, the clerk and attendance officer were present.

The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, the clerk reported that the accounts of the Board for the year ending 29th September, 1881, had been examined by Mr. J. F. Adams, the district auditor on the 6th instant, and that Mr. Adams had made several suggestions relative to the Treasurer's account and other matters, which will receive the attention of the Board.

Cheques were signed for the payment of accounts due, and the requirements of the schools were ordered to be supplied.

The half-yearly estimate of income and expenditure was presented, and a precept was issued to the overseers for £250, which was required to be paid on the 1st day of June, 1882

It was considered desirable that an arrangement should be made with the managers of the Oulton schools in order that the holidays throughout the year might be at the same time and of the same duration at both the Woodlesford and Oulton schools, also that fixed times might be agreed upon for the commencement of the different holidays.

Mr. Mason was accordingly requested to consult Mr. Calverley on the subject, and explain the wishes of the Board thereon.

An application from the Woodlesford Choral Society for the use of the girls' school-room for the annual tea at the close of the winter session was considered, and it was resolved that the Choral Society be charged 7s. 6d. for the use of the room for the purpose named.

It was also decided that five shillings, with an additional charge of one shilling for fire and gas when requisite, should be fixed as the standard price for the use of a large school-room for an entertainment.

During the period which had elapsed since the last meetings, notices had been served on a large number of people whose children were irregular in their attendance at school, and several parents attended the meeting in consequence. Instructions were given to the clerk to take out summonses against the parents in ten cases, the Board being determined to secure a better attendance at the schools in the district.

TEMPERANCE SERVICE OF SONG.

On Tuesday evening last, the members of the Rothwell Band of Hope, assisted by the Temperance choir, gave a service of song entitled "The start in life," in the Mechanics' Hall, to a crowded and enthusiastic audience.

Before the commencement of the service, the Rothwell Temperance Band paraded the village, and no doubt drew many people to the Institute. At half-past seven the room was crowded, and Mr. J. R. Seanor after a few remarks, commenced the service by reading the introductory paragraph, in which the writer muses over the sad fact of 60000 drunkards dying every year. He is roused from his reverie by the sound of distant voices gradually coming nearer singing "Courage brother, trust in God and do the right" The story is then told of a lad leaving home, his father's last words being "Remember William, whatever you do, have courage to say No," (a solo, with chorus, led by Mr. D. Tilley). Gone from home, the song comes in most appropriately—"When there's love at home," followed shortly after by "Never forget the dear ones." Arrived at the house of his uncle and aunt in the 'Great City,' he is represented as singing to himself "Dare to do right," often wondering "Do they miss me at home." It turned out, however, that neither William nor his relatives were abstainers, and though the writer wished he could whisper in his ear "Drink Water!" they all took a little wine. Things went on pretty well for some time, but one evening William came home from a convivial meeting bearing unmistakable evidence of his having drunk pretty freely, and his uncle spoke strongly to him to guard against such excess; he did not advise as the writer would have done—'Turn away from the bright drops that foam.' Again he fell, and a kindly letter from his mother urges him to abstain altogether and 'Yield not to temptation.' He resolved to do so, and he is represented as singing "Our good old friends," (a solo with chorus by Mr. W. T. James.) The uncle decides to banish the cup from his table, and William stands firm, and leaving his former companions, goes with a young man to a temperance meeting where a little girl is heard singing "Father's a drunkard," (solo by Miss Hampson.) After some addresses and the singing of "O come and sign the pledge," William goes forward and gives his name as a member. Two exhortations are then given in song, 'Your Mission' and "Work, for the night is coming." At the request of the meeting, after singing "The Band of Hope Army," William gives an address on "Lead us not into temptation," (solo by Mr. W. T. James), followed by "Truth shall be victorious." Just now, the writer awakes from his reverie, having been dreaming the foregoing story, and thanking God for the progress of total abstinence, all are asked to join in singing "Let all men praise the Lord."

The readings, as we have intimated were clearly and interestingly given by Mr. J. R. Seanor, the musical portion of the service was very well rendered under the conduct of Mr. Joseph Idle, the accompaniment being played by Mr. Hampson. A collection was made at the close for the Band of Hope Fund, £2 being realized.

OUR VILLAGE CHURCHES AND THEIR SERVICES

No. 2.—OULTON

The Village of Oulton is justly considered a very pleasant one. Certainly on the easterly side its rural character is marred a good deal by yawning quarries and piles of stone and stone refuse which crowd the quarry yards, by the tall heavy looking cranes and low smoking chimneys, the rattling of hoisting chains and water pumps, and the scraping hissing monotony of sound which comes from the stone cutting machines On the other side however we have a rural village in almost its best style, clean looking, old-fashioned houses with a newer structure here and there, skirting pleasant roads and each having its cultivated patch or plot which in some cases reaches the proportions of an orchard or large garden, while field and pasture with a goodly array of fine trees complete the necessary make up of a very pleasant country village. The place is however in no small degree indebted to the extensive Park connected with Oulton Hall for much of its beauty. This Park bounds the westerly side and stretches some distance beyond north and south towards Rothwell and Wakefield respectively, and sloping upwards to the west presents a bold and pleasing landscape of green field, plantation and cover. The Park is walled off from the highway the length of the Village on that side, but there are three openings in the boundary wall, one at the "new" Lodge being the principal carriage entrance to the Park, another gives access to the churchyard, and the third is the "old" Lodge entrance now only leading to a private foot road. It will thus be seen that the Church and Churchyard are within the Park and in fact the grave yard is only separated from it by a ditch or sunk fence. It may appear to those who hold decided views as to the system of Church patronage, somewhat objectionable that the principle of Church proprietorship should be emphasised as it thus appears to be by the Church and its grounds being actually part and parcel of the private domains of the patron proprietor but even to some of these the fact will have small importance when they get into the Church yard and feel the influences of the very charming surroundings and the seclusion —not isolation— of the place and see the beautiful sanctuary, which for elegance and graceful proportions is an excellent specimen of a modern village Church. Such is the locality of the Church (St. John's) of which I am about to speak. The style of the building is pointed Gothic, the building itself is of stone and consists of a highly embellished chancel, nave, aisles, square tower with embattled parapet, and a very graceful spire, the whole showing accurate proportions and careful finish. The church was built about 52 years ago, although its cleanly appearance and imperviousness to weather would lead to the supposition that it was not half that age. There is, however, a somewhat depressing monotony about the church-yard, which the presence of trees in variety and the appearance of neatly kept pathways, fails to relieve; a monotony arising from the exact uniformity in shape of the grave-stones, which with very few, and I presume, allowed exceptions, are headstones precisely alike in style. This is certainly a result of private proprietorship, and will perhaps not commend itself to the approval of everybody. At the same time (and this is something to be said in favour of the seeming arbitrariness) we escape the incongruous variety in monumental display which is often seen in graveyards, and does much violence to our sense of good taste.

And now as to the services at this temple of worship. The incumbent is the Rev. R. H. Hamilton, M.A., who I believe is the third holder of the living, and has been in possession for a period approaching 40 years. Such a long service at one place would in the case of a minister of a Dissenting community, a community having the power of free choice and change in selection—be the highest testimony to the preacher's ministerial capacity and worth, but in the case of a clergyman of the established church it has no such meaning, except in a negative sense. It is also no evidence of successful ministration or of appreciated pastoral work, although on the other hand, a term of residence and performance of clerical duties extending over such a long period, must have its influence, depending no doubt as to the kind and extent, on the personal and official characteristics of the clergyman in possession; and it cannot be denied that Mr. Hamilton's undoubted kindness and considerationess for all have deserved and obtained for him long ago general respect. There are no high church proclivities manifest either in ceremonial or altar decorations, nor in any other form; in fact, 'ritualism' has no place or part here, and that is something to say in these times, when the pageantry and parade of papal worship, together with some of the doctrinal heresies are imported into not a few of our village churches, and by their specious fascinations obscuring the simple service and the purer doctrine of the 'Prayer Book.' The choir is a mixed one, consisting of male and female voices, thus partaking more of the character of former than later-day church choirs, with the exception that the services being greatly 'choral,' its functions are more important. The 'ancient and modern' collection of hymns is used, and of the choir it may be further said that it does its work creditably, and of the organist that he supports the singing effectively on an instrument of fair capacity, but which I believe has been in use as long as the church. The efforts of the choir would, however, be still more successful, if, instead of being placed with the organ in a loft just under the roof, the modern arrangement which places organ and choir in the chancel were adopted. There seems to be a want of proper affinity between choir and congregation under the present arrangement. With respect to the preaching, great allowance must be made for Mr. Hamilton's naturally delicate constitution. His voice is weak, thence not far reaching, and the enunciation is in sympathy with the voice, so that it requires close attention to catch much of what he speaks from the pulpit, and there is therefore but slight chance of much impression being made as a consequence of oratorical effort or power of exhortation. The acoustic properties of the building are not good, the words delivered being too much lost amid the spaces of the vaulted roof. This is another matter to be considered in Mr. Hamilton's favour. The sermons, which have also the commendable merit of brevity, are practical, admonitory and exhortative, rather than profound, or elaborately persuasive. and if they were delivered in a small building where they could be heard without much effort either on the part of preacher or congregation, they would no doubt be more effective. Taking things as they are, however, if Mr. Hamilton would discard the manuscript, and talk to his hearers in the more direct way of extemporaneous preaching it would be a decided advantage to preacher and congregation. I have already said he is held in general esteem, and it may be further said in the words of a clerical poet

> No haughty virtues stir his peaceful mind,
> Nor urge the priest to leave the flock behind.
> He is his Master's soldier, but not one
> To lead an army of his martyrs on.'

And again he is

> 'Free from all evils which disturb his mind,
> Whom studies vex and controversies blind.'

The people go to church Sunday after Sunday summoned by the sonorous single bell which the tower contains, and which is by no means calculated to excite cheerful emotions in their minds; they like the beautiful church, the quiet services and the pleasant surroundings; they enjoy the singing or such of it as they can heartily join in, and they feel that they have, in going, performed a Sabbath duty. Let us also hope that many of them come away conscious of some spiritual elevation and moral advancement, and of those other quickening and consolidating influences which are expected to be prime results of a regular attendance at the place of public worship to which habit or conscientious preference leads us.

MR. JOHN BATTY AT BRADFORD.

Always proud of the advances made by Rothwell gentlemen, we are pleased to learn from the columns of the Bradford Chronicle that Mr John Batty, F.R.H.S. now residing at East Ardsley, read a most interesting and instructive paper on "A study of the East Ardsley parish book, from 1652 to 1696," in the Bradford Grammar School, before the members of the Bradford Historical and Antiquarian Society. Mr T T Empsall presided, and among those present were Messrs. J Bottomley, Thomas Fairbank, (Windhill), Simeon Rayner (Pudsey), T Skevington, J W Turner, A Ward, and Dr Maffey (one of the hon secs.)—THE CHAIRMAN, in introducing the reader to the meeting, said his kindness in consenting to read a paper before the society was all the more valued, inasmuch as he was not a member." (Hear, hear). Knowing as we do, the painstaking perseverance of Mr Batty in any works of antiquarian character, we are not surprised to know that the learned gentlemen before whom he read the paper were both interested and astonished at the large amount of valuable information to be gained from the ancient book of an "insignificant country village." The book, it appears, is a very treasure of antiquity. It contained, in one volume, the names of constables, church wardens, and overseers of the highways (both of the last-named offices being then combined), and also of the overseers of the poor. This old M.S. book is not in the parish church, where it ought to be kept, but in the possession of a private person whose ancestor has held official positions in the parish. The book contains 108 leaves, or 216 pages; size, crown quarto. The leaves are of paper, the backs of parchment or thin leather, but the whole is brown with age and handling. The first page, which is incomplete, appears to have contained a list of constables from probably 1625. The lower edges of the next three pages are worn away, while the last four pages are still more damaged. The accounts from 1652 to 1672 are written in a beautiful clear hand. For a year or two afterwards, the minister, Anthony Cooper, keeps them, and subsequently the records are kept by persons, whose rude caligraphy, queer spelling, and mode of expression are more illiterate. Many amusing and instructive entries were referred to, from which an excellent idea of the local and national history could be gathered. Mr. Batty did not conclude his paper, but promised to do so on some future date.—Mr. RAYNER moved, and Dr MAFFEY seconded, a vote of thanks to Mr. Batty for his able paper.—Mr. TURNER and the CHAIRMAN supported it, the latter speaking in warm terms of the manner in which Mr. Batty had dealt with his subject.—Mr. BATTY replied, and the proceedings terminated.

THE TOPOGRAPHY AND NATURAL HISTORY OF LOFTHOUSE AND ITS NEIGHBOURHOOD.

We have pleasure in drawing the attention of our readers to the above carefully written work, recently brought out by our shrewd parishioner, Mr. George Roberts, of Lofthouse, a member of the Yorkshire Archæological and Topographical Association.

The book is neatly got up, is well printed, and contains upwards of 460 pages of excellent matter. The topographical portion consists of about 107 pages and is enriched with good engravings, including views of Lofthouse House (the seat of Joseph Charlesworth Esq.); Hopkinson's House (the antiquary); Thorpe Hall, and the only remaining example of an old thatched cottage, the portrait of a schoolmaster of the old type, the school house and several well executed specimens of the beautiful artistic penmanship which used to be placed before the youth of our grandfather's days.

The most noticeable features of the historical part are an almost exhaustive and classified list of ancient field names, accompanied with interesting explanatory notes. The information about old dated houses and their former occupants is such as none but a resident with the ability of our author could be able to gather and impart and will be increasingly valuable as time rolls on. But to the antiquary the most attractive portion of the book undoubtedly is the fullest and best account which has hitherto appeared of John Hopkinson, the celebrated genealogist. The fame of Lofthouse may be said to hinge upon the fact of it being Hopkinson's birthplace, and the interest in connection with Rothwell Church is enhanced by being the place of his burial and as containing a marble tablet in commemoration of his virtues and useful life. An interesting genealogical sketch is given also of those who were connected with the Hopkinson family by intermarriages, and to whom descended and were apportioned the large and important Hopkinson's MSS, which eventually have found their way into the British Museum and thereby have become accessible to Yorkshire Antiquaries and Local Historians. Pedigrees too are furnished of some of the owners of Thorpe Hall, a very ancient seat of the Lords of the manor, including the Gascoignes, Hansons, Dealtrys, and others.

The parochial affairs of the townships of Lofthouse-with-Carlton are full of valuable statistics including extracts from the old town's books, references to the overseers and churchwardens of former days, old surveys and valuations, enclosures, tithes, Easter dues, &c.

The reminiscences of old schoolmasters are droll and amusing. The chapters on industrial occupations and domestic industries of the district, are the result of much observation and enquiry; a valuable section of the coal strata accompanies a sketch of coal mining all of which will be useful for reference in the future. Copious extracts are copied from the earliest of the Rothwell registers so far as they refer to the families of Lofthouse, Carlton and Thorpe, illustrated by a few chacteristic examples of the ancient caligraphy of these precious records. Abstracts of ancient leases, granted by the Priors of Nostell, who possessed the advowson of Rothwell down to the Reformation are furnished, and are curious as instancing names of notable families and places, from the 14th to 16th century. These are a few of the chief points of Mr. Roberts excellent book. Though Lofthouse cannot boast of an old church or the remains of an ancient castle within its own borders, nor yet of many stirring events taking place on its site, nevertheless Mr. Roberts by a long and industrious research and much careful verification, has been enabled to present us with an admirable picture of the social condition of Lofthouse and immediate district from the remote past to the present and as such it is a worthy and prizeable contribution to Yorkshire topography.

The bulk of the book is devoted to natural history and rural notes, extending over a number of years relating to the flora and fauna of the district; these are interspersed with wise and judicious remarks on the habits of birds, &c., along with rambles in Yorkshire containing antiquarian notices. To students of this branch they will no doubt be very welcome Mr. Roberts intimates his intention of issuing a supplementary volume, provided we presume the present undertaking proves a success, which we most heartily wish it may be, in every sense of the word.

SUDDEN DEATH AT ROTHWELL.

An inquest was held at the Black Bull Inn this afternoon, before Thomas Taylor, Esq., coroner, relative to the death of William Harrison, who expired at his own house on Wednesday, very suddenly.

Jane Harrison, wife of deceased, said her husband was 59 years of age; she had known him a long time; he had been subject to a violent pain at his chest when he exerted himself, and had been an out-patient at the Leeds Infirmary seven weeks.

While he was getting coals in, she left him to fetch the milk, and on returning at 10 minutes to 8, she found him in the house and being out of breath he said "sit you down, I see its touched you and if you've got as much as me you've got enough," he was sat in the arm chair at the time; she looked at him a minute after when he looked like death; he seemed to be choking, and his head dropped; she got Wm. Hartley, a neighbour, to come with some brandy but he was dead.

The above evidence was confirmed by Mary Davey, who said she saw deceased leaning against the wall after he had finished getting the coals in, as though exhausted.

The verdict returned was "Died from natural causes."

If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." THE WHISPERING GALLERY.

To take the position vacated by an able writer in a newspaper, when that position has been filled with skill and ingenuity, is no very easy task, yet such is the task now before the present writer.

Woodlesford Whispers have now become so firmly rooted in our little social system and so regularly looked for week by week that it requires no ordinary amount of courage on the part of the successor of the famous Ajax to set up an independent line of thought and observation.

The fact has been freely admitted on all sides that Ajax has given evidence of the possession of no small amount of shrewd judgment and sound common sense in dealing with the wide and varied range of topics which have from time to time occupied his attention, but at the same time while admitting the ability of the critic, there is little doubt that he has on frequent occasions overstepped the bounds of propriety and good feeling in his remarks and more especially in referring to personal matters. No very great objection can reasonably be taken to a good humoured joke made at the expense of an individual who would probably enjoy it as heartily as anyone else; but it can scarcely be deemed justifiable to single out a person for special prominence for the single reason of being able to say something ill-natured about him.

This class of writing may please a certain section of the public, but by the more right thinking portion, it can only be condemned and deemed unworthy of a place in a well regulated newspaper.

Let it at once be understood that it is not my intention to avoid all matters of a personal nature, certainly not; but I shall endeavour as far as possible to abstain from unnecessarily wounding the susceptibilities of nervously disposed readers.

Beyond an occasional reference to current topics, politics will not form any important part of the intended scope of these letters, as political discussions, when conducted by embryo village statesmen, are not usually distinguished by any very brilliant qualities on the part of those who take part in them, and when introduced into the columns of a newspaper, they only occupy space which might with advantage be devoted to better purpose.

General matters will, as has already been intimated, be dealt with when occasion arises, but special prominence will at all times be given to purely local questions always possessing the greatest interest for a village district.

Communications on local matters from anyone who may not be able to muster sufficient courage to publish them personally will always receive prompt attention provided they are of a sufficiently interesting character, and duly attested by the proper name and address of the writer, which will be received in the strictest confidence, and on no account will a name thus given be divulged to the public. These may be sent to me under cover of the Editor of the journal, but I do not in anywise promise always to use such communications.

Very probably some one is inclined to ask "How long is this fellow going to ramble on in this style?" and in order to give as little cause for complaint as possible, I will close the introductory part of my letter and at once take up my quarters in the Whispering Gallery and give the public the benefit of my sojourn therein.

The contents of the Rothwell Times of last week have furnished the text for some conversation in the neighbourhood.

THE Stourton Wesleyans are in high glee at the splendid result of their effort on Easter Tuesday and Wednesday, and I have heard some whispers as to the comparative ability of the Rothwell Church people and the fact that there has only been some £12 more realized by the great Fancy Fair attended by "the leading families of the district" than the little struggling dissenting society supported by "a few working men." This is not as it should be. Let my church friends bestir themselves, and show that blessed with this world's goods, they also know how to give of their substance.

THE Local Board Election has so filled the "Gallery" with its "hum" and "whiz" during the last fortnight or three weeks, that I have had to use all my forbearance to prevent its bursting all bounds and giving vent to some of the chat about.

I now that the election is over and Mr. Turner a long way a head of the three, the voices which rose highest during the election and in which I fully concurred have proved true, notwithstanding the unkindly wit and squib about that gentleman. For once, Mr. Ajax, you were out, and could I have been heard, my prognostications were correct. I have no doubt Mr. Turner will prove a useful member, and those who have said hard words about him will find him both agreeable and valuable.

Really, I should not have thought that Mr. Newsome would have gone back home on his bare marrow bones and asked pardon and forgiveness of the Association. Poor Prodigal, do you think they will receive you and put you up next time. Be a good boy; eat your humble pie and perhaps you may some day be perched up again as the society's nominee, but not yet.

Is that the very best poetry the teetotal band can produce. I can hear of the publicans "pulling a face" but its not at the playing; its the rhyming I wonder Mr. Editor could take it in at all, but I know he's a teetotaller and perhaps wanted to please them a bit. Anyhow the next verses he publishes should be a trifle better poetry than "A. C.'s."

Is it the name of Dr. Lamson which is heard in the air? Such is the case.

Is it not sickening to read the details respecting the forthcoming evidence of insanity which are doled out day by day in the papers? It is satisfactory to notice that Sir William Harcourt has at last expressed himself in no uncertain language when he announces that no further respite will be granted beyond the 28th instant, and stating that nothing which has yet been adduced can justify any interference with the sentence of the law. The fact that the friends and relations of the convict move in somewhat more refined society than do those of the general run of condemned murderers, affords no reason why the sentence should not be carried out, and yet it is really the only tangible reason for commutation which can be gathered from the movement on behalf of the prisoner. The very word seems to cause one's blood to curdle with horror, for what crime is more detestable or more cowardly; the poor unsuspecting victim having not the slightest chance of escape from the fatal trap which has been so coolly and deliberately laid.

THE cricket season of 1882 will be opened in earnest to-morrow. The Woodlesford club have to meet Garforth on the ground of the former, and it is very probable that the local players may win, as they will have the assistance of some of the members of the Brewery club, who do not take the field on their own account for a week or two later.

There is unfortunately but little ground to anticipate that the coming campaign will be a more successful one than the last, as in addition to the absence of new and youthful blood, there is reason to believe that more than one of last year's eleven will be absentees this year.

IT is intended in the course of these letters to deal with the several organisations in this locality, but in the absence of reliable information, at present it is not purposed to devote further space to the subject this week.

LOCAL cricketers will no doubt have observed the ugly rumours concerning two of the English team now en route from Australia, which have appeared in the newspapers during the present week. It appears betting is at the bottom of the affair as was the case when Lord Harris's eleven visited the colonies. The morality of Englishmen must have fallen to a very low degree, when it is possible for two of our most popular cricketers to become guilty of such a dishonourable and despicable act, as to sell their side in an international match, at the bidding of a few unscrupulous blacklegs. It is to be hoped if the rumours prove to be correct as it is greatly to be feared they will, that the severest possible punishment may be meted out to the offenders, and that they will be henceforth marked out from their fellows, and banished from the cricket grounds of their native land as unworthy of the name of Englishmen, and let them seek recompense at the dirty hands of their paymasters, the blacklegs of Australia.

CAN it be correct that there are people in Rothwell, enlightened Rothwell, 'who don't want the railway, and have signed against it?' Nay, more wonderful still, I hear that even Carlton people have put their hands to a petition for the purpose of opposing the Bill. It is time we had some illuminating agent which would affect the minds of people, and bring them to see what is to their own advantage. Are we to remain shut up, shut out from the world any longer. The millennium they say, is coming directly, and Rothwell got no railway. For goodness' sake, let us hurry on, or else we shall be forgotten, and shant' get a taste of it at all.

THE Railway meeting on Tuesday has been kept very quiet, and the connection between the Mechanics' and the 'Gallery' was ordered to be hermetically sealed. However I heard a gentleman asking another if he would be prepared to take shares in the East and West Yorkshire Union Railway, so I guess things are becoming rather hot, and they must have got the hen and eggs into pretty good condition, as they are beginning to count chickens.

WE are promised this week the second of the series of articles on 'Our Village Churches.' There has already been a considerable amount of conjecture as to the authorship of the first paper, and most surmises point in the direction of two gentlemen, but whether these guesses may be correct or otherwise is not of great consequence, so long as they are written in the same able style which characterised the first of the series. It would not be advisable for the author to manifest a partial spirit in dealing with his subject, as such a course would rob the series of half its value, church matters are always a touchy subject of discussion, and it is necessary in reviewing such matters to exercise a very rare discretion in order to steer clear of the charge of unfairness; and it is to be hoped that the author of the papers under notice will be able to keep to the happy medium.

IT has been freely stated that the discontinuance of the weekly letter of 'Ajax' would cause a falling off in the circulation of the Rothwell Times in the Woodlesford district, but the present writer begs the public to pause before deciding upon that point, and to give him a chance of making friends with them if possible.

THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have their skins blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. The more delicate the skin the quicker its ruin. THE ALBION MILK AND SULPHUR SOAP is the purest, the whitest, and most purifying of all soaps, by its purifying action taking away and preventing all pimples, blotches, and roughness. It is recommended by the entire medical profession as the most elegant preparation for the skin that is known. A boon to sensitive skins. FLORILINE!—FOR THE TEETH AND BREATH.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the teeth a peculiar pearly-whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke, "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s. 6d., of all Chemists and Perfumers. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, LIMITED.

THE scheme to amalgamate the two Italian operatic houses of London, and to concentrate this form of entertainment within the walls of Covent Garden is about to be brought forward under the most favorable auspices. Practical men of business have taken the matter in hand, plans have been fully discussed, and the details of the prospectus well digested. Some of the highest personages of social life have expressed their acquiescence in the scheme which has already been supported by the promise of large sums of money by intending shareholders. Another Season has paved the way for the accomplishment of the views of those who believe amalgamation the best course to pursue in the interests of both enterprises. It is an open secret that the Italian Opera Season last year at her Majesty's Theatre was not a success, nor did Mr. Mapleson care to risk an Italian Season in the autumn. It has been thought better that Mr. Mapleson, reinforced by certain members of the splendid troupe of Covent Garden, shall confine his energy to the United States, where his experience of American affairs will be at the service of the Royal Italian Opera Company, Covent Garden (Limited). Freed from the limited competition of Her Majesty's Theatre, the whole staff of the Italian Opera singers, and the entire body of Italian Opera goers will be drawn towards Covent Garden, the Prospectus of which house for the forthcoming Season includes the names of the most attractive artists the Italian Operatic Stage can boast. Competition has always been disastrous to Italian Opera, both commercially and from the point of view of art. A large amount has been already subscribed to the Opera Company, Limited, and the Directors have now decided to issue the Prospectus to the public. The Scheme promises to pay from 11 to 15 per cent., and may be worth the consideration of every class of investor, small and large.

THE PROPOSED RAILWAY.

On Tuesday, Mr. W. H. Leatham, M.P. for the South West Riding, presented a numerously signed petition from East and West Ardsley in favour of the East and West Yorkshire Union Railway Bill, the Countess of Cardigan, Lord Campbell, and other trustees of the Cardigan estate heading the document; almost every owner of property in the neighbourhood signed the petition

Also, yesterday Mr. Leatham presented petitions from Rothwell Local Board, from the inhabitants of Rothwell, Rothwell Haigh, and Royds Green, and from the residents of Lofthouse and Carlton in favour of the Bill.

The committee on the Bill was expected to have commenced sitting on Monday, but it will probably be a week or a fortnight later than that date. The committee will consider several bills closely connected with ours on Tuesday next; the Church Fenton, Cawood and Wistow Extension, which runs to Drax; the Great Northern line from Batley to Cleckheaton, which, joining the East and West Yorkshire Union Railway, will form a direct line from Ardsley to the Spen Valley; the Hull and Barnsley Extension, from Felkirk, by Crigglestone, etc., opening out the Flockton coal fields to the South Yorkshire masters for more direct access to Huddersfield and Halifax. These all more or less seriously affect the weal or disadvantage of the line, and the result of the application for these powers will be watched with interest by most people in this neighbourhood. We are glad to find the prospects of the East and West Yorkshire line still bright, and everything points to its final success. The evidence on its behalf is unusually weighty, and, as we stated last week, some heavy opposition has already been removed. We are sure we echo the feeling of an overwhelming majority when we express the hope that other gentlemen in the neighbourhood will cordially and generously come to some arrangement with the promoters, whereby the further expense and unpleasantness of opposition to a public benefit will be saved, and the hearty thanks of the people of Rothwell and neighbourhood earned, and secured for many years.

By the handsome list of contributions for preliminary expenses, and the thousands of signatures which have been put to the petition in its favour, there can now be no doubt whatever, that our people are in earnest for the accomplishment of this line, if possible, and if unhappily this effort should fail, we shall have so impressed the railway public with our desire for improved means of communication as will bring about some other plan for connection with existing lines. At present, however, there is no other railway scheme for our benefit which in any way will compare so favorably as the one in which we are now working, taking all things together, and with "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether," the thing will not fail for want of interest and support.

HUNSLET BOARD OF GUARDIANS.—The newly appointed Board of Guardians of this Union held their first meeting yesterday. Mr. John Swales was re-elected chairman; Mr. Thomas Stenson, first vice-chairman; and Mr. James Hargreaves, second vice-chairman. The various committees were appointed—Mr. Swales was appointed chairman of the Assessment Committee; Mr. John Dixon, chairman of the Workhouse Visiting Committee; Mr. Thomas Stenson, chairman of the Vaccination Committee; Mr. John Parker, chairman of the Finance Committee; and Mr. John Graveley, chairman of the School Attendance Committee.

LOCAL BOARD MEETING.

The first meeting of the new Board took place on Monday present—Messrs. W. Hargreaves, J. Holmes, J. Hargreaves, John Oliver, S. Bramley, J. Batty, J Sanderson, J. Turner, and the clerk, treasurer, and inspector.

Mr. Holmes, as returning officer, having taken the chair, the new members took the usual declaration, as to qualification, after which, Mr. Holmes invited some one to propose a gentleman as chairman of the Board for the ensuing year.

Mr. Oliver rose and expressed his pleasure in moving that Mr. Joseph Charlesworth who had so ably presided during the past be again elected chairman of the Board. He hoped at the same time that they might have the pleasure of his presence more frequently. Mr. Holmes had great pleasure in seconding the resolution Mr. Sanderson also supported it; Mr. Charlesworth was a good chairman, but he would be a much better one if he could attend oftener. The motion was very heartily carried.

The chairman of the meeting having invited a motion for the post of vice-chairman. Mr. Batty proposed Mr. W Hargreaves for that office; however good Mr. Charlesworth was as chairman, they lost nothing in Mr. Hargreaves as vice-chairman. Mr Bramley had pleasure in seconding the motion, which was unanimously carried. Mr. Hargreaves briefly but cordially thanked the members for the honour they had done him in electing him vice-chairman.

The Clerk reported that the cost of the election was £16 13 6, a cheque for which was passed, on the motion of Mr. Bramley and Mr. J. Hargreaves.

The Board then proceeded to the appointment of Committees as follows.

HIGHWAY COMMITTEE.—Proposed by Mr. J. Hargreaves that Messrs. W. Hargreaves, Sanderson, Oliver, and Holmes form the Highway Committee. Mr. Bramley seconded on the condition that one of these gentlemen undertake the Rothwell part. After conversation, Mr. James Hargreaves understood that the whole Committee were responsible for the whole of the roads; and Mr. Holmes thought he had visited Royds Green as often as anyone. Mr. W. Hargreaves said he would look after Rothwell. Mr. Oliver was willing to give way for Mr. Turner to take his place, an amendment which Mr. Batty seconded.—On being put there voted for the amendment Messrs. Oliver, Batty, and Turner.

For the resolution, Messrs. Sanderson, W. Hargreaves Jas. Hargreaves and Bramley. Mr. Holmes neutral.

COMPENSATION.—Proposed by Mr. J. Hargreaves seconded, by Mr Batty and carried: That Messrs. W Hargreaves, Oliver, Holmes and Sanderson form the Compensation Committee.

The Treasurer to the Board was re-appointed, on the same terms as before.

ROTHWELL SEWAGE.—Mr. Jowett, clerk of works, read details of the work during the past four weeks, from which it appears 470 yards of 9 inch, and 120 yards of 12 inch drain pipes have been laid in Commercial Street, Holmes Street, Church Street, and Woodlesford Lane, 18 yards of 15 inch iron pipes have also been laid in the "beck," while there have been 6 shafts and 8 lamp holes made in the above named streets.

In reply to the chairman, Mr. Jowitt expressed a hope that the men might be out of Butcher Lane this week, but remarked that the rock they had to go through was very strong, and progress was very slow on that account. As this lane is a great thoroughfare and is very narrow, it was hoped that it would be re-opened for traffic as speedily as possible.

Complaints having again been made as regards the dirty and dangerous state of Carlton Lane, the clerk of works said that the stones from the wall near the footpath had been removed from the path, but that as soon as they were taken off, he found them thrown down again, and was in a difficulty what to do. It was resolved that Mr. Jowitt have power to summons the owners of the wall in question.

Mr. J. Hargreaves, in regard to Mr Abbishaw's property, asked when it would be possible to get the houses connected with the main drain. Mr Jowitt thought that when Butcher Lane was finished and the iron pipes across the "beck" were put in, the connections could then be proceeded with. Some bad pieces of road having been pointed out, the clerk of works was instructed to get Mr. Brayshaw to put them in repair.

Mr. Bramley hoped the Board would protect the contractors as far as possible; he was, however, reminded by the chairman, that while the Board might assist their contractors by protection, they (the contractors) were responsible for the work for 12 months after completion.

Mr. Parkinson having granted certificates for ordinary and extra work done by Mr. Brayshaw, a cheque for £286 10s 2d was granted, on the motion of Mr. J. Hargreaves and Mr. Bramley.

Mrs. Nichols wrote, complaining of the state of the Paddock road; but the chairman thought, as did the members, that the contractors had made a very nice job of it for the present, and the clerk was instructed to reply to that effect.

COMPENSATION.—The clerk asked for a special meeting to consider the owners' rights in regard to the damage done by sewage works. Mr. Holmes explained the position of Mr. Haley (valuer for the Board), having visited the various properties before, he during and after the pipes had been laid, had formed his calculations on personal observations. Other valuers had only been able to reckon from the statements made to them; and Mr. Haley desired to have the instructions of the Board on the special cases to be considered. After some conversation, it was decided to adjourn the present meeting, at its close, to Thursday evening.

CO-OPERATIVE STORES.—The clerk had received a letter from the secretary of the Leeds Industrial Co-operative Society, stating the wish of the Society to commence building as soon as possible, and asking the Board to remove a portion of the rubbish on the site, and also to curb and level the new footpath as proposed on the plan. Mr. J. Hargreaves, the chairman, and Mr. Turner both intimated that they had been requested to urge immediate attention to the subject On the motion of Mr. Holmes, seconded by Mr. J. Hargreaves, the Highway Committee were desired to have the work carried out at once.

HEALTH REPORT.—Dr. Glaister, medical officer to the Board, having entered the room, proceeded to read his monthly report as follows:—

To the chairman and members of the Rothwell Local Board.

Gentlemen,

During the last four weeks we have had registered in the district twenty-two births, twelve male and ten female; eleven deaths, seven male and four female. During the corresponding period of last year there were thirteen births and four deaths. The causes of death were 1 male, 1 year, bronchitis following measles; 1 female, 7 years, congestion of the brain, following measles; 1 male, 1 year, bronchitis, following measles; 1 female, 3 years, scarletina; 1 male, 12 years, scarletina; 1 male, 2 years, convulsions; 1 male, 5 years, tubercular peritonitis, 1 female, 72 years, senectus; 1 male, 75 years, cerebral softening; 1 male, 6 days, inanition; 1 female, 36 hours, premature birth. Of these it will be noticed 2 are over 75 years of age, and two under 7 days. Of the remaining 7 cases, 5 are due to zymotic disease, 3 deaths being indirectly caused by measles and 2 by scarlet fever. The two fatal cases of fever occurred in the same house. Since my last attendance before the Board, 2 fresh cases of scarletina have occurred. The number of cases of measles has steadily decreased during the last fortnight, and at present I am aware of only a very few cases in the district. Scarlet fever is not so far spreading rapidly, but as I have had during the last few days two children in the same house in whom scarlet fever became developed on the evening of the same day they had been at school, the danger of the disease becoming epidemic has certainly not passed over. One of the two cases previously mentioned has been very mild in character, and as the patient is now convalescent the houses will be disinfected in a few days.

JOHN GLAISTER, M D.
Medical Officer of Health.

He said that measles were dying out, and that there were no fresh cases of scarlet fever. He, however, stated that sometimes this disease is only manifested by sore throat, and that even this may be the means of spreading the epidemic of scarlet fever.

Mr. Turner enquired the meaning of the word "inanition," as mentioned in the report, and the Doctor explained that the child was only able to breathe with difficulty from the first, and that there was not sufficient vital power to continue life. Dr. Glaister also described the meaning of tubercular peritonitis as a deposit of tubercles in the intestines

The reading of the minutes of last meeting having been overlooked by reason of the order of the present meeting being out of the ordinary course, the clerk now read the minutes of last meeting and committee meetings, which were approved on the motion of Mr. J. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Batty. Mr. Bramley neutral.

ROYDS GREEN WATER SUPPLY.—In accordance with a resolution of last meeting, that Mr. Sanderson should ascertain if the Royds Green people would be willing to pay a water rent of 15s. a year, that gentleman now stated that he had made enquiries and found that they could pay 10s; there were about half a dozen houses inhabited by Messrs. Charlesworth's employe's which were well supplied, and declined to pay, so that the number of persons requiring water would be about 40.

After some remarks by the chairman and by Mr. Batty, Mr. Holmes proposed that the matter be properly gone into by the Waterworks Committee. He did not think it ought to be brought before the Board until reported on by the committee. There were other parties that had as much right to be considered as Royds' Green, and he moved that the Waterworks Committee go into the whole question. Mr. J. Hargreaves held there was a difference between Royds' Green and the other parties referred to; there were a good number of houses at Royds Green and the Board having undertaken the work, they could hardly turn back now.

Mr. Oliver seconded Mr. Holmes' proposition, which was carried; Mr. J. Hargreaves neutral.

Mr. Turner asked, as a new member, where it was proposed to place the tank and how the people were to obtain the water. The chairman explained that it was intended to make the tank near the keeper's house, and that the people would have to fetch the water.

HIGHWAYS.—Letters were read from Messrs. Marsden and Williams acknowledging the clerk's explanation; and from Mr. Hick, solicitor, enclosing his account, which was ordered to be sent to the taxing master.

The chairman remarked that the Board's roller being broken, they should at once have it repaired; they were now having to pay 7s. 6d. for each day they used the Lofthouse and Carlton roller. The surveyor was accordingly instructed to have the roller repaired at once.

ROAD SCRAPINGS.—It was proposed by Mr. J. Hargreaves, that an advertisement be inserted in the Rothwell Times inviting tenders for the removal of road scrapings for the next four months. Mr. Bramley suggested to advertise for removal of scrapings till the end of the year. Mr. Sanderson seconded Mr. Hargreaves' motion, which was carried. Mr. Turner being neutral.

FINANCE.—The collector had received, and paid over to the treasurer during the fortnight as below:—

Stallage	1	8	6
	£2	8	6

GAS BILL.—Mr. Turner gave notice that at next meeting, he should move that the Board do oppose the Bill of the Rothwell

Gas Light Company, Limited, when it comes before the House of Lords.

The various committees appointed their own chairman as follows:—Highways, Mr. J. Hargreaves; Finance, Mr. Oliver; Waterworks, Mr. Batty; Byelaws and Slaughter-houses, Mr. Turner; Compensation, Mr. Sanderson.

On the motion of the chairman, seconded by Mr. Bramley, the Board then adjourned to Thursday (yesterday) at 6 o'clock.

At the adjourned meeting held last night, all the members were present, Mr. Charlesworth in the chair.

The subject of compensation to owners for damage done by sewage works was thoroughly gone into.

Mr. Bramley's motion to close the meetings not later than 8 o'clock was lost.

In accordance with Mr. Turner's notice on Monday, he now proposed that a special meeting of the Board be held on Wednesday, May 10th, to consider the advisability of opposing the Bill being promoted by the Rothwell Gas Light Co. when brought before the House of Lords. Seconded by Mr. Batty and carried by the votes of Messrs. Sanderson, Holmes, Bramley and Oliver.

LOFTHOUSE SCHOOL BOARD.

The usual monthly meeting was held at Robin Hood School, on Wednesday night, the members present were Mr. T. Oliver, (chairman); Messrs. James Armitage and Wm. Keightley, with Mr. Lee, the clerk, and Mr. Denton, attendance officer.

The amount received for the past month for fees are Robin Hood School, £14 12s. 1d. Carlton, £12 4s. 1d.; books sold, £1 6s. 11d. and 10s. from the managers of the Penny Bank for use of room.

Cheques were signed for teachers' salaries and cleaning, £32 17s. 4d.; builder's account for repairs of schools, £9 8s. 0d., and £7 1s. 0d. for coal for the quarter. An application for remission of fees was made and granted. The attendance at the schools during the past two or three weeks has not been so good owing to sickness, such as measles, etc. among the children. The Board desire the clerk to ask for tenders for whitewashing and cleaning the schools to be done during the Whit-suntide holidays.

OUTWOOD BURIAL BOARD.

The first meeting of this Board since the annual election was held at the Board-room, on Tuesday night. Eight members out of nine attended, viz:—Messrs. John Barstow, C. Sidwell, Henry Ashton, George Wharam, George Teesdale, Enos Wright, Herbert Ashton, and Wm. Littlewood, with the clerk (Mr. J. H. Lee.) Mr. Barstow was elected chairman for the ensuing year, and Mr. G. Wharam vice-chairman. Six members were also appointed a committee to see after the grounds being kept in order, and to make any alterations necessary. On the motion of Mr. Sidwell, seconded by Mr. Wharam, a call was made upon the overseers for £140, to be paid by the 1st October next. This is the same amount as last year; most of this amount is required for payment of principal and interest on the amount borrowed for the purchase and laying out of the cemetery at first. Mr. Henry Ashton complained that the hours for giving notice for interments, viz:—10 to 4, was not sufficient, stating that those hours were very inconvenient, especially to working people. In accordance with his previous notice, he moved that the hours in future should be from ten o'clock in the forenoon to six o'clock in the evening; this was seconded by Mr. Enos Wright, and carried unanimously. Mr. W. Littlewood remarked that children and others when there was a funeral, ran all over the graves and flower beds, and complained of their plucking the flowers, the clerk stated that the police in future would attend when there was a funeral, and keep the people out of the cemetery.

WESLEYAN SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNUAL MEETING.

On Wednesday the annual tea meeting in connection with the Rothwell Wesleyan Sunday School was held, a number of teachers, scholars and friends sitting down to tea at five o'clock in the school-room. After tea, an adjournment was made to the chapel, when a public meeting was commenced shortly before seven o'clock, the Rev. C. A. Collingwood in the chair. Singing and prayer having been engaged in, Mr. Collingwood expressed his pleasure in being present in the somewhat unusual character of chairman, and spoke of his interest in Sunday School work.

Mr. Jas. Ellis, secretary, then read a report for the year, shewing the number of scholars to be 244, with an average attendance of 120 morning, 156 afternoon, 37 members of society. There is no sickness, but one death has occurred during the year. There are 55 officers and teachers, of whom 50 are members of Society; only an average attendance of 18 morning, 22 afternoon, which was deplored as very low. The school has lost one teacher (James Young) by death, and two (Mrs. Batty and Geo. Flowers) by removal to other lands. The library contains 610 volumes, but the number of readers (57) is very small.

Addresses were given by the following teachers: Messrs. Marshall, Butterick, J. Gibson, J. Goodall, Ledgard, W. Batty, and J. R. Seanor.

After a hymn had been sung, the scholars who had made the highest number of attendances during the year were presented with a neatly bound Bible or Hymn book.

The highest number possible is of course 104, and it was observed from the attendance list that two boys, Joseph Rawling and Joseph Jackson, have not been once late or absent all the year. Rawling also gained that honorable distinction at the late distribution of prizes at the Board schools.

The Rev. chairman gave some excellent advice to those receiving prizes, and during the evening, frequently interpolated remarks of a fresh and appropriate description.

The meeting closed about 9 o'clock.

As a safe, permanent and warranted cure of Pimples, Scrofula, Scurvy, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases and Sores of all kinds, we can with confidence recommend CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE. Sold by Chemists everywhere.

ROTHWELL LIBERAL ASSOCIATION.

On Tuesday evening a public tea and entertainment was given in the Mechanics' Institute under the auspices of the above Association, when a good number of persons sat down to tea, the after meeting being largely attended.

Shortly after seven o'clock, several of the prominent members of the Association mounted the platform, and Mr. J. Turner, president of the Society, took the chair.

The Harmonic Glee Party introduced the programme by singing "Oh, bounteous May," after which Mr. Turner stated that one object of the meeting was to testify the thanks of the Association to the friends at Stourton, who had by canvassing assisted in obtaining the victory at the recent Local Board election, by inviting them to tea. Mr. B. Batty had very great pleasure in proposing a vote of thanks to the Stourton friends, for their assistance in the late election. A second object of the meeting was to congratulate Mr. Turner on his return as a member of the Board. In thanking all who had laboured for this end, especially the Stourton friends, he had no doubt that when Mr. Turner had an opportunity of helping the Stourton people on the Board he would do so. He hoped Mr. Turner's services would be appreciated, and that he would have a happy three years, and at the end of that term, be again returned.

Mr. W. Batty, as one of the visitors to Stourton, had special pleasure in seconding the vote of thanks to the Stourton friends, and in bearing witness to their valuable assistance. They never had a more popular man than their present newly elected member.

The resolution was heartily carried, Mr. Turner presenting the vote of thanks both on behalf of himself and all the Rothwell friends.

Miss B. Hampson then sang "Come, birdie come," in her best style.

Mr. W. Batty followed with a reading in the Yorkshire dialect entitled "Widder Black."

Mr. Stansfield, of Hunslet, next gave an amusing reading entitled "A Dutchman in a fix," and his pleasure that he "vas heear too-night." Another reading was loudly demanded and given.

The Glee Party next sang "The three chafers," followed by a 'Temperance Oration' by Mr. A. Batty; this was so applauded that he was forced to give his reading on 'Mother Hubbard.'

Messrs. Brown and Harrison very carefully and pleasingly rendered the duet "All's well."

Mr. J. Turner then addressed those present, and said it was no secret that their present meeting was in consequence of the late Local Board election. For several years the Liberal Association had run a candidate for the Board, and had always succeeded. They did this not so much because of any complaint against the Board in its ordinary work, but to maintain their representative power. The aim of the association was to support truth and right, and to shew the church and conservative party they should not have all their own way. They desired to emancipate public opinions from the influence of conservatism and the church party in the village; and he believed the Rothwell Association was doing as much in this way as any similar organisation in the county. Referring to the election and the three liberal candidates, he had to congratulate the Association on the result. He was pleased beyond everything when Mr. Newsome came to the Association and held out his hand, and he hoped all the members would receive him, and let bygones be bygones; he thought they ought to thank Mr. Newsome for coming back again. The Association was never stronger in members and finances than to-day. As regards the other candidate, he was supported by conservative and church people. After references to the late dispute between himself and the Mechanics' Institute, he again congratulated those present on the result of their efforts.

The Harmonic Glee party then gave in splendid style "Comrades in arms" the difficult and delicate portions of the glee being well and firmly held by the several parts concerned.

Mr. B. Batty next read a "Southern sermon" thus concluding the entertainment.

Mr. Jas. Batty came forward to move a vote of thanks to the ladies, which he did in his usual amusing and hearty manner. He warmly congratulated Mr. Turner on the way in which he had conducted the meeting, and for his nice, able speech. They had met to celebrate a glorious victory and to thank the people for the 532 votes given to their candidate. The Association never stood better than it does now, and he looked forward to the time when they would take all before them.

Mr. Jos. Harrison, in seconding the vote, thanked the working-men of Rothwell and Stourton for their help, they had always assisted when asked. If the Association made the same progress during the next 20 years that it had in the past 5 years, they would teach the aristocracy that they were resolved to have a fair representation in the country. They purposed watching both national and local questions, and if their interests were not properly attended to on the Local Board, they would send other men who would attend to them. He reminded Mr. Turner that if he forgot his promise to watch their interests, they would turn him off the same as they had Mr. Newsome.

Mr. W. Batty proposed that the best thanks of the meeting be also given to the Harmonic Glee Party for their very kind and excellent services.

Mr. Hampson cordially seconded the motion.

The chairman then put both motions, adding his own testimony to the performances of the singers.

Mr. B. Batty moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Turner for presiding so ably and well.

Mr. Newsome said he had not the slightest objection to seconding the resolution. After referring to the kind manner in which his name had been mentioned, he expressed his pleasure that Mr. Turner had been returned; he had shewn himself a good chairman, and he had always said he would make a good member. He had pleasure in seconding the vote of thanks. He had no objection to having a little holiday; he knew this, that if a member did his duty properly, he would have plenty of work. In the course of his address Mr. Newsome claimed in some measure to have helped Mr. Turner, by shewing that had he (Mr. Newsome) not come out, Mr. Lockwood might have taken all his votes and thereby got a larger number of votes than Mr. Turner (cries of No no).

Mr. Jas. Batty, in putting the motion, asked where they would have been if they had had the ballot, and the Liberals had not split? ('at the top of the tree.' The vote was carried with acclamation, after which the Glee Party sang another piece, and the National Anthem.

We must say that the singing was done in a capital manner, and great pains is evidently being taken by our Rothwell young men to attain something like perfection.

CONFIRMATION AT ROTHWELL.

Yesterday afternoon, Bishop Ryan, as representing the Bishop of Ripon, visited Rothwell for the purpose of holding a confirmation service for the parishes of Rothwell, Oulton, Woodlesford, Methley, Lofthouse and Middleton. Some time before the hour announced for commencing the service, the capacious edifice was filled, the pews on either side of the centre aisle being occupied by those who were to be confirmed, the females wearing light or black dresses, with the usual confirmation head-dress.

The early part of the service was conducted by the vicar, the Rev. G. Heberden, after which the Bishop addressed those who were to take part in the solemn ceremony on "Walking with God," his text being "Can two walk together, except they be agreed," Amos III., 3. Having declared that by the help and grace of God, men are able to walk with God every day, the Bishop proceeded to define the dispositions of mind necessary for this purpose; faith in God and in His word; humility, shewn from a sense of sin and unworthiness; confirmation of promises previously made; moral courage, or a resolve to commence a change of life; integrity in our dealings with others, and progress and perseverance in well doing. The life and character of Joseph was given as an example of God's constant presence with those that trust in him. The Bishop then turned to the II Chronicles, XV, 2, and read the text which he would like them to associate with the service of to-day, "The Lord is with you, while ye be with him," as a promise that God would walk with them as long as they kept in his ways. The means whereby the walk should be sustained were then impressed on the young people; prayer, reading of the Bible, regular attendance at God's house, and communicating at the Lord's Supper.

The ceremony of confirmation was then proceeded with, about 20 bowing at the altar at a time, while the usual prayer was offered and the episcopal hands laid on the kneeling confirmatories. Each group was attended by the clergymen present, viz., the Rev. G. Heberden, vicar, and Rev. J. C. Lees, curate of Rothwell; Hon. and Rev. P. Y. Savile, vicar, and Rev. J. Ripley, curate, of Methley; Rev. R. H. Hamilton, Oulton; Rev. A. J. Irvin, Woodlesford; Rev. F. J. Miller, Middleton; Rev. R. Chadwick, Lofthouse. The following is the list of those confirmed: Rothwell, 22 males, 35 females; Methley 27 males, 26 females; Oulton, 17 males, 29 females; Middleton, 10 males, 10 females; Woodlesford, 6 males, 5 females; Lofthouse, 5 males, 5 females; total 197.

An old lady, aged 84, among the number, was led by Mr. Ripley to the altar, such an aged attender at the confirmation being almost unprecedented.

EXECUTION OF DR. LAMSON, THIS MORNING.

Dr. Lamson, sentenced to death for the murder of his brother-in-law, Percy John, was executed at Wandsworth Prison at nine o'clock this morning.

The culprit walked to the scaffold with tolerable firmness, but with the dejected air of a man who fully realised his awful position, and seemed decidedly nervous when beneath the fatal noose.

Marwood quickly adjusted the cap and rope, and then drew the bolt.

Death was almost instantaneous.

The unhappy man made a full confession of his guilt yesterday, both to his wife, and on paper before the officials of the prison.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may be secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and cheap compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

MARRIAGE OF THE DUKE OF ALBANY.

The marriage of the Duke of Albany with Princess Helen took place yesterday in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, and the ceremonial on the occasion was of the most imposing nature, the arrangements for the celebration being of the most elaborate kind, and the presence of Royal and distinguished personages investing the proceedings with unusual interest. The Royal procession to St George's Chapel left the castle shortly before twelve o'clock, the Queen being accompanied by Princess Beatrice and Princess Victoria of Hesse. The ceremony was performed shortly after one o'clock by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

LECTURE ON GARFIELD.—In connection with the Primitive Methodist Chapel at Carlton, the Rev P Nume delivered a well prepared and very interesting lecture on Monday evening in the above chapel on 'From the log hut to the White House, or good President Garfield.' The chair was taken at 7 o'clock by Mr. Mr. Jos. Ward, and there was a large audience, who subscribed to a collection at the close of the meeting. In the afternoon of the same day a tea meeting took place, which was also well attended. The result of the tea and lecture will be handed over to the treasurer of the Building Fund.

THE WHISPERING GALLERY.

WEDNESDAY the 19th instant was the anniversary of the death of the late Earl of Beaconsfield, and the graceful suggestion to the public, to do honour to the memory of the departed statesman, by wearing primroses on that day, was taken up very readily throughout the country. In the streets of Leeds nearly every third person met with carried one or more of the blossoms of the delicate floral gem which had been the Earl's favourite flower, and it would indeed be difficult to imagine a happier or more graceful method of keeping green the memory of one who, despite his faults, was one of the nation's brightest ornaments, and it is greatly to be desired, that the practice now set on foot, may for many years be observed. Those who perused the two Leeds daily papers on the following morning, must have been struck with the contradictory nature of the reference to "Primrose Day" contained therein. The Yorkshire Post spoke of the enormous demand for primroses in the metropolis, and the very large number of people to be seen wearing the flower; while the Leeds Mercury stated that few people in London appeared to have noticed the day in the manner mentioned, and the writer of the generally excellent Politics and Society paragraphs could not avoid giving vent to an ill-mannered sneer on the occasion. Surely partisanship need not be carried to such lengths as this.

It is said that the application of the Rothwell Gas Light Company for Parliamentary powers passed the committee last Tuesday as an unopposed Bill.

THEY say there's nothing goes down in Yorkshire like "teas" but surely we are having too much of a good thing now. News of a tea at Carlton last Monday, on Tuesday the great liberal feast at Rothwell, Wednesday the Wesleyan Sunday School tea. Next week rumours come of several others. Can't some other style of thing be got up for a change?

OULTON Church and its service was re-viewed in these columns last week and in the same able style as was evinced when Swillington was dealt with. The writer might with advantage have insisted more strongly upon the horrible uniformity which prevails in the matter of headstones in the church yard. Anything more uniformly ugly, inartistic, monotonous, and depressing than the stereotyped triple crowned stones in use at Oulton, would be difficult to conceive; they give one the impression that some cobbler, tailor or chimney sweep, in fact anyone rather than an architect or monumental artist, had been commissioned to prepare the original design.

ROTHWELL is getting into high favour on the Board of Guardians. Out of its three representatives, one (Mr. Swales) is re-elected as chairman and no better or more suitable man could be found on the Board for that office; another gentleman, Mr. James Hargreaves is appointed vice-chairman, a very excellent selection too. Mr. Parker has also been placed at the head of the Finance Committee. It has often been asked, what do the Guardians do with the money collected. How is it there are no statements or reports of meetings. How many people are supported in each township, and what they cost? Perhaps one of our representatives would say!

THE Rothwell Debating Society has recently concluded a very successful and instructive session and the members have dispersed for a summer's holiday. The wish expressed by Mr. B. Batty that the rule prohibiting political discussions might be abrogated and politics included in the Society's field of operations was scarcely a wise one, as it is an established rule in nearly all such societies that politics shall not be touched upon, and the rule always works well, as by this means the atmosphere of the debating room is kept clear from the heat which is invariably engendered by political discussions. There are plenty of chances for an aspiring village politician to distinguish himself, and air, his eloquence before admiring followers, without infringing on the ground legitimately belonging to general questions. Neither would it be advisable to establish a Parliamentary Debating Society at Rothwell. Such a society could never be formed without inflicting considerable injury on the present Society, as the number of people in a village who take an interest in debating in its practical form is not large enough, neither is the average educational, intellectual, or political ability of villagers usually of a sufficiently high standard to render political debates either instructive or interesting.

Mr. H. Drew's suggestion that a Volunteer Rifle Corps should be formed at Rothwell has much in it to commend it to the favour of the local public. A Rifle Corps at Rothwell would undoubtedly prove an acquisition to the neighbourhood, and it is sincerely to be hoped that Mr. Drew's suggestion will not be allowed to fall out of sight, but that it may bear good fruit ere long. An attempt was made some years ago to start a Corps at Oulton, and a sufficient number of young men came forward as desirous to join the movement, but a difficulty was experienced in procuring officers to head the Corps; but one would think that such an obstacle, if even it was found to exist in the Rothwell scheme, might be easily surmounted as there are several young gentlemen of high position and influence in the district who might probably be induced to identify themselves with such a movement. The acquisition of a suitable ground for rifle practice would perhaps be another difficult question, in a district so cut up by roads and footpaths as this, but it would not be absolutely necessary to have a rifle range more than 600 yards in length, as it is not probable that any marksmen from Rothwell would be very likely to get into the first "sixty" in the opening stage of the Queen's Prize competition at Wimbledon and so require to compete at the longer distances. No doubt a piece of ground might be found for the purpose, but the establishment of the Corps is the first step to be taken and the best way of getting at something definite is to invite some gentlemen connected with the Rifle Corps in Leeds to come to Rothwell and explain the business to a meeting of young men specially convened for the purpose at the Mechanics' Institute, the large room of which would be a very suitable place wherein to have drill meetings during winter.

IT was rumoured in Leeds this week that Mr. Calverley had withdrawn his petition against the Railway Bill. Though it is feared only a rumour, people hope the truth is "casting its shadows before."

QUID NUNC.

MR. NEWSOME AND "QUID NUNC."

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

'Quid nunc' would have the readers of the Rothwell Times imagine Mr. Newsome had 'gone back home,' meaning, if he means anything, to the Liberal Association, 'on his knees asking pardon and forgiveness' for standing as candidate at the late election.

If Quid Nunc knows anything, he knows his insinuation to be false and slanderous. Mr. Newsome does not practice going on his knees, he believes in a manly stand on his feet, eyes open. 'Quid Nunc' is much more likely to be a marrow bone kneeler to mundane power or ethereal myth. Catch the intellectual sturdy butterman at Butcher Lane corner on his knees asking pardon of anyone when he thinks he is in the right, and I'll show you 'Quid nunc' on his belly licking the dust of a 'meeting house' floor in the presence of a

WILL O' THE WISP.

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 7½d. and 1s 1½d., labelled "JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received: "Gentlemen,—it may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, L.R.C.P.E., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—Diseases of the skin, ringworm, scurvy, scorbutic eruptions and swellings, sore heads, and the most inveterate skin disease to which the human frame is subject, cannot be treated with a more easy and reliable remedy than Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which act so peculiarly on the constitution and so purify the blood, that those diseases are at once eradicated from the system, and a lasting cure obtained. They are equally efficacious in the cure of excoriations, burns, scalds, glandular swellings, ulcerous wounds, rheumatism and contracted and stiffened joints. These medicines operate mildly but surely. The cures effected by them are not temporary or apparent only, but complete and permanent.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa: "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoas? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles.

THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, LIMITED.

THE scheme to amalgamate the two Italian operatic houses of London, and to concentrate this form of entertainment within the walls of Covent Garden is about to be brought forward under the most favorable auspices. Practical men of business have taken the matter in hand, plans have been fully discussed, and the details of the prospectus well digested. Some of the highest personages of social life have expressed their acquiescence in the scheme which has already been supported by the promise of large sums of money by intending shareholders. Another Season has paved the way for the accomplishment of the views of those who believe amalgamation the best course to pursue in the interests of both enterprises. It is an open secret that the Italian Opera Season last year at her Majesty's Theatre was not a success, nor did Mr. Mapleson care to risk an Italian Season in the autumn. It has been thought better that Mr. Mapleson, reinforced by certain members of the splendid troupe of Covent Garden, shall confine his energy to the United States, where his experience of American affairs will be at the service of the Royal Italian Opera Company, Covent Garden (Limited). Freed from the limited competition of Her Majesty's Theatre, the whole staff of the Italian Opera singers, and the entire body of Italian Opera goers will be drawn towards Covent Garden, the Prospectus of which house for the forthcoming Season includes the names of the most attractive artists the Italian Operatic Stage can boast. Competition has always been disastrous to Italian Opera, both commercially and from the point of view of art. A large amount has been already subscribed to the Opera Company, Limited, and the Directors have now decided to issue the Prospectus to the public. The Scheme promises to pay from 11 to 18 per cent., and may be worth the consideration of every class of investor, small and large.

CRICKET.

CHAPTER I. INTRODUCTORY.

So much has been written from time to time about the noble game of cricket, that it almost appears presumptuous on the part of a village author to attempt to put forward anything new or interesting, with reference to our national summer pastime. Perhaps when it is stated that these lines are penned more for the benefit of country, and especially local cricketers, than for the general cricketing community, they may perhaps receive a moderate share of attention from those to whom they are addressed.

It is difficult in entering upon a review of cricket which is intended to treat on every department of the game, to know where to commence operations, so many matters requiring a due share of recognition present themselves at once; and it is highly probable that exception may be taken to the order in which the various questions are treated; but if the reader will deal leniently in his criticism on the author's effort and suspend judgment until the completion of his little treatise, it is anticipated that the verdict will be on the whole, in favour of the opinions and suggestions therein contained.

It is a remarkable fact that although cricket has made such rapid strides in public estimation during late years, that now every little village or hamlet possesses its cricket club, and one or more Grace or Shaw, not to mention Hornby or Ullyett in embryo, the rules are with but little exception, the same as they were fifteen or twenty years ago; and for the last ten years there has been no alteration whatever.

This is deeply to be regretted, and it seems surprising that the authorities at Lords, who are regarded as the law makers of the game, should be so slow to take cognizance of the fact, that although the rules might be sufficiently clear and explicit for all practical purposes at the time they were framed, they fall far short of the requirements of the cricket of to-day.

Had no pressure been brought to bear on the powers that be, with regard to the many inconsistencies and weaknesses in the laws, it would not be so much a matter for surprise that there should be no revision made; but when it is patent to every one giving the least practical attention to the subject, that the rules are quite insufficient, too vague and incomprehensible on many points, to afford a satisfactory solution of a difficulty when called upon, and that there are several points which are constantly cropping up during the season, upon which there is no rule at all, and consequently everybody is at liberty to form his own opinion and act upon it, thus causing (especially in country places) innumerable disputes which ought never to arise, it becomes a matter for serious consideration, whether the committee of the Marylebone Cricket Club, is not neglecting an important duty in thus allowing the rules to remain unrevised and impotent, and some writers have openly advocated the formation of a cricket parliament or general governing body, to be composed of representatives from the principle clubs in the kingdom, which shall be empowered to make laws and settle all matters of controversy connected with the game which may from time to time arise.

This scheme, however desirable of accomplishment it may seem, would be extremely difficult to carry out, on account of the number of clubs who would claim representation and the process of selection which must ensue would have the effect of excluding many gentlemen connected with the county clubs, whose counsel and opinion would be of eminent service in discussing the different measures brought forward; and moreover the Marylebone Club has so long been recognised as the great authority on all questions connected with the game, that unless that organisation consented to merge its powers into those of the proposed, it would be hopeless to expect good to arise from the movement, because a great number of the leading clubs including those of the counties and universities, would hold aloof from any scheme that was not sanctioned by the M.C.C. and would still adhere to the existing laws: thus would arise a state of things to apply to which the term confusion worse confounded, would be mildness in the extreme.

A simple method of effecting a revision of the rules has occurred to the writer of this treatise, which would be easy of accomplishment, and would effectually ascertain the general opinion throughout the county upon the different rules.

It is as follows:—Let the committee of the M.C.C. take up this question, and as a first step, issue an inexpensive copy of the present laws of the game, (this might be published at the low price of one penny) and despatch a sufficient supply to all the principal newspaper offices in the districts where the game is most extensively patronised, and ask the proprietors of such newspapers to announce the fact in their columns to the cricket clubs in their vicinity, and request the secretaries or committees of those clubs who take an interest in the movement to procure copies and submit them to the members for consideration, at the same time fixing a certain date, say at the expiration of three months, for the copies of the rules, together with any amendments or suggestions thereon, to be sent in to the secretary of the Marylebone Club, the committee of which would afterwards meet to consider the various proposals submitted to their notice; and where a sufficient unanimity of opinion prevailed upon any one point, that the rule be revised or altered accordingly.

However carefully framed, and comprehensive in character the rules of any game may be, they are certain to be more or less inoperative, according to the knowledge of them possessed by those following the pursuit of that particular pastime, and until every cricketer takes the trouble to make himself thoroughly acquainted with the meaning and bearing of the laws which govern his favorite amusement, disputes and wranglings are certain to arise. This remark applies with the greatest force to country cricketers and to the players in the minor town clubs, who as a rule show a very lamentable ignorance of the rules and this ignorance is unfortunately not confined to the players alone, but is participated in to a large extent by the umpires themselves, and the writer does not hesitate to state, that not one umpire in six, nor one player in twenty, who are engaged in matches every week, with the exception of those of the highest class, possesses a thorough knowledge of the rules; and there are hundreds of players who have never even seen a copy, and have no knowledge of them beyond what they may have gathered from the lips of someone perhaps equally as well informed as themselves. Under these circumstances, would it not be well for every club to provide its umpire with a copy of the Annuals or Guides which are published by the Lillywhites and others, and to distribute amongst its players copies of the rules, so that each one might study them for himself and be set right upon many a question upon which he had previously been blissfully ignorant.

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." OULTON-WITH-WOODLESFORD SCHOOL BOARD.

A meeting of the above Board was held on Monday last, at which Mr. Jackson, the chairman of the Board, the Rev. A. J. Irvin, and Mr. Nowell were present; also the clerk and the attendance officer.

The clerk reported that in accordance with the instructions given at the last meeting, he had ordered executions to be levied on the goods of two persons who have not obeyed the judgment of the County Court by paying the arrears of school fees; also that he had taken proceedings before the magistrates against the following persons: Wm. Britton, Wm Johnson, and J Shillito, of Oulton; Henry Higgins, Allwood Walker and George Strafford, of New Woodlesford; T. Langfield, W. H. Hoyle, T. Higgins and R. Briscomb, of Woodlesford, who have committed a breach of the bye-laws, by not causing their children to attend school. With the exception of William Britton, whose case was adjourned for a month pending improvement in attendance, each person was fined five shillings, including costs.

The Board agreed to accept the resignation of Harry H. Longbottom, monitor in the boys' school, and instructed the clerk to advertise for a transfer pupil teacher of the first year at a salary of £15.

The usual salaries and some accounts were ordered to be paid.

Two or three applications for remission of school fees were made by parents who stated their inability to pay the fees. The applicants were referred to the Guardians whose duty it is to pay the school fees in cases of temporary poverty.

Notices were ordered to be served upon a number of parents whose children are irregular in their attendance at school, and these notices will be followed by legal proceedings if not complied with at once.

OULTON FOOTBALL CLUB.

The annual tea and meeting in connection with the above club was held in the National Schools, Oulton; about 37 sat down to an excellent knife and fork tea, which was provided by Mr. F. Peel, of the Mason's Arms. Shortly afterwards the meeting commenced, Mr. B. W. Higgins occupying the chair. In his opening remarks he said he regretted that there was a probability of losing one of their best players, he referred to Mr. Wilmot, who is expected to leave Oulton next October; he also expressed his pleasure in taking the chair at the annual meetings, this being the third time that he has occupied that position. He then called upon the secretary to read the annual report.

As Mr. Boothroyd stood recounting the official doings of the club during the past season, the hearty manner in which the members backed him up, showed to all present his popularity; and he certainly is an example of one who toils for the good of his club, without any thought of personal aggrandisement. From the report we find that the finances are satisfactory, the honorary members subscriptions amounting to £10, 16s.; ordinary members, £4 17s. 6d., being £2 less than last year. The gate money amounted to £7 13s. 2d., the most successful occasions being the two Sheffield matches, where £4 6s. was netted.

Total Income	29	9	6½
Expenditure	26	11	7½

Balance in treasurer's hands £2 17 11

The club now numbers 22 honorary and 40 ordinary members. During the season there has been an increase in travelling expenses, which is a good sign, as it shows that the players have gone further away in search of better opponents. The season was commenced by the cup ties at Rothwell, where they succeeded in carrying off the prize after meeting Rothwell twice, first time resulted in a tie, although an extra 10 minutes and 5 minutes each way was played; the second time they succeeded in taking home the trophy after a closely contested game, winning by 4 goals to 3. They had entered the Sheffield cup ties, and their opponents were Redcar, to which place they had to journey. After a pleasant game on one of the best grounds in England, they had to return home thoroughly beaten by 5 goals to one. The defeat, however, was not without good results, as many valuable lessons were learned. A few good matches are on the tapis for the coming season, and the committee have no doubt they will be appreciated by lovers of the sport. It is also intended to enter for the minor challenge cup.

The number of matches played during the season is 17, (besides the cup ties), with the following result:—11 won, 4 lost, 1 tie, 1 dispute; since the club started 64 matches have been played, of which 41 have been won, 11 lost, 12 ties. The second team has also been very successful

A reading room for the use of the members was opened last October, but it was not appreciated as it ought to have been, and was therefore closed in December, being a loss to the club to the extent of about £[illegible]

Mr. Boothroyd concluded his report by congratulating the playing members on the decided improvement which had taken place in the play during the season, and recommended them as a maxim—"United we stand, divided we fall."

The report was unanimously adopted.

Votes of thanks were accorded to the retiring officers, Mr. Calverley, subscribers, the editor of the Rothwell Times, and the host and hostess, for their kindness and help to the club.

The election of officers was next proceeded with, and resulted as follows:—

Committee.—Messrs. F. Peel, G. Abbey, R. J. Smith, T. West, J. Hutchinson, [illegible] Dennison, J. Bradley.

Hon Treasurer—Mr Henry Bell.

Hon. Secretary Mr. E Boothroyd.

Mr. E. Boothroyd was elected to the post of captain of the first team for the [illegible] time. Mr. W. Hutchinson was elected vice-captain.

Captain, 2nd team—Mr. James [illegible]arkson

Vice-captain, 2nd team—Mr. Joseph Stead

Mr. Ezra Stead moved a vote of thanks to the chairman, who replied

The remainder of the evening was spent in a very enjoyable manner.

ROTHWELL FOOTBALL CLUB.

The annual tea and meeting of the above club was held on Tuesday night, at the Working Man's Club, when about 34 members and friends sat down to a substantial knife and fork tea, which had been provided by Mr. Joseph Ward, the house-keeper of the club. After ample justice had been done to the good things provided, an adjournment was made.

The meeting was held in the large room upstairs and was attended by most of the friends and members who had partaken of tea. It was unfortunate several playing members were absent, as the meeting proved to be rather warm.

The Rev. J. C. Lees was elected as chairman, and after his opening remarks, called upon the secretary to read his report

Mr. Geo. Dobson, who acted as secretary pro tem in place of Mr. Russell, who is ill, read the following report:—

Mr Chairman and Gentlemen,

In presenting to you the report of the past season, I am very sorry to say I cannot congratulate the playing members on their success, not but that they have held their own in the matches they have played, but on account of the number of matches that have not been played; but taking the club on the whole, I think I may fairly say we are in a good condition, which I think may be gathered from the following: At the beginning of the season, the committee thought fit to enter the Rothwell Harmonic cup competition, which ended, as most are aware, in Rothwell being defeated in the final tie, (after a severe contest with Oulton) by 4 goals to 3. The number of matches arranged for the season was 24; of these 5 were won, 4 lost, 3 drawn, and 12 not played, (against last year 5 won, 1 lost, 4 drawn, and 4 not played.) The clubs that we have overcome are Gawber Moss Rose, (twice) scoring 6 to 2 and 9 to 2, Hunslet Wesleyans, (twice) scoring 2 to nil and 1 to nil; Hopetown Victoria, scoring 1 to nil. The matches lost were with Hunslet, Hopetown Victoria, Stourton, and Rothwell Harmonic. The drawn games were with Stourton, Rothwell Harmonic, and Oulton. The games not played were Hopetown, (twice) Altofts (twice) Doncaster Ellesmere, (twice) Meanwood, (twice) Sharlston, (twice) Hunslet and Oulton. Of these only two were stopped on account of wet. The number of goals scored by Rothwell during the season are 26 against Rothwell 17, against last year by Rothwell 12, against, 5. The number of members on the books is 34, last year 29. With regard to the financial position of the club, I think we may safely say that we are in a fair condition, the income for the past year being £8 4s 2½d, the expenditure £5 8s 9½d, thus leaving a balance in hand of £2 15s 5d.

After some remarks had been made on the report, it was adopted, on the motion of Mr. G. Wilson.

The election of officers next took place; and a long and difficult task it proved to be. The Rev. G. Heberden was elected president unanimously, as was the treasurer, Mr. G. Wilson. For the post of secretary Messrs. Russell and F Seanor, were proposed, and after even voting Seanor secured the majority by the chairman's casting vote. Much sympathy was expressed by the members for the late secretary, who would certainly again have occupied the post if he had been well and able to attend.

Messrs H. Chapman, W. Hartley and J W. Chadwick were the candidates for the position of captain, and Mr. Chadwick was again elected to that post.

Several names were proposed for the vice-captain, but Mr. Hartley, who held the office last season, had a veritable "walk over," being a long way ahead of all the others.

Committee—Messrs. H. Chapman, J Lawn, F. Green, J. Verity, J. R. Seanor, J. Rawson, J. Wilson.

Several suggestions were made respecting the matches for the coming season, and a general desire seems to pervade the members to meet better clubs.

The usual votes of thanks concluded the meeting.

ROTHWELL TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.

A portion of the annual festival of the Rothwell Temperance Society this year consisted of the rendering of the temperance service of song entitled "The Start in Life," which was given a second time on Sunday afternoon in the Mechanics' Institute. The attendance was overflowing, many persons being unable to get into the room, and the effort was very successful. The readings were given, as before, by Mr. J. R. Seanor, the choir and scholars sang very well under Mr. Jos Idle, the accompaniment being played by Mr F Hampson. A collection was made amounting to £1 15s.

The annual tea meeting took place on Wednesday afternoon in the Mechanics' Institute, when a good number of friends sat down to tea. Owing to the threatening aspect of the weather, however, and the number of convivial gatherings which have lately taken place, the attendance was not so large as would otherwise have been the case. After tea a public meeting was convened in the same place and although sparely attended at first the room was, on the rain ceasing, nearly filled.

Mr. Clark, the president, occupied the chair, and after a hymn had been sung. ("Let all men praise the Lord") prayer was offered. The chairman then expressed his disappointment that neither Mr Laycock nor Mr. Waring (who had promised to come over in place of Mr. Collingwood and Mr. Spensley) were present. He was, however, glad to see Mr. Peter Gilston with them and, from the programme, he thought they might look forward to spending a pleasant evening.

The Temperance Band, part of whom were present, then gave a sacred piece of music, and the mellow tone of the instruments was very marked and pleasing.

Mr. W. Batty, the secretary, apologised for the absence of the Revs. C A Collingwood and J. Spensley, both of whom had intended being present at their annual meeting, but were unavoidably prevented. From the financial statement, it appears that £10 6s. 7d. has been received in various ways, and £9 2s. 7d. spent, leaving a balance in hand of £1 4s. Next year the Committee anticipate reducing the cost of working the Society considerably, the assistance of the Band in calling meetings being kindly offered. it had been arranged to play round the town previous to this meeting, but the severe storm interfered. Mention was made of the assistance friends had given by the use of their conveyances, and thanks were given. Speaking on the work of the year, the secretary referred to the notable Gospel Temperance Mission, when a total of 704 donned the 'blue ribbon,' over 300 having then taken the pledge for the first time. Following up these extraordinary gatherings, meetings were continued every Sunday evening at the Cross, during the months of July, August, and September, when addresses were delivered in the open air, mostly by local speakers, the singing being greatly assisted by the united Wesleyan and Primitive choirs. Lectures had been given during the winter by Messrs. Sykes, Parker, Jasper, and Dr. Lees; a most successful Local Option meeting was also held in September, when some excellent addresses were delivered, and the resolution in favor carried by a very large majority. The annual fruit banquet also took place on Dec. 29th. The formation of the Temperance Band was a special feature of the year. Several members of the old Band having become abstainers during the mission, they found their position among their old companions rather uncomfortable, and a proposal was made about Christmas that a Temperance Band should be formed; the idea was warmly taken up, and the Band was raised. A set of instruments was purchased for £74, nett worth £100, and having obtained the loan of £50, the balance has now been subscribed and earned, Mrs. Roodhouse generously heading the list with £5. The Committee believe this will be a valuable adjunct to the Society, and a means of keeping some of their young men. The Band of Hope numbers 250 members, with an average attendance of 100, 30 new names having been added during the year. The income has been £12 10s. 11½d., expenditure, £9 16s 9½d., leaving a balance in hand of £2 14s 2d. In closing the report, the secretary looked forward hopefully to the future, anticipating greater success in the coming year.

The choir then sang "Drink water,' after which the Band played Handel's beautiful chorus, "O Father, whose Almighty power," in a very pleasing and creditable manner.

Mr Peter Gilston then addressed the meeting, his speech being frequently interrupted by the applause which greeted his witty allusions and pungent sarcasms. In complimenting the Band on their performances, Mr. Gilston gave an amusing reference to his connection with a brass band, and their doings in Scarbro'; he suggested that they should arrange to give concerts at Hunslet, Holbeck, and elsewhere, whereby they would be able to earn the money they required for clearing the debt on the instruments. He had also been highly pleased with their playing on Good Friday at the Band of Hope demonstration in Leeds Mr. Gilston congratulated the Society and the secretary on the report, and thought good work had been done. Mentioning Dr. Livingstone, President Garfield, and others, he pointed out their continued and persevering temperance and industry as examples of what may be done by poor boys. He also gave them an idea of the great work which is being done in Scotland, Gospel Temperance meetings held in all the large towns, where addresses are given to overflowing audiences, and thousands joining the movement. After paying a well-deserved tribute to those poor men, reformed drunkards, who first endeavoured to win people over to the side of Temperance, Mr. Gilston pointed with pride to the best and most eloquent men of the day, who were teetotallers; Sir Wm. Harcourt, the Home Secretary, having lately avowed his adhesion to these principles. He then gave some good advice on thrift and economy in connection with temperance, shewing that by these means men have risen above their fellows. He also urged the importance of guarding well their characters as the most precious thing in life, and concluded with an earnest exhortation to go on and do still better in the future.

A dialogue by Miss Shearman and Miss Ely was next given, followed by a recitation "Is heaven a long way off, mother," by Miss Clara Shearman.

The president then distributed the prizes gained by members of the Band of Hope for best attendance.

Mr. Batterick had very great pleasure in moving a vote of thanks to Mr. Gilston, to the secretary, and to the Band for their services. He was glad to see such a good company, which, notwithstanding the rain, was very much larger than last year. Referring with sorrow to the drinking habits of some of the Rothwell youths, he urged greater efforts, and asked the co-operation of all parents to save their children by enrolling them as members of the Band of Hope.

Mr. Hampson, in seconding the resolution mentioned his being present at their first anniversary, but hoped the last would not be held in his life-time. He heartily congratulated the Band on their performances, and was pleased to hear from Mr. Gilston and others, such a good report of their playing on Good Friday. After speaking of other benefits, he pointed out the advantages of temperance principles and practice to tradesmen, and hoping for greater success in the future, very heartily seconded the resolution, which was passed with acclamation.

Mr. Gilston and Mr. Batty having replied, Mr. Batty moved a vote of thanks to the ladies, which was seconded by Mr. Ineson, and carried Another melody was then sung, and thanks presented to Mr. Clark for presiding, and to Miss Riley for accompanying on the harmonium and the meeting concluded.

The platform was filled with members of the Band of Hope and Temperance choir, who sang the selections very nicely, under the conduct of Mr. Joseph Idle.

A collection was made on behalf of the funds.

INTERESTING ARCHÆOLOGICAL DISCOVERY AT ROTHWELL.

The old land-marks of our ancient village are disappearing. One by one the buildings of a bygone age are being pulled down to give place to those of more modern adaptation, though we would not say of better construction. So it happens that on the 20th ultimo., Messrs. Chapman began to level to the ground, the old plaster and colour-washed house about the middle of Commercial-street, belonging to the Hon. Mrs. Meynell Ingram, of Temple Newsam, for a long time tenanted by the late Mr. and Mrs. Dobson, and within whose walls they both died.

Though it was by outward appearances comparatively old, yet it proved to be, as it became more opened out, much more ancient than most people anticipated. The foundation of the building was a crosswise post and panel framework, filled in with stones and rubble, etc., and upon that lath and plaster. Some of the interior beams were of great length and very massive, being of old oak, and as hard and firm almost as iron Several had morticed holes in them, indicating previous use. When a course of bricks was taken down on the east end the most interesting features of the structure were disclosed, namely a somewhat decorated plaster frontage of the original house and over the doorway was a beautiful moulded ornament, which has been carefully preserved, and a well-executed chalk drawing of it has been made, half size, by our talented young townsman Mr. William Wright, solicitor—a clever artist. The ornamental part is confined within a half pointed single moulding, and the whole enclosed by a diamond or lozenge-shaped ribbed moulding, being 31 inches in length and 26 inches in breadth from angle to angle respectively. At the lower corner is the fleur de lis, and at the upper one a bunch of grapes, in the middle the Tudor rose, (probably) with leaves and other floral details; at the outside corners is placed an acorn. The whole grouping and general arrangement is floriated and artistic, reminding one of the Italian or Renaissance manner. We find "that such work was introduced in the reign of Henry VII. and greatly flourished in the times of his successors, the Elizabethan style being a singular mixture of Gothic and Italian details, and almost confined to domestic buildings.

This ornament under notice is the best and most finished example we have met with of the use of such floral and fruit representations, being a moulder's favourite pattern of the Tudor or Elizabethan period; but it survived later, for instance, in the ceiling of the house occupied by Mr. Kirkby, in the same street, of early Stuart date, also over the mantle-piece of the old hall at East Ardsley, (temp. James 1st,) and at the bottom of an old gravestone, bearing date 1658, in its churchyard.

The plaster of this lately demolished house was not thick but very hard and tenacious in quality. Other simpler markings such as scallop and scroll indentations, etc., fill up the groundwork at intervals.

This antique residence has evidently been a mansion of no mean order, and standing off from the road, with garden land in front, we can picture to our mind's eye its quaint aspect as it appeared in the days of "Good Queen Bess"; its well ordered and trimmed garden, with fantastically cut trees and flowering plants.

We know that a croft in connection with the house was called "Sayvell Croft," it is therefore likely that a family of gentry resided in it of the name of Savile or Sayvell On reference to the church registers we find that a "John Savyle, gentleman, was buried at Rothwell, 28th day of May, 1584."

The house had been enlarged subsequently at the west end and at the back by stone additions some hundred years or so, either in Charles the Second or James the Second's days, judging from the style and make of the window mouldings; these windows were afterwards blocked up and in modern times the buildings had still further been altered. The covering up of the front of the ornamental plaster was in all probability on account of the difficulty of renewing it when some parts became decayed or it may have been to make the house more warm, comfortable and uniform.

Anyhow, this said house of a past generation is one more proof of the antiquity of Rothwell; what still remains in the recesses of the past and may yet be brought to light we cannot tell.

PARLIAMENT.

YESTERDAY'S NEWS.

The unexpected resignation of Mr. Forster on Tuesday, succeeding that of Earl Cowper, Lord Lieutenant, last week, has created no little stir in the country, and the question of a successor in Secretaryship has been the all-absorbing subject of conversation.

Yesterday, in a crowded house, the Prince of Wales being present, Mr. Forster made a full, clear, and honest statement of his reasons for resignation, because he could not approve of the release of the imprisoned members, feeling that the time for that step had not yet come.

The three members who have been released Messrs. Parnell, Dillon, and O'Kelly, were present yesterday evening and made short speeches.

The post of Chief Secretary has been offered to, and accepted by Lord Frederick Cavendish, M.P. for the North West Riding.

Earl Spencer, the new Lord Lieutenant makes his public entry into Dublin tomorrow.

LEEDS ASSISES.

Yesterday, the trial of Osman Otto Brand for the alleged murder of the fisher-boy Papper on the high sea, commenced before Mr. Justice Watkin Williams. One of the crew named Dench described the treatment to which the boy was subjected, and his statement was supported by other witnesses. The case for the prosecution was not concluded, and is resumed this morning. The court was crowded, great interest evidently being taken in the proceedings. The prisoner on leaving the dock was loudly hissed.

CARLTON READING ROOM.

On Monday evening, Mr. W. Cave, of Leeds, delivered an excellent Temperance address in the above room; Mr. Coupland also gave several recitations in good style. The audience was not so large as the fare deserved; a collection was taken on behalf of the funds of the Reading Room.

SWILLINGTON.

It is gratifying to announce that the long standing toll-bar between Oulton and Swillington was removed from its hinges yesterday at noon; its removal will be a great saving to many of our business men.

INQUEST AT STOURTON.

Last Monday an inquest was held at the Stourton Hotel, before the deputy Coroner on view of the body of James Poole, of Yeadon, which was taken out of the river Aire on Saturday last. From the evidence we gather that previous to the 2nd January last, deceased had for some time been in a desponding state of mind, and on that date he left home at 6.30., at 9.30. on the same night his son discovered his body in the river Aire at Apperley Bridge, but on account of the strong current he failed to rescue it. Nothing more has been heard of the body until, as has been before stated, it was taken out of the river last Saturday by James Higgins. Verdict returned, "Found drowned."

MARKETS.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—With favourable weather, we had a large attendance of dealers and butchers, and more activity was noticable in most of the departments. In the beef trade there was a good demand, especially for better sorts, which easily obtained about a farthing per lb. more than last week. The number on offer was something similar to last week, and the quality generally of high class. Of sheep there was a much smaller supply, and dealers were able to secure in many cases as much as a 1d. per pound advance. The scarcity of clipped sheep was owing to the unfavourable weather at the end of last week, which prevented such animals being prepared for the market. There was an extra large number of lambs selling at 1s. per lb., and of fat calves, which sold at 9d. per lb. A brisker tone was observable in the pig market, but we cannot propose any alteration on late rates.

No. of fat beasts, this week, 1700, last week, 1700
,, sheep ,, 4006, ,, 5503
,, Pigs ,, 800,
,, milch cows &c. 127,

Prices were as follows:—

Fat beasts, 8d to 8½d per lb.
Fat calves, 9d per lb.
Lean beasts, £9 to £15 each.
Milch cows, £14 to £25 each.
Sheep, wethers 10d to 10½d per lb.
,, clipped 8d to 9¼d ,,
,, small, 9½d ,,
Pigs small, 15s to 25s.
,, store, 5s to 60s.
fat 6/6 to 7/ per stone.

LEEDS CORN, Tuesday.—There has been a good attendance to-day but the business done has been somewhat quiet, at prices rather over those of last week. Maize, beans, and peas steady. No change in flour; present rates No. 1 37s 6d; 2. 34s. 6d.; 3. 33s.—Leeds Corn Millers' Association Report.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

WAKEFIELD CORN, Friday 12.32 p.m.—The wheat trade is firm this morning, and the full prices of last week are made on the business done. Barley quiet. Beans, oats and maize steady. Weather fine.

NEW POOR RATE.—On Monday last, a new Poor Rate of 1s 2d in the £ was signed for Rothwell parish at the Wakefield Court House by T. H. Holdsworth, Esq., and Saml. Holdsworth, Esq. The bench stated that the fact of there being no arrears was creditable alike to parish and collector.

ERRATA.—In our report of the Wesleyan Sunday School meeting at Rothwell last week, our "comp." inadvertently omitted the name of Mr. Morton, as one of the speakers, and we are glad to take this opportunity of correcting the omission. Ed].

COLBURN'S NEW MONTHLY.—In this month's issue of the above magazine are several valuable and well written articles, but none open out so clearly and pleasingly the remarkable advances made in the cultivation and preservation of seeds, as described in the paper on the extensive business of Messrs. Waite, Nash, Higgins & Co., of Southwark Street, London. Here we are introduced to one of the largest businesses done in seeds, flowers, fruits and vegetables. In their offices and warehouses are stored tons of every variety, each individual seed selected, drawn from every part of the world by special travellers of wide and discriminating experience. Some of these seeds are worth ten times their weight in gold, and in one instance they are negociating for a variety which will cost £80 an ounce. The firm also have some thousands of acres of land under cultivation for the set purpose of raising seed which will go into all parts of the world for the production of the choicest samples of vegetable, flower or fruit. An interesting description is also given of perhaps the largest paper mills in England, and the various processes through which that useful article has to pass before being presented to us in its present shape.

LETTS'S POPULAR ATLAS has, with Part 28, now reached the completion of the third volume, and before the commencement of the new year the whole work will be in the hands of the public. We have so often drawn the attention of our readers to its many merits that we can do no more now than reiterate the favourable comments we have already expressed. Perhaps we might insist on those features which make it out as pre-eminently an original work, which, indeed, clothe it with attractions we never associated with maps, and yet which obviously are as much an outcome of their study as the mountains, rivers, or hills appearing in any other Atlas. To take this third volume as a case in point there can be no doubt that to the man of business, and even the student, it is of the greatest interest to see where his country is officially represented by Consul or Vice-Consul, to note the sources of supply of the staple products of the world, that Europe generally supplies us with some of our most important articles of commerce, although occasionally even larger come from other parts of the world. The large scale maps given in this series are incalculably more useful for circulating TRUE ideas of the countries treated of than the old-fashioned single sheet maps which, by condemning Russia to the same sized sheet of paper as England or Italy, lead the mind through the eye imperceptibly to the false conclusion that these countries were no larger than our own little island. And all such efforts to establish truth should be encouraged by the people of every class of society; it is as easy to do this when the mind is young and receptive as it is to allow error or falsehood to grow up, with the enormous difference in the end of a vastly increased amount of happiness and saving of time in the first instance, and loss of time, temper, and morality in the latter. The Germans are proverbially excellent in the production of such works as this under notice, but we think that to Messrs. Letts must be awarded the palm even over them for having brought forward interesting and useful facts intimately associated with the study of maps, in such a manner that clearness is not sacrificed to detail.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may be secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and cheap compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa: "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? When are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoa? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

THE WHISPERING GALLERY.

IT will probably be deemed equivalent to high treason in Rothwell, to ask if the railway scheme now before the public will prove of such incalculable benefit to the village after all? and if it is the best scheme which could be thought of?

There is no doubt that very good grounds for opposing the project can be adduced, and it is an open question whether the people of Rothwell are not taking a leap in the dark in swallowing so readily the apparently tempting bait which has been dangled before their eyes.

The communication with Leeds which will be afforded by means of the proposed line, will, it is very probable, be an indirect one, and passengers will be required to change carriages at Ardsley, as it is not at all certain that running powers over the Great Northern line from Ardsley to Leeds can be obtained by the new company; and a journey of eight miles with a change of carriages in the middle of it, and the prospect of having to wait an indefinite length of time at Ardsley, is not a very encouraging one. In addition to the disadvantage of indirect communication with Leeds and Wakefield, it is not at all certain that the neighbouring collieries will derive such a very great benefit as has been set forth, or that the collier will have "more days a week" than at present."

CRICKETERS have not had a pleasant time of it so far this season, the steady downpour of rain each Saturday having put play out of the question entirely, and as a natural consequence the season is still unopened in this neighbourhood. Perhaps the bad weather on match days will not have been altogether a misfortune for the players, who will have been able to get better into practice before entering the arena in earnest.

Two local clubs will try conclusions with each other at Rothwell to morrow, viz Rothwell and Oulton Brewery, and although the former will probably not turn out in full strength, he would be a rash prophet who would predict success for the Brewery eleven.

THE drainage proceeds slowly in Rothwell streets. It is satisfactory however, that Butcher Lane, Commercial Street, and Church Street are at last about clear. When will the connections be done, people are asking?

THE thunder cloud has broken, and Mr. Forster, the sturdy minister who goes straight forward in what he believes to be right, has been forced to resign, partly by the intrigues of some of his colleagues, and partly by the action of the government in the new departure concerning Ireland. Englishmen of all shades cannot but admire the honest firmness of this most abused and maligned Yorkshireman.

IT seems that the Woodlesford School Board have at last put in force the compulsory powers which it possesses in common with other Boards in the country. A paragraph in last week's Wakefield newspaper gives the information that prosecutions have been instituted against some ten or twelve persons for neglecting to send their children to school; and with one exception the School Board was successful. Fines of 5s were inflicted in each instance. This result should have the effect of improving the attendance at the schools, which any casual observer might infer from the number of children to be seen playing about, has not been as good as it ought to be.

IT has been rumoured for some time past that Mr. Bentley was about to leave Woodlesford, and now that he has given up the post of churchwarden, there seems to be some truth in the reports.

THE pursuit of the "Will o' the wisp" is a proverbially hopeless occupation, the object aimed at being nothing more nor less than a flitting spark which has its origin no one knows where, and closes its career in darkness and oblivion. As this will doubtless be the case with the specimen which shewed its fitful gleam last week, it is not necessary to occupy either time or space in taking notice of it. A more substantial antagonist would probably receive fitting attention.

IT is anticipated by many that the meeting of the Rothwell Local Board on Wednesday, to consider a motion to oppose the Gas Bill in the House of Lords, will result in favour of opposing. The onus of incurring the expense will then fall on the ratepayers, who will have to meet and either endorse or decline the action of the Board. Mr. Turner will at any rate have carried out one of the promises he made previous to election, to bring forward the subject again.

Mr. Turner is a gentleman, who from his position, and intellectual attainments, is calculated to be able to do a great amount of good in the village, providing he goes to work with discretion; but a policy of uncompromising antagonism to church and conservatism, will it is to be feared, greatly injure the cause of progress which he has at heart. It is an easy matter to stir up strife and dissension by setting class against class, but what good is achieved by so doing.

QUID NUNC.

STACEY.—May 1st, Mary Elizabeth Stacey, Rothwell Haigh, aged 7 years.

THE TEMPERANCE BAND.

Now, what is this I hear of late,
In this our native town;
To me it does appear a fate,
Of something broken down.

Though it may not appear to you,
As it appears to me;
Although I think it is not true,
As you will plainly see.

Last Christmas as you all well know,
We had but one brass band;
But now you see we have got two,
And one 'tis said won't stand.

They also say that water cannot,
Blow a note so clear;
But that is false! I know a man,
That's proved it many a year.

And you will bear me out I think,
When I tell you his name;
He never yet has tasted drink,
He knows not of its pain.

And then the note is made so well,
On his old tenor tram;
It is without the drink they sell,
Down at the tavern.

This is the man of whom I said,
Can blow a note so well;
He is a shoemaker by trade,
They call him Emmanuel.

So now you see its not a fate,
Of anything that's down;
But something that will love create,
In this our native town.

So now I close with my first rhyme,
And hope you'll pardon me;
If I have taken up your time,
With impertinency.

THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have their skins blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. JOHN DYSON,

THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, LIMITED.

THE scheme to amalgamate the two Italian operatic houses of London, and to concentrate this form of entertainment within the walls of Covent Garden is about to be brought forward under the most favorable auspices. Practical men of business have taken the matter in hand, plans have been fully discussed, and the details of the prospectus well digested. Some of the highest personages of social life have expressed their acquiescence in the scheme which has already been supported by the promise of large sums of money by intending shareholders. Another Season has paved the way for the accomplishment of the views of those who believe amalgamation the best course to pursue in the interest of both enterprises. It is an open secret that the Italian Opera Season last year at her Majesty's Theatre was not a success, nor did Mr. Mapleson care to risk an Italian Season in the autumn. It has been thought better that Mr. Mapleson, reinforced by certain members of the splendid troupe of Covent Garden, shall confine his energy to the United States, where his experience of American affairs will be at the service of the Royal Italian Opera Company, Covent Garden (Limited). Freed from the limited competition of Her Majesty's Theatre, the whole staff of the Italian Opera singers, and the entire list of Italian Opera goers will be drawn towards Covent Garden, the Prospectus of which house for the forthcoming Season includes the names of the most attractive artists the Italian Operatic Stage can boast. Competition has always been disastrous to Italian Opera, both commercially and from the point of view of art. A large amount has been already subscribed to the Opera Company, Limited, and the Directors have now decided to issue the Prospectus to the public. The Scheme promises to pay from 11 to 15 per cent., and may be worth the consideration of every class of investor, small and large.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

The ordinary meeting of the Board was held on Monday, present—Messrs. W. Hargreaves (chairman) J. Hargreaves, S. Bramley, J. Sanderson, J. Oliver, J. Turner, and the Clerk, Medical Officer, Treasurer, and Inspector.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

ROTHWELL SEWAGE.—Mr. Jowitt, clerk of works, reported that the drainage works had progressed gradually during the fortnight, but, owing to the state of the ground, &c., not so quickly as he would like. In Commercial Street, there had been laid 33 yards of 9 inch pipes, and 220 yards in Butcher Lane, with 4 man holes and 2 lamp holes. He had also made several connections with property in Butcher Lane and Windmill Lane, in accordance with the conditions laid down by the Board. He had received a quantity of materials from Huddersfield.

The clerk stated that Mr. Parkinson desired the instructions of the Board as to whether he should proceed to enforce the fine of £4 a week to which Mr. Brayshaw was now liable. The additional month allowed beyond the specified termination of the contract expired on April 25th, and the works were still far from being completed. In reply to a question, Mr Jowitt said the pipes had been satisfactorily laid. The chairman complained of the time which had been lost, and the disorderly and dangerous state in which the roads had been left. After further conversation it was resolved, on the motion of Mr. J. Hargreaves and Mr. Turner, "that the fine be not enforced till Mr. Parkinson receives further instructions from the Board."

The clerk read a letter from Messrs. Dibb, Atkinson and Braithwaite respecting the line of pipes laid through the Hon. Mrs. Meynell Ingram's property, and asking for a copy of the notice. The clerk stated a notice had been sent to Mr. Leather; and it was considered that this was quite sufficient.

HIGHWAYS.—Mr. W. Hargreaves, on behalf of the Committee reported having arranged for the carting away of the rubbish on the site purchased by the Leeds Cooperative Society. They had asked for tenders and had accepted that of Mr. Brayshaw, who was doing it for £3 10s. 0d. The action of the Committee was approved

Mr. Oliver thought the state of the Leeds and Barnsdale Road was not as it should be and desired to draw Mr. Jowitt's attention to it. Mr. Jowitt explained that he had had to stick so closely to the sewage works, that he had not given the personal oversight which he would have liked.

Mr. J. Hargreaves said there had been a lot of scrapings got off, but the piece of road at Stourton was very bad. Mr. Bramley knew Mr. Jowitt had been kept very close at the sewage works, and he had no doubt he would pull up this work. Mr. Jowitt thought the work was being properly attended to, but as soon as ever he heard of its condition, he had it commenced on at once.

HEALTH REPORT.—Dr. Glaister attended to report seven fresh cases of scarlet fever, in various parts of the district, as well as one case of enteric or typhoid fever. Most of the children had been at school the day previous to the attack. There had been two more deaths from the disease. In reply to a question, the doctor did not think the complaint was spreading so rapidly as to advise the closing of the schools. The cases were as much isolated as possible. Mr Turner enquired if this epidemic was partly due to the present drainage operations, but the doctor thought not, as this disease does not arise from sewage gases but is spread from case to case by contagion; of course the virulence of a disease may be increased by an impure atmosphere.

Mr. Bramley also asked what steps were taken for disinfecting, to which the doctor explained, that after the bed has been well shaken, the room is thoroughly disinfected with sulphur fumes, and the bed clothes are taken off and well washed. The clerk also stated that the doctor could prevent any bedding being exposed till it had been thoroughly disinfected

SCRAPINGS REMOVAL.—Three tenders had been received for the removal of scrapings on the Leeds and Wakefield Road, as advertised in this journal, and on the motion of Mr. Bramley and Mr. Hargreaves, it was resolved to accept that of Mr. W. Bulmer, for £32 10s. 0d

CO-OPERATIVE STORE.—The wish of the Society to have the line of kerbing and levels marked out for their building, was arranged to be done on the following day.

WATER.—The chairman mentioned a leakage which was reported to him at Stourton, which the Inspector would enquire into.

Mr. Turner had also observed in Butcher Lane, that some damage had been done to the water mains by the sewage contractors. This, however, was immediately remedied.

TELEPHONE.—The Postmaster General asked the Board's permission to erect two poles on the Leeds and Wakefield Road, required in the erection of a system of telephone communication between Lofthouse and the Midland Railway, for Messrs. J. & J. Charlesworth. The chairman further explained the intention of the firm to connect the various collieries and offices by means of telephonic wires.

Mr. Turner asked what the Board would receive for allowing the Post Office to do this. It was not fair for Messrs. Charlesworth to have to pay the Post Office for this advantage, and the permission to erect these poles to be granted without charge.

These remarks opened out the question of the entire line of telegraph poles in the Board's district, and as it appears it is an overseers' question, Mr. J. Hargreaves promised it should at once be gone into.

It was agreed on the motion of Mr. Oliver, seconded by Mr. Bramley—That the Postmaster General be allowed to erect the two poles mentioned in his application, on condition that a certain sum be paid for the same.

STOURTON SEWAGE.—Mr. Parkinson complained of certain stoppages, etc., at Stourton, in the sewage pipes, and the Inspector promised to see after the remedies necessary.

ESTIMATE for the new rate was then laid on the table, and consisted of the following items for the half-year.—

	£
Salaries	120
Streets lighting	80
Nuisance removal ...	40
Highway repairs, etc. ...	700
Repayment of principal and interest	260
Legal charges	50
Election expenses ...	10
Establishment charges	20
Miscellaneous	10
Sewage account	40
	£1330

Mr. Oliver, as chairman of the Finance Committee, stated that all the items had been carefully considered, and had been cut as closely as possible; and that the Committee recommended the Board to lay a rate of 1/8 in the £. This was 2d. more than last time, and 1d. less than it was four years ago.

In reply to Mr. Bramley, Mr. Oliver said the Leeds and Wakefield Road had cost about £840 last half-year. He also remarked that 1d. in the £ raises about £66

Mr. Sanderson seconded the motion. He said they had expended considerable time over the subject, and as summer was the best time for getting up the roads, it was important they should have good roads, they had allowed for a larger expenditure so as to put them into such a state as might secure part of the County rate.

MEDICAL OFFICER.—In reply to the Board's application to the Local Government Board for the return of one half the salary paid to the medical officer, the department asked the Board to reconsider the appointment as it was deemed undesirable to have a gentleman as their medical officer, who also held a similar post in connection with the Union; they preferred having an independent Hunslet officer. Some conversation followed in which it was shewn that the other medical gentlemen also occupied similar appointments, and as Dr. Glaister had faithfully and well discharged his duty hitherto, they could not see their way to alter the appointment.

On the motion of Mr. J Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Turner, it was unanimously resolved that Dr. Glaister's appointment be upheld, there being no other medical gentleman in the district, who does not hold a similar position under the Union.

POSTAL TELEGRAPH.—An application was read from the department for the balance of guarantee fund for the past year The number of messages has only realized £12 7s. 6d., a much less amount than in previous years. A meeting of the guarantors was agreed on.

Mr Farrar writes that the repairs to the wall in Oulton Lane shall be attended to.

A special meeting of the Board was held on Wednesday evening, when all the members were present, J. Charlesworth, Esq., presiding.

Although the meeting was called for six, it was a quarter-past before business commenced, Mr. Turner, the gentleman who had given notice for the meeting, being unavoidably late.

Mr. Turner, after apologising for the delay, and explaining his inability to get there earlier, went on to state that the object of the meeting was to induce the Local Board to pass a resolution opposing the proposed Bill promoted by the Rothwell Gas Light Co, Limited, unless they were prepared to modify its provisions so as to meet the wishes of a number of the ratepayers. There were three particulars which he thought should be altered, viz., (1) the standard price should be reduced from 5/8 to about 4s. (to mention a moderate sum), and the dividend reduced. (2) That the illuminating power be advanced from 14 candles to 16. (3) That non-illuminating gas be excluded from the Bill.

Mr. Turner proceeded in a very temperate and able manner to press home his points, referring to the price in Leeds and Wakefield, and shewing the cramping effect a high price of gas would have on the advancing trade of Rothwell, and that while it had been said that the Parliamentary Committee would look after the consumers' interests, they had no assurance that such would be the case. The second objection was not taken up at this juncture. The third objection was shewn by Mr. W. Hargreaves not to be in the Bill, and he thought Mr. Turner would not desire the Co. to spend some hundreds of pounds to insert a new clause for which there was no necessity.

Mr. Holmes asked if the Bill had passed the Commons, and if so, what amendments had been made; he had been informed that such amendments had been introduced as would meet their wishes.

Mr W. Hargreaves, chairman of the Gas Co., proceeded in a clear and concise manner to reply to Mr. Turner and Mr Holmes. He however, desired again most emphatically to deny the truth of the assertion that the Company had been laying by monies to support this Bill at the expense of the consumers.

In speaking of the price, Mr. W. Hargreaves mentioned two or three points which plainly showed the very great deal heavier expense entailed on a Company with a small consumption, as compared with a Company having a larger consumption, and were it not for the miles of mains which were required for carrying gas to outside places, a very large reduction could at once be made. Considering the very small consumption in Rothwell, he held that their gas was supplied at a very cheap rate. Mr. Hargreaves then proceeded to state the amendments introduced into the Bill during its progress through the House.

1.—The electric clauses are struck out.
2.—"Artificial" light is also taken out.
3.—The sliding scale and the initial price are also entirely removed.
4.—The clause providing for a reserve fund is dis-allowed.
5.—The maximum price (not standard) is fixed at 5s., and no higher dividend can be paid than 10 per cent on old shares, and 7½ per cent on new ones.

Considering the risky nature of the Gas Co.'s business, be thought the dividend was not high, and pointed out that according to the Bill as it now stands, there is no reserve fund; thus the Company on balancing up, after declaring a dividend, which cannot be more than the above maximum, any balance of profit must go to the benefit of the consumers. Also that whatever price coal and wages may rise to, or however low residuals may become, the Company cannot on any consideration charge more than 5s. per thousand. As to the illuminating power, Mr. H. stated that of the thousands of Gas Co.s, two thirds of their Bills fixed the standard price not less than 5s.. and the illuminating power not more than 14 candles. As he had said at previous meetings, they would be compelled for their own protection to keep the illuminating power to not less than 15 candles. After this explanation, and a remembrance of the risks to which the Co was exposed, he thought the Board ought to be satisfied.

Mr. Batty referred to the suggestion at the meeting of the Board and the directors for a 16 candle light, but the chairman reminded him that that was all done with, as the Board did not finally agree to the concessions made.

The chairman thought that from Mr. Hargreaves' explanation of the Bill as it now stands, it was to the Co.'s interest to reduce the price as much as possible, so as to increase the amount of consumption. He referred to the commencement of the Co. when be was a shareholder and the price was 7s. 6d., and did not pay well at all, but the price was now reduced to 4s. 2d. He approved of the policy of the directors, and pointed out that as Rothwell increases in population, the consumption of gas will become larger, and prices must go down

Mr. Turner said he must acknowledge that the information they had just heard was very satisfactory, and he would only like to have the statements verified by the Bill.

Mr. Hargreaves objected to any imputation being thrown upon his statements, but Mr. Turner at once explained that he did not for a moment doubt Mr. Hargreaves' word, but he would be glad to have the Bill before them He thought also that the illuminating power should be 16; Leeds is 17 or more.

The chairman mentioned the probability of Leeds gas being dearer, on account of their proposal to use 'cannel' coal, which would be an unfortunate thing for Rothwell coal.

Mr. Batty thought if they waited to see the Bill, the time for lodging a petition might have passed; what they did should be done quickly

Mr. Hargreaves promised as soon as ever the Bill was printed, a copy should be placed on the table; it had only been put into the printer's hands the previous day. In reply to a remark of Mr. Turner's, he said that two thirds of the gas Co.'s capital was in Rothwell parish.

Mr Sanderson thought the maximum price too high, and that 4s. was quite sufficient. The amount of dividend was also too much, he would say not more than five, or at any rate 7½ per cent for old shares.

The chairman said, as a large consumer, the main thing to him was the price of the gas; it did not matter to him whether the Company got 15 or 20 per cent., if the price was as low as he could obtain it. He thought Mr. Sanderson would not like to be only getting 5 per cent. in any business, especially so risky a business as gas-making.

Mr. Holmes was highly satisfied with the remarks of Mr. Hargreaves. At Stourton they had nothing to gain by opposition and a great deal to lose, and the present Bill granted far more than had been asked at the public meeting

Mr. Hargreaves, in reply to a remark of Mr Sanderson's, stated that last time the Co. only made 9 per cent; one per cent. had to be taken out of the reserve fund, to make up a ten per cent dividend. They could make gas as cheaply as anyone of the same consumption but the distribution was so heavy. Replying to Mr. Batty, he said that although no difficulty had been experienced from the Rothwell authorities, the Company had had considerable trouble in getting gas to Lofthouse, Carlton and Robin Hood.

Mr Sanderson said as regards the suggested purchase clause, he had considerably modified his opinion on that subject.

Mr. Batty wanted to know why they should have a Bill at all?

Mr Turner, after recapitulating the amendments, especially drawing attention to the important difference between a maximum price as now fixed, and a standard price, as previously mentioned in the Bill pointed out the necessity of the Company to have a bill in order to protect their large vested interests, and as they had got it so far, it was no use talking as to why they should have a bill at all.

Mr. Batty was very anxious to get the number of candles altered. After some interesting conversation ensued on the advantage and cost of certain non-illuminating gases;-

Mr. J Hargreaves, (who spoke as a non-shareholder) proposed—That should the statement of the chairman of the Gas Company be borne out by the Bill itself, the Board do not oppose the Bill in the House of Lords. The motion was not seconded.

Mr. Turner then moved—That considering the report which Mr. W. Hargreaves has given, and which the Board is justified in accepting as correct, the decision of the matter is not so pressing, and that this meeting do adjourn till the next ordinary meeting, when the Bill is promised to be laid before us. Mr. Sanderson seconded the motion, feeling that it was only right the Board should see the Bill before deciding.

The chairman moved as an amendment, That having heard Mr. W. Hargreaves' statement, the Board do not oppose the Bill of the Rothwell Gas Light Company, now being promoted in Parliament.

Mr. J. Hargreaves seconded the amendment.

Mr. Bramley thought there would not be time to oppose, if put off till the ordinary meeting.

The clerk stated that the last day for lodging petitions was the 23rd of May, so that the following meeting would be too late.

On the amendment being put, there voted the chairman, Messrs. J. Hargreaves, Holmes, Oliver, and Bramley.

For the resolution to adjourn, Messrs. Turner, Sanderson and Batty. Mr. Wm. Hargreaves neutral.

The Bill will not therefore be opposed.

ROTHWELL SCHOOL BOARD.

Last Friday, an ordinary meeting of the above Board was held; present, Messrs. W. Hargreaves, (chairman) J. Batty, J. G. Turner, J. Parker, and the clerk, architect, treasurer and attendance officer.

The minutes of last meetings were read and confirmed.

The clerk submitted the approval of the Department to the plans, specifications, and estimated cost of the new Infants' school at Rothwell Haigh; Mr. Richardson, the architect, also read the conditions of agreement with contractors.

It was then proposed by Mr Parker, seconded by Mr. Turner, that the contractors shall complete the works by the thirty-first day of August, 1882, under a penalty of £5 a week. Carried.

It was also resolved on the motion of Mr. Parker, seconded by Mr. Batty, that the alternative tender for pressed bricks be accepted, at an advance on the estimate of £10. Carried.

The clerk then laid before the Board an estimate of expenditure and receipts for the half-year ending September 29th, 1882.—

The attendance officer reported a long list of bad attenders, a number of whom will be warned, and several summoned.

The wants of the various schools were granted.

THE ASSASSINATIONS.

Numerous arrests have been made, but none of apparent importance, except that of Martin Quinn, arrested at Preston, who admitted being in Phœnix Park at seven o'clock on Saturday night, having left Dublin by the night steamer, and arriving in Preston late on Sunday night. He has stains of blood on his trousers, and bears a resemblance to the description given by the eye-witnesses of the foul deed

The government offer £10,000 to anyone giving such evidence as will lead to the conviction of the murderers. Every means is being used for the discovery of the wretches. From every land, and from all classes of society, including the Irish people especially, come messages of condolence with the bereaved, and horror and reprobation of the deed.

On Tuesday afternoon, amid the mourning of the whole city, the remains of Mr. Thos. H Burke were laid to rest in Glasnevin cemetery.

Yesterday afternoon at half-past two, the simple funeral of Lord F. Cavendish took place in Edensor churchyard, near the magnificent home of his ancestors, Chatsworth House. Besides the Duke of Devonshire, Lady F. Cavendish, and the other members of the sorrowing family, there were present, the Prime Minister and nearly all the members of his cabinet, with about 300 members of the two Houses of Parliament; representatives of Her Majesty, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Edinburgh, and the Duke of Cambridge; deputations from a large number of corporations and institutions; and the tenantry on the ducal estates in England and at Lismore (Ireland.) From 20,000 to 30,000 people witnessed the rites of sepulture of the noble man whose last words almost, spoken before he went on the fatal walk, were, "I have come over here to do as much good as I can."

PARLIAMENT.

Last night Sir William Harcourt, brought on the promised bill for the future repression and punishment of crime in Ireland. The principal features are large powers of search for the apparatus of murder and outrage, of arresting persons who are found out of doors at night and who are unable to give a satisfactory account of themselves, of arresting strangers and unknown persons, and of expelling foreigners whose presence in the country is believed to be dangerous to the public peace. Membership of and participation in secret societies, are offences punishable summarily, also rioting and intimidation. The Lord Lieutenant is to have power to suppress newspapers which are guilty of inciting to unlawful acts. Compensation may also be levied upon districts in which murders or outrages have been committed.

Though drastic and vigorous enough, we believe the bill will be fully endorsed by all who desire the highest good of both countries.

There is nothing more nourishing and warming in cold weather than a cup of really good Cocoa, but the difficulty has been to obtain it pure. This may be secured at a cost of one halfpenny for a large breakfast cup by using Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which goes three times as far as the adulterated and city compounds ordinarily sold, the smallest packet making fourteen breakfast cups of strong Cocoa.

KAY'S LINSEED COMPOUND, a demulcent expectorant, for Coughs and Colds. Sold by all Chemists, 1/1½.

SUPPER.—Last night, Messrs. Charlesworth and Hargreaves' election committee partook of an excellent supper at Mr. James Steel's, Coach and Horses Inn, Rothwell, to celebrate the successful return of their two candidates at the late Local Board election, about 60 persons being present. After the tables had been considerably relieved of their burden, Mr. James Hargreaves was asked to take the chair, which he did. Speeches were made by the chairman and several other gentlemen, all complimenting the committee on the success attending their exertions, and throughout the meeting was a pleasant one.

MR. JOHN BATTY.—A short time ago, it was our pleasure to report that Mr. Batty, our townsman, had received the honour of being elected a fellow of the Royal Historical Society of England. It has now come to our knowledge that he has been solicited to allow his name to be placed on the roll of the Yorkshire Archæological and Topographical Association; and has been unanimously elected a member.

POLICE NEWS.

WEST RIDING COURT.

MONDAY

A GROWING NUISANCE.—George Werthington, John Hood, and James Crawley, three men from Hunslet, were charged with having played at an unlawful game called pitch and toss on the highway. Police sergeant Turton stated that on Sunday he along with three other officers, was on duty at Middleton, and going behind a hedge saw all the defendants and two other men tossing as they came along, and money passed from one to the other. On coming out of their hiding place the men ran away, but witness caught one, and the other two were taken by the other officers. Several letters complaining of such offences had been received by Mr. Superintendent Hall. Police constable Clarke also gave evidence. Mr. Hall said there were so many of such cases that he was obliged to send out a large number of constables every Sunday for the purpose of watching them. He received a large number of letters weekly complaining of these characters. He had laid the present information under the Vagrancy Act, and he asked that these men should be sent to prison, as nothing else would suppress their proceedings. Defendants were ordered to pay 18s 4d each, or ten days in default. Two youths named John Crowther and James William Chadwick, from the same neighbourhood, were charged with a similar offence. Police-sergeant Turton and Police constable Seal saw the defendants tossing for money as they went along the road, while they (the officers) were taking the above three prisoners to the police station. They took the lads with them. Defendants did not deny the charge, and were fined 9s 4d each with costs, or seven days.

MARKETS.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—There was a good attendance of buyers, every department of the market seemed well supplied with stock, and business was somewhat brisker than of late, except for sheep and pigs. There was a rather smaller show of fat beasts, and an entire absence of foreign cattle. Prime animals were scarce and dear, and they met with a brisk sale. The show of sheep (all of which were shorn) was much larger than last week. The show of pigs, especially of small sizes, was large, but as the attendance of buyers was rather thin business was inactive, and prices were in favour of buyers.

CRICKET.

ROTHWELL v. OULTON BREWERY.

The match between the above teams was played last Saturday at Rothwell. The weather was beautifully fine, and the wicket in good condition. The visitors having won the toss chose to bat first, and sent in as their initial representatives Messrs. Wilmot and Jellyman, but they were quickly disposed of, as was all the team, W. Hirst being the only one who made a stand, getting 34 as his score before retiring; he was, however, missed twice in the early part of his innings. A. Fowler was the top score for Rothwell with 8 not out. Tiffany and T. Dobson showed excellent style in the trundling department for the home team, the former taking 6 wickets for 18 runs, while the latter bowler took two wickets for 5 runs Wilmot and Hirst shared the bowling for Oulton.

Hirst's average per wicket being 2.0

OULTON v. GARFORTH.

The Oulton eleven played their first match on Saturday last on the ground of the Garforth Cricket Club. Neither side was fully represented, nevertheless some good cricket was shown, notably the fine innings of G M Abbey for Oulton which was brought to an untimely end through a misunderstanding concerning a run, when Abbey had thoroughly mastered the attack of the opposing bowlers. T West and G Inman also played well for their respective scores. R J Smith and G Inman shared the bowling for Oulton, the former proving most successful by taking 6 wickets for 21 runs. For Garforth, B Wormald and Hemsworth both batted freely, and showed strong hitting powers, each scoring 15; they were however not supported by the rest of the team. J Goodall as usual bowled well being but seldom off the wicket. The afternoon was delightfully fine, and the game most enjoyable, and the Oulton players returned home well satisfied with the result of their first essay for the season of 1882, having headed the score of their opponents by 25 runs. THE WHISPERING GALLERY.

DURING the course of a long life, longer perhaps than that of a large number of the readers of these lines; it is difficult to call to mind any occurrence which has given rise to such an amount of indignation and genuine sorrow as was produced from end to end of England on Sunday last by the frightful news from Ireland, that one of the most atrocious crimes that ever stained the pages of history had been committed on that pleasant Saturday evening in the Phœnix Park, Dublin.

With what startling force now is the warning of Mr. Forster recalled to our minds, but it is too late; two valuable lives have been sacrificed, and the message of peace has been insolently rejected.

Let martial law be proclaimed in Ireland, and let every nook and cranny in the accursed island be searched until the murderers be brought to justice, and a merited, but far too lenient death.

THE mention of murderers calls to mind the case, the ghastly and sickening details of which were unfolded in the Crown Court of the Leeds Town Hall last week, when one of the blackest devils that ever bore the outward semblance of humanity was consigned to the tender mercies of the respected Mr. Marwood, who has certainly never received a more deserving candidate for the fatal necklace. It is said that Brand was rather a pleasant looking man, and quite different in appearance and demeanour from what we should naturally expect anyone capable of such unheard of brutality to be; if so, appearances must be deceitful and should not be relied upon in judging of a person's character.

LOVERS of the game of football, who follow it out of pure love of sport and not for "gate money," will read with interest a letter from Major Marandin, president of the English Association, who was recently appealed to in a dispute which had arisen in this neighbourhood (Manchester.) Major Mandarin says, and rightly too, that the miserable disputes which are now constantly occurring are ruining the game of football and if referees are liable to insult by having their decisions impeached it will become impossible to get gentlemen to accept the office He believes it is the increasing practice of betting upon the results of matches and the introduction of the element of payment or services from the large amounts received as gate money that cause the constantly wrangling over the matches. In fact it is betting, betting professionally, that has tended to kill that disinterested and enthusiastic love of sport that so ardently animated our forefathers and made them take so noble and so pure a pride in all achievements of the field, river and racecourse. Sale and Exchange, May 4, 1882.

THE result of the match at Rothwell last Saturday was a surprise for many people, and numerous excuses have been made for the defeat of the Rothwell eleven, but every reason advanced will apply equally well to the other side, therefore it is advisable to accept the defeat with as good grace as possible, and endeavour to reverse the order of things on the occasion of the return match.

A VERY moderate second team from Hunslet made a frightful example of the Woodlesford men, whose total of 17 bears a marked contrast to the 127 of their opponents.

This is a bad beginning for the village club, but probably there are better things in store in future.

THE eye-sore at the corner of Commercial Street and Church Street is at last vanishing away, and the Co-operative Society have got the site of their new stores pretty well excavated, and begun leading materials on. An old well has been unearthed which had been made in the cellar of a previous dwelling, from which a good length of lead piping was taken.

WHAT glorious weather we are having for farming operations. Surely the sun of prosperity is about to shine on the tillers of the soil, who have had such a dreary time of it for several years.

QUID NUNC.

THE PROPOSED RAILWAY.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

Whether it be high treason or not to speak or write against the proposed line for the benefit of Rothwell and other places, I dont think any one will consider that 'Quid Nunc' has given the opinion of the almost unanimous majority of people in this neighbourhood. This scheme directly connects us with two principal lines in the country; it opens out new and unlimited outlets for our traffic, and thereby foreshadows advance of every kind; it is the only chance open to us, we have petitioned existing companies without success, and have caught at every opportunity to secure railway advantages, but without result. And are we to be pooh poohed by a nondescript writer in the 'gallery'? Let me point him to the enthusiastic meetings of the people, to the thoughtful deliberation of those most deeply concerned, to the handsome list of preliminary contributions, and to the overwhelming evidence which, I understand is collected in favour. This is our one chance, and if we cannot get a direct line to Leeds, (and I dont know that that is the most important item in our wishes) we shall become connected with the railway network, and not have to tramp to Leeds or to Wakefield for our town visits, or be limited in our traffic by our inability to get our goods to their destination

ROTHWELLIAN.

SCARLET FEVER IN ROTHWELL.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

We are being visited at present by a great prevalence of scarlet fever, and many people are talking of the advisability of closing the schools, as a preventative to the spread of the disease, but after giving the matter some consideration, I cannot see how such an act could possibly operate in the way desired. It is my candid opinion that closing the schools would create another very efficient mode of spreading the disease; while the children are at school they are to a very great extent isolated from the disease, as no children from infected houses are allowed at school, but if they are turned into the streets, they mix there daily through with infected children, often with house just recovering, and are thus constantly in extreme danger of becoming themselves infected. Some people talk as if the disease originated wholly and solely in the schools, they think that the moment the school are closed the infection would be stamped out, but sir, I have no hesitation in attributing much of the present prevalence to the extreme carelessness of many parents; what can mothers of large families and in some cases with a baby in arms mean by visiting the death bed of those who have succumbed to this terrible affliction. I think such conduct is simply criminal, and if some of those groups of women who have been heard to remark that 'the schools would be shut up when it was too late,' had exercised a little more common sense in these matters, the present state of things would probably never have been reached.

In conclusion, I think the best place for children while they remain well, is certainly the school, for I am given to understand that the schoolmasters regularly have their premises disinfected, and I am sure they will use every precaution to prevent the increase of the epidemic.

I am, sir.

Yours obediently,

SANUS.

SERVICE OF SONG AT WOODLESFORD

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Sir,

Our chapel friends at Woodlesford, wish me to ask you to kindly record in your valuable paper, that they think it due to give an expression of their sincere and earnest thanks to all those who took part in the Service of Song entitled 'John Ashworth' last Sunday afternoon in the Woodlesford Chapel. With the whole service they were highly gratified. I had the pleasure of being there, and it was to me a happy way of spending part of the interval between the morning and evening services I was appointed to conduct.

Mr. R. Seanor, in a clear and forcible manner read the connective readings, causing many a smile as he referred to some of the incidents that transpired in the good man's life. Mr. C. Ward, who, uniting both life and soul, most ably directed the singing. Mr. J. Naylor's playing kept up a harmonious continuation of musical sounds. delightful to the ear, whilst the choir and their assistants did their part so as to be worthy of the highest praise.

It deserves to be noticed also that the services of all were free, and they further manifested their kindness by contributing, along with the congregation, to make up a good collection amounting to £3 7s 6d, a very helpful result, and gratifying indeed to all concerned in the welfare of the Society at Woodlesford.

Considering their number and circumstances they have themselves done well, as the effort on Sunday will put them into a position to pay up a certain sum, and give them then a privilege to apply to the Chapel Building Committee for a grant and a loan, and thus make their condition an easy one.

The kindness of the Rothwell friends showed a good example, one that may safely be followed, it was the strong helping the weak. The pecuniary aspect of it was good, the reading and rendering of the songs were a treat to all ages, but most instructive to the young, showing a career so varied, from the deepest poverty to a state of affluence, yet constantly leaning to all that was good through all life's changes.

The service was well attended, it being the largest gathering since the chapel was rebuilt, all available space being fully occupied. We recommend the service to everybody, and shall be most happy to see on Sunday afternoon next, the Rothwell sanctuary as well filled as was the one at Woodlesford, to hear a repetition of what the people so much enjoyed.

Yours truly,

S. B.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—These remedies are unequalled throughout the world for bad legs, wounds, foul sores and ulcers. Used according to directions given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Many poor sufferers who have been patients in the large hospitals under the care of eminent surgeons, and have derived little or no benefit from their treatment, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, scurvy and diseases of the skin there is nothing that can be used with so much benefit. In fact, in the worst forms of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, used conjointly, are irresistible.

To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, LIMITED.

The scheme to amalgamate the two Italian operatic houses of London, and to concentrate this form of entertainment within the walls of Covent Garden is about to be brought forward under the most favorable auspices. Practical men of business have taken the matter in hand, plans have been fully discussed, and the details of the prospectus well digested. Some of the highest personages of social life have expressed their acquiescence in the scheme which has already been supported by the promise of large sums of money by intending shareholders. Another Season has paved the way for the accomplishment of the views of those who believe amalgamation the best course to pursue in the interests of both enterprises. It is an open secret that the Italian Opera Season last year at her Majesty's Theatre was not a success, nor did Mr. Mapleson care to risk an Italian Season in the autumn. It has been thought better that Mr. Mapleson, reinforced by certain members of the splendid troupe of Covent Garden, shall confine his energy to the United States, where his experience of American affairs will be at the service of the Royal Italian Opera Company," Covent Garden (Limited). Freed from the limited competition of Her Majesty's Theatre, the whole staff of the Italian Opera singers, and the entire body of Italian Opera goers will be drawn towards Covent Garden, the Prospectus of which house for the forthcoming Season includes the names of the most attractive artists the Italian Operatic Stage can boast. Competition has always been disastrous to Italian Opera, both commercially and from the point of view of art. A large amount has been already subscribed to the Opera Company, Limited, and the Directors have now decided to issue the Prospectus to the public. The Scheme promises to pay from 11 to 16 per cent., and may be worth the consideration of every class of investor, small and large.

OUR VILLAGE CHURCHES AND THEIR SERVICES

No. 3. WOODLESFORD.

As Woodlesford is in close proximity to Oulton and is part of the same township, it seems the more regular course that it should follow the twin village in the list of the churches about which I propose to write. I do not desire to place them side by side for the purpose of shewing any marked contrasts or for setting the one church and its services against the other to the disadvantage of either, for it is contrary to my object to do so.

I wish to place each church and its service about which I write on their own merits, and to speak of them as they have impressed me in the various aspects which may come within the scope of these papers.

If Oulton or part of it is intrinsically pleasant by virtue of some or of all of the attractive features mentioned in the contribution relating to it, Woodlesford is scarcely less pleasant from situation and surroundings. Placed on an elevation overlooking the valley of that "black flowing river," the Aire, it shews to advantage as seen from neighbouring points of view, and at the same time it is a very favourable place of observation for views of other places near and distant. Looking across the valley, we see the higher portions of Swillington with the church tower just above the trees, by which in perspective it seems environed, while on the level plain near the river is Swillington House, and to the left, Leeds-ward, nearly in a line with it the Leventhorp estate extending to Temple Newsam Park, the latter broadly stretching towards Leeds, in a north-westerly direction, and up to Whitkirk northly, and disclosing through openings in the lines of trees portions of the red brick mansion which has its past historic associations, and its more than local modern fame, while beyond may be seen the tower and mimic spire of Whitkirk Church. Then, to say nothing of the views further to the left beyond Temple Newsam or the westerly views beyond Rothwell and up to Middleton Wood and church, what a range we have south and eastwards, Garforth church, Castleford, Ledsham, Kippax, Pontefract Park and church, and, coming nearer home, Methley Park and church, and [illegible] Cliffe Hill, while Oulton seems to [illegible] peacefully below, like a friendly rival [illegible] ally as she is, having interests and ambitions partly independent and partly identical. A considerable portion of the views just enumerated may be seen from the church site which is not at the highest elevation. The commercial characteristics of the neighbourhood are found here in some variety, and comprise a paper mill, (unhappily now, and for some time past, silent), a pottery, and last but much more extensive than the others the well-known brewery of Messrs. Bentley & Co. Here are also the Board Schools and the Mechanics' Institute.

Old Woodlesford, by which term I exclude the new community of cottage rows on the side of the village next to Oulton, consists of houses bordering each side of the public road for the length of about a quarter of a mile with several lanes or roads at right angles to the main road in which there are also tenements, and there are in addition several detached houses of a better class, chief among which is 'Eshald House,' belonging to Mr. H. Bentley, situate in an extensive enclosure pleasantly laid out. The church (All Saints') is towards the lower end of the village, where the railway intersects with a deep cutting, over which an arched stone bridge connects the intersected portions. It was built in 1870, at a cost of a little over £4,000, the funds being provided by public subscriptions. It is a stone building in the Gothic style, and consists of nave, chancel and transepts, with a tower and spire at the south side, the tower containing six bells. The interior is neat and elegant. The endowment fund was provided by a wealthy resident now dead, and is vested in trustees. The stipend is in all about £150 a year, and the present vicar (the second holder of the benefice) is the Rev. A. J. E. Irvin, B.A., of Pembroke College, Oxford, who was previously curate at Rothwell. The services are conducted in the now prevailing style, with the aid of a surpliced choir placed in opposite sections, the reading desk being at the head of the principal choir row to the right, the lectern at the foot of the chancel steps and the pulpit at an angle formed by the chancel and north transept. All the sittings or stalls are on the floor of the nave and transepts, and are free. The organ, which cost between £200 and £300 is at the base of the tower, and is played with care and taste by Mr. Walter Lockwood, a painstaking musician in sympathy with his work. The 'Ancient and Modern' collection of hymns is used, and the service is choral in the usual and full sense of the term as applicable to church services.

The choir contains some good voices, but through lack of numbers the parts are not well balanced nor sufficiently full, so that there is occasionally a want of both precision and power in the singing. This is of course a misfortune rather than a fault to be criticised, and is capable of being remedied in due time by greater numerical strength.

At this church we lose one of the features which gives additional sanctity and reverence to the two churches previously noticed, and which also gives to resident parishioners, whether church-goers or not, a personal if somewhat sentimental interest in the place. There is no burial ground—and when those sorrows which come to all in the form of family bereavements are localised and consecrated in the church-yard, our common griefs seem to find a common representation which gives us a united and abiding interest in the place which holds the remains of those we have loved and lost. We have, however, here what we have not at the other two churches, viz.: a tuneful peal of bells which give out their music joyously and present a time-honoured feature which has long ago and often supplied a moral and a theme to poetry and romance.

'One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,'

Mr. Irvin is a good specimen of the average clergyman. The average clergyman is usually earnest in his work but his earnestness moves in a rather circumscribed course, and does not usually lead to any, even the least departure from a beaten track. He is like one who having to make frequent and regular journeys to a given place, will not leave the dusty hard highway nor vary the route one iota, although the new beauty of unfamiliar wayside flowers might gladden the eye and awaken new sympathies, and the sight of a fairer landscape and a wider field of vision might remove some perhaps involuntarily acquired prejudices, and enlarge the bounds of that spirit of charity which 'vaunteth not itself but rejoiceth in the truth." In his selected sphere and in his work, however, Mr. Irvin is earnest. His reading of the service is distinct, and of course accurate in pronunciation, but somewhat monotonous in tone, and his aspect and demeanour are as grave as the most decorous church goer could wish. He preaches from a manuscript, and uses it unreservedly, but the matter is invariably of a kind to fix and keep the attention during the twenty minutes which the sermon usually occupies. He is often direct and pointed in his reference to and correction of faults, and lapses to which poor humanity is subject. He does not indulge much in simile or in illustration outside Biblical narrative and exhortation, but he gives now and then an apposite poetical quotation not unfrequently from the great preacher for all ages, Shakespeare, to garnish and strengthen his discourse. Here again we have no decided high church manifestations, for the simple cross on the communion table will surely not offend the most rigorous taste for simplicity. We to whom the atonement is the grand fundamental doctrine, hold up the cross as the theme of our warmest ejaculations and the emblem of our best religious hope and faith, and its image at any time in a place devoted to religious worship should be acceptable to the true worshipper.

Perhaps Mr. Irvin's tendencies are in the direction of more pronounced high church forms, but if so, he wisely abstains from any departure towards which he is not likely to carry his congregation with him, and is content to subordinate his own preferences to theirs in matters not possessing a vital importance. One of Mr. Irvin's natural failings is lack of humour. If it exists it is in a latent form and wants developing. Of course we do not wish for quips and jests in the pulpit

> "We seek divine simplicity in him
> Who handles things divine"

But a vein of humour begets a sprightliness of manner which is the more acceptable either in church ministrations or in outside intercourse, and secures more hearty sympathy and co-operation.

The question of stipend scarcely comes within the scope of a notice of this kind, but I cannot resist the opportunity of saying that the amount of the Woodlesford Vicar's income ought to be increased if possible. The office, the social position, and the means of doing good by stealth (without self impoverishment), which is one of the clergyman's unwritten duties and privileges demand a more liberal income from this benefice than what is at present derived.

Referring again and in conclusion to the services, if any of the readers of this contribution who are not members of the congregation wish to enjoy an occasional change by attending another service than that to which they are accustomed, I am sure they will find in the services at Woodlesford Church much to interest and little if anything to be dissatisfied with, and they may very appropriately acknowledge their satisfaction to their own consciences by a liberal contribution to the offertory which is devoted to current church expenses and does not always meet the demands upon it.

RAILWAY BILLS.

The Hull, Barnsley and West Riding has been on all the week, and the end does not yet seem in view.

It is quite possible that the East and West Yorkshire Union Railway will not be before the Committee till after Whitsuntide. All the evidence is complete, and the probabilities of its passing are very great. Several gentlemen interested in the undertaking are now in London in readiness, should the Bill come on earlier than is at present anticipated.

The Church Fenton, Cawood, and Wistow Railway Extension to Drax, and the West Lancashire Railway Bill were read a third time in the House of Commons last night.

SERVICE OF SONG.

Last Sunday afternoon, the service of song entitled "Gems from the life of John Ashworth," was given in the Wesleyan Chapel, Rothwell, which was nearly filled. Mr. J. R. Seanor gave the connective readings in his usual clear and effective manner; Mr. C. Ward wielded his baton in the musical part of the service, being ably assisted by Mr. J. Naylor at the organ.

The many vicissitudes of John Ashworth's life, his deep interest in, and indebtedness to Sunday Schools, and the wide-spread knowledge of his rise from a poor ragged lad to become a philanthropist of the first class, all tend to make this service specially interesting and popular.

After a description of the low state of morality in Rochdale and the adjoining village of Cutgate, where Mr. Ashworth was born, the first hymn was sung. Then follows the story of his poverty, and of the "woolsheet" pinafore. "Sabbath bells" is a pleasing piece, with an illustrated chorus, which was nicely done. "The helping hand" is succeeded by a school story, after which comes "The weavers of life," with a duett by Mr. John Blackburn and Miss Abbishaw. The day for the giving of the highest prize in school is nearing, and John has no clogs to cover his feet; he asks his wealthy relative for a couple of shillings to purchase a pair, but is sternly refused, and goes sadly to bed. "Twill not be long" is next sung, and the bare-footed lad is depicted receiving the prize. Then comes the song "Longing for rest," and the tale is told of John's first purchase of a book, and of his hard-earned manner of paying for it. The pretty "Scatter smiles" was next rendered, while the biography proceeds to detail his marriage and conversion, followed by the most touching piece in the book, "When the mists have rolled away" by Miss C. A. Seanor, and chorus.

His first attempts to speak for Christ are narrated, succeeded by the gladsome song, "Wake the song of Jubilee." Mr. Ashworth having now commenced business, anticipated a bright future, but just at the moment, his wife took ill, and began to fail. Here comes in another piece which will have deeply impressed all who heard it, "The shadow of the Rock," its rendering being very good. Just after the description of her death comes the quartett, "Hark! that swelling, solemn music," by Miss Abbishaw, Messrs. J. Idle, J. Blackburn and D. Tilley; the rendering of this was also excellent, the time being well kept and the humming chorus very effective. John Ashworth's great work was now commencing and the Chapel for the Destitute was built and opened. After the chorus "Come ye that labour," Miss Hampson sang very prettily and correctly "Mother's Love," with chorus. After further describing the good man's work and life, the tasteful new tune to the old hymn, "There is a happy land" was well given, and the last few hours of the good man's life are read, and the story closed by the tale of his happy death.

As has been intimated, the singing was well done, and several appropriate variations of tone and emphasis were introduced.

The collection of £2 8s. is for the payment of the prizes lately presented to the Sunday scholars who have made the highest attendances.

CRICKET.

CHAP. II.

FORMATION AND MANAGEMENT OF A CLUB.

In most of our Yorkshire villages we find that the cricket club occupies a prominent position amongst the various societies and institutions, and nearly everybody takes an interest in it, from the squire at "The Hall," down to the humblest labourer on his estate, or the hardworking collier at the neighbouring pit, whilst the little urchins at school are looking anxiously forward to the time when they shall be old enough to take an active part in the matches, and belong to the eleven of whose doings they are so proud.

What cricketer has not noticed in passing a group of lads playing cricket in the road, how on his approach, with what earnestness they enter into the game, and how they strive to exhibit their best skill with bat and ball, all the while casting furtive glances in his direction, and with what an amount of pleasure and satisfaction, they receive a word of approval from him, especially if he happens to be one of the village "cracks," whose exploits form the staple topic of their juvenile discussions. It is extremely probable that an occasional five minutes spent in watching the roadside play of the youngsters might be of no little advantage to the future cricket of the village, as it would enable the watcher to detect the signs of coming skill and excellence, and by a judicious hint or practical explanation he might sow the seed which would in after years ripen into the mature fruit of practiced efficiency.

There is probably no other game, unless it be football, which occupies such a place in the estimation of Englishmen as cricket, and as the former is confined to the winter months, the two great games do not clash with each other, but go hand in hand, and when the reign of cricket is over King Football assumes the soveregnity until he in turn has to give place.

It has been previously remarked that every village possesses its cricket club, and this being the case, it may be thought needless to say anything about the formation of a club as a fait accompli, but still a few hints on the matter may not be thrown away.

It is an accepted doctrine that the management of a club should be placed in the hands of a president, one or more vice-presidents, treasurer, secretary, and committee; and great care should be exercised in the selection of these officials, as upon them almost entirely depends the welfare of the organisation. It is the practice in many clubs to select the clergyman as the president, but although that gentleman's name will undoubtedly lend a certain amount of prestige, yet in a district where the dissenting element prevails, it may be advisable to have a layman in that office, under whom both parties may meet in one common cause. If possible the president should be a gentleman of position and influence, and one who may be relied upon to use that influence on behalf of his club, by enlisting in its service the aid, pecuniary and otherwise, of his friends in the neighbourhood.

The President will moreover, if he takes a proper interest in the club, stimulate the players to exertion by the offer of an annual prize, such as a bat, cricket bag, or other useful article.

The office of vice-president is of course of minor importance to the foregoing, still at the same time it is as well in choosing gentlemen for the position, to select those who are likely to give an actice assistance to the club, both personally and financially. It to often happens that the president and vice-presidents of a cricket club are satisfied with allowing their names to appear at the head of affairs and paying an annual subscription, but this kind of support is not calculated to be of much assistance to a struggling organisation. It is palpably the duty of these gentlemen to preside or watch over the working of the whole body and by identifying themselves closely with it, create an enterprising and hopeful spirit amongst the members.

The want of this active co-operation on the part of the higher officials, in many cases prevents a cricket club from attaining that heathy and vigorous condition without which prosperity is not to be expected.

The vice-presidents may also bind themselves to the working members by giving prizes for competition.

The treasurer should without doubt be a gentleman of assured financial stability, and both able and willing in cases of pressing necessity to advance to the club as much as will enable it to tide successfully over any temporary difficulty or need; such contingencies will occasionally arise quite unforeseen and if they can be met in the manner indicated, a feeling of confidence in the management cannot fail to be established, which will cause every member to use the utmost endeavour to repay to the treasurer the sum that he has so opportunely advanced. If possible, it is desirable that the treasurer should be or have been a cricketer himself, he will then be able to judge from his own knowledge of the requirements of the game, whether the finances are administered in a judicious and economical manner.

ROTHWELL v. HOLBECK RECREATION GROUND C. C.

The weather last Saturday was again most favourable for enjoying the great summer game, and a fair number of spectators assembled in the Holbeck Recreation Ground to witness the above match. Holbeck defended the wicket during the first half of the game, and piled on the score until one past the century had been reached. The fielding of the visitors was excellent, especially during the early part of the match. F Green made two good catches at long on. The best bowling average this week again falls to T. Dobson, who took 6 wickets for 42 runs, being 7 per wicket. C. Tiffany and A. Fowler, went to bat first for the visitors and the figures on the telegraph board showed 34 runs had been made before they were separated; the umpire giving his verdict against C. Tiffany as thrown out which was not however satisfactory to everybody. After this no stand was made until the last two men were in, when they managed to put on 20 before retiring, Z. Ellis carrying out his bat.

OULTON v. POTTERNEWTON.

Played at Potternewton on Saturday in splendid weather and in the presence of a select company of spectators. The visitors was first to handle the willow and were all disposed of for the small total of 44, G. Inman being the only one to make a stand, his 19 being obtained by sound cricket. Butterworth was very successful in the bowling department, securing 8 of the visitors' wickets. The home team sent in the brothers Heaton to the bowling of Smith and Inman. They both played steady cricket for 14 overs and runs came very slowly. Barber commenced bowling vice Smith, and soon after the desired separation was effected by Inman through the instrumentality of E Boothroyd. A "rot" set in, Barber's trundling being irrestible, he taking the next three wickets in four balls, and securing 7 wickets for 6 runs. The home eleven were disposed of for 39, leaving Oulton winners by 5 runs. Subjoined is the score:—

LEEDS INFIRMARY.

From a report for the past year which has just reached us, it appears that 8570 in patients and 14043 out-patients have been treated in this valuable institution, of which 1363 and 1343 respectively were from places not in Leeds or Leeds townships. The entire cost was £12,840, the receipts £14 996, which enables the committee to wipe off the debt at the beginning of the year, and close the account with £400 in hand. The principal advance in receipts, has, we are happy to find been from workpeople, who have raised £1785 or £575 more than the previous year. We would specially commend this movement to all, although we are proud to find the workpeople under Messrs. J. & J. Charlesworth subscribed £63 0s 5d, the fifth in the list of largest amounts, Messrs. Marshall & Co., (£85), Briggs, Son, & Co., (£83), Midland Railway Company, (£83), and Fowler & Co., (£66) being alone above them.

Adding to this £63, the collections on Harvest Sunday £7 0 0, the Oddfellows service £11 0 0, and the proceeds of a football match £3 13. Rothwell occupies no unenviable position in the honorable list. Several firms and gentlemen also subscribe to the charity, while contributions of fruit, flowers, linen, clothes, books and magazines are acknowledged most gratefully. There are also the following amounts from

The list of patients from this district are as follows:

Woodlesford	7	23
Carlton	7	4

The cost has been for in-patients £2 19s 8½d each, and for out patients 1s 5d each. Of the 858 in-patients 509 were discharged well, 80 unrelieved, and 69 died a mortality of 10 per cent, on such cases; the death rate on the whole of the in-patients being 5·48, or deducting 60 who died within 48 hours of admission, 3 94.

AURORA BICYCLE CLUB.

A meeting of the above club was held last night at the club house, (Working Man's Club) Rothwell, for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing season. A good attendance of members were secured. Mr. Ledgard (Carlton) was asked to occupy the chair, which he accordingly did. In his opening remarks he congratulated the members on the fact that whereas two months ago there were only five badged members, now there are 13. He was glad to see such a good number present, and trusted that during the season they would stick to each other in weal (wheel) or woe, and if any should happen a misfortune, that he would have the help and sympathy of the others.

The election of officers was next proceeded with, with the following result:—

President—Mr Ledgard, Carlton

Captain—Mr John Middlemiss, Swillington

Sub-Captain—For this post there undoubtedly requires a good rider, and it was therefore resolved that a race from Wakefield to Rothwell, viâ Stanley and Oulton should decide. The race is fixed to take place on Saturday, June 10th, start from Wakefield at six o'clock.

Bugler—Mr John R Seanor, Rothwell

Vice-bugler—Mr J Waterhouse, Swillington

Treasurer—Mr Fred Seanor, Rothwell

Secretary—Mr Walter Hargreaves, Church-field, Rothwell

There have been club runs every Saturday for the last month or two, for the most part which have been very successful. Any rider who wishes to join the club should give his name to one of the members, who will then bring it before the next meeting.

LEEDS ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL CLUB.

A meeting to form the above club was held last night, at the Old George Hotel, Leeds, Mr Ashton in the chair. Mr Smith, of Meanwood, one of the deputation to arrange about the ground, informed the meeting that he had received the terms on which they might use the Holbeck Recreation Ground, which were to guarantee 40 members, and one-third of the gate money, the club to pay all advertising expenses. It was resolved to accept the offer.

It was also resolved that the terms of membership be as follows:—Persons residing in the borough 5 0
" " out of " " 3 6

Mr Ashton was elected secretary, and a committee was chosen to conduct the affairs during the coming season.

MARKETS.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—We had a large number of fat beasts on offer to-day, and they included 12 pens of Jutland, 15 pens of American, and 10 of Irish, the remainder being from the North. Rather more activity prevailed and better sorts were especially in good demand. We cannot, however, quote any alteration on late rates. There was a good clearance of better qualities. We may state that Mr. H. Boasyman, cattle dealer, Kelso, showed 16 extraordinary fine short-horn bullocks, fed by R. Scott, Esq., Philip haugh, Kelso. One of them was sold to go to Haward Show, Lancashire. Trade in mutton was rather quieter, butchers holding out for reduced prices. This, however, they did not obtain to any great extent, and dealers were able to secure last week's prices. Lambs made 1s to 1s 1d per lb. A moderate supply of fat calves; a fair trade in pigs, at about last week's quotations, anything good meeting with a ready sale.

No. of fat beasts, this week, 1776, last week, 1600
" sheep " 5000, " 5000
" milch cows &c " 120,

Prices were as follows:—

Fat beasts, 8d to 8½d per lb.
Fat calves, 9d per lb.
Lean beasts, £10 to £17 each.
Milch cows, £16 to £28 each.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT TO A CHILD.—On Tuesday, a child named John Oakey, two years of age, whose parents live at Astley, near Woodlesford, was admitted to the Leeds General Infirmary suffering from a fracture of the right leg and of the right hand. The little fellow had strayed on the line running from Bower's colliery to the river side, and had been knocked down and run over by an engine. His leg had to be amputated.

PRINCE LEOPOLD'S PIANO.

The marked disposition in Prince Leopold to cultivate musical taste will naturally attract much attention to the character of the piano that has been presented to him. The instrument was on view yesterday at the makers', Messrs. Brinsmead & Sons Wigmore Street, London, and is to-day to be forwarded to Windsor Castle. Its ebonised case is designed to accord with the other furniture of the Princess Helen's boudoir. It is decorated in Adam's style, with allegorical figures and garlands of flowers. The qualities of the Brinsmead piano have been rapidly gaining ground of late. They have been testified to within the past few years by Rubinstein and Gounod, the latter of whom remarks upon their unusual capacity for permitting the finest gradation of sound. Numbers of other less distinguished pianists and composers have come to recognise the excellence of the contrivances introduced by the makers, and no one having any mechanical skill can fail to perceive the great power and precision which the simplicity of the action gives over all the other more common methods. The points gained by Messrs. Brinsmead are unique. In the first place, the stroke on the hammer is more sudden, and its retirement after striking more complete; and in the second place, the mechanism is so arranged that the depression of the key to the smallest appreciable extent will make the note sound. Further, however, in this connection, the arrangement permits of a most valuable addition to the possibilities of execution. In ordinary pianos, if the key be depressed and the note struck it is impossible to repeat the stroke without first permitting the key to return to its normal place. In Brinsmead's pianos it is necessary only to permit the key to return one eighth of an inch to enable the operator to repeat the stroke. This quality accordingly permits the pianist to repeat a note with unusual rapidity and precision without any extraordinary effort; and since the result has been achieved not only without any additional mechanism, but by simplifying and reducing the complexity of that commonly in use, the invention may be regarded as an unmixed good.

It is somewhat difficult to describe this mechanism without diagrams, but we may say that its chief point consists in the hammer being held firmly by the check after it has struck the blow on the string. When this has been even partially attained previously, the repetition has been sacrificed, as it was necessary when the hammer was held 'in check' to raise the finger completely off the key, allowing it to rise to a level with the others, before the action was completely reinstated and ready for a second blow. In this action, however, as we have stated, a repetition of the note can be obtained even when the key is pressed down to within an eighth of an inch of its utmost limit. The top of the 'hopper' being bevelled allows it to 'escape' freely, and assists in readjustment of the action. This also obviates the necessity of having a space between the hopper and hammer, which, through striking against the leather on the butt of the hammer, in a very short time produces that 'rattling' so disagreeable to pianoforte players. This action having no space between the hopper and hammer, the hopper simply presses against the butt, and having no sharp corners to scrape against it, the friction is reduced to a minimum, the blow is rendered direct and uniform, and intermediate percussion between the finger on the key and the blow of the hammer on the string is entirely avoided, whilst the almost entire absence of friction of working surfaces ensures good wear even with the hardest work. The spring is at one end fastened into the bottom of the hopper, and at the top is held by a silk loop which passes through a slot in the top of the hopper, where it is attached to the under part of the hammer butt. Its peculiar position with the aid of the bevel, causes the hammer and hopper to be drawn into their respective positions, serving all the purposes that three, sometimes four springs are often used for. This renders the use of a complication of pieces and centres quite unnecessary. The stroke of the hammer on the string is so direct from the key, and the escapement so instantaneous, that a far more powerful blow, and consequently greater volume and richness of tone, is produced than in the ordinary piano. It is impossible for the hammer to remain against the string and stop the tone after the blow has been struck, as the button against which the arm at the bottom of the hopper presses, forces the sticker quite clear of the hammer butt. This is an important improvement, as the ordinary action has many hinges and coverings of vellum, cloth, and leather, which attract moisture, and in a damp room soon become stiff and swollen. By this action the blow is so certain and easily regulated in playing that the greatest delicacy or utmost power and brilliancy can immediately be produced without the practice and effort that have hitherto been absolutely necessary. The absence of complication in springs and pieces of mechanism causes the touch to be extremely light, and gives it an elasticity that lends a new charm to it as well as giving it a firm, equal pressure. It can be regulated to any degree of lightness, and still retains its firm elastic resistance to the finger, without tiring the player. The extreme simplicity of the mechanism, combined with the absence of friction, insures this action keeping in order, and wearing far longer than the ordinary one.

Another improvement in this piano consists in a mechanical action for sustaining the sound of any given note or notes. The depression of a third pedal during the time a key is held down will cause the tone of that note to be sustained so long as the foot is on the pedal. This effect has been produced before by other makers, but not by positive mechanical action. Strings and wires and other elastic contrivances have been used for this purpose. Mr. Brinsmead has invented a simple wedge arrangement that it would be very difficult to wear out or displace, and the effect is admirable, especially for sacred music, where great richness is desired in an accompaniment, associated with precise accentuation in the treble.

We feel sure the result will be the increased popularity of a maker who has done more than any other in recent times for the simplification and perfection of the mechanism of the pianoforte. When it is remembered that the tone of an instrument depends almost entirely upon the rapidity and precision of the stroke of the hammer upon the wire, too much attention cannot be given to what is technically known as 'the action,' and it is in this that the Brinsmead piano specially excels.—The Glasgow News, April 25th, 1882.

ENGLISH PIANO FOR THE KING OF PORTUGAL.—Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons, of London, have specially manufactured for the Palace of the King of Portugal, in accordance with his Majesty's commands, an oblique pianoforte, in a handsome dull black case, decorated with cupids and garlands of flowers in the Adam's style.—Daily Chronicle.

ECONOMY IN DRESS.—Until Mrs. Leach produced her 'Family Dressmaker,' with its accompanying cheap paper Paterns, mothers and daughters were unable to manufacture their own and children's dresses. Now, however, any moderately clever needlewoman, by the aid of Mrs. Leach's Patterns and a Sewing-Machine, can produce all the articles required by the household, at a considerable saving.—Vide Christian Globe.

QUERY?—Upon a stone fire place in the west end of the old house lately pulled down (as noticed in last week's issue) were cut the antique letters R. L., probably the initials of the name of the owner of the house when that addition to it was made. Can any of our readers make out who it was, and the date of his or her existence?

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr Epps, has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette—Make simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in Packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence for afternoon use.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoas? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesome and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

THE WHISPERING GALLERY.

THE splendid report of the Blackburn Rovers Football Club ought to be a stimulus to our local players. During the past season they have won thirty-three matches, drawn six, and only lost two. They have also scored 204 goals, against forty-two, a record unequalled by any other team. The total receipts, including a balance of £134 from the previous year, were £1821, and £55 were carried forward.

"ROTHWELLIAN" completely misunderstands the reference to the new railway scheme which appeared in this section of the Rothwell Times of the 5th instant. The notion that the opinion then expressed represented or was intended to represent, the feeling of the great majority of the local public, is as fallacious as the idea that the railway will confer an instalment of the millenium upon this locality.

It is a very difficult matter for anyone to express an opinion on Rothwell questions without running the risk of instant demolition at the hands of some wrathful scribe, 'nondescript' or otherwise, who is prepared at a moment's notice to run a muck against anything and anybody.

THE treaty of Kilmainham is a highly satisfactory piece of business certainly; things must have come to a pretty pass when the Prime Minister of England has to seek the assistance of imprisioned rebels in order to carry on the government in Ireland. If Mr. Parnell is able to put an end to murder and outrage in his native country, why has he not interfered sooner? Two answers can be given to this question, neither of which is creditable to the parties concerned in the transaction. Either Mr. Parnell has no power over the midnight (and daylight) assassins who infest the country, or he has hitherto refrained from using his influence over them in the hope (which has apparently been realized) that the government would eventually knuckle down before the determined attitude of red-handed rebellion. In the one case it can be asked, why trouble about the help of Mr. Parnell at all? The answer is not far to seek; to retain the Irish vote at elections and in Parliament. In the other case, if Mr. Parnell has all this time been able to put an end to outrages, and has allowed them to continue in order to serve his own ends, why then an alliance with such a leader will for ever redound to the discredit of Mr Gladstone and his government.

THE North West Riding Election is regarded by both parties as a test of the feeling of the country on the policy of the government, but it is scarcely to be expected that the majority of nearly four thousand votes obtained by the Liberals in 1880 will be entirely absorbed by the Conservatives on this occasion. It is probable that a considerable gain will be credited to the latter, but it would be almost hoping against hope to anticipate a victory in the face of such great odds.

THE reporter of the Leeds Daily News who interviewed the father and mother of the victim of Osman Otto Brand, must have been hard up for something to do, and the editor of the paper must have been very short of "copy" when a whole column of hashed up evidence was published on Tuesday evening; nearly everything that the reporter elicited from the poor people had been previously told in the Leeds Crown Court and reported in the newspapers a fortnight ago, and it is nothing more or less than a downright imposition to sell papers containing such rubbish.

THE Australian cricketers have opened their account very favourably; the performance of Massie in scoring 206 out of 262 while he was at the wickets is something like a "best on record" and will do much towards ensuring the financial success of the tour, as the British public will now be anxious to have a look at such a hard hitter and rapid scorer.

THE housewives are begining to ask when the Local Board is going to commence watering the streets. The dust is becoming very unpleasant, and an artificial shower now and then would be very agreeable.

OUR Local Authorities both at Rothwell, and at Woodlesford and Oulton have issued cautions with which the walls have been plentifully placarded this week. At Rothwell scarlet fever seems to be rather on the increase, and Dr. Glaister very properly issues a poster setting forth the legal aspect of the matter with the fines which may be imposed for spreading the disease; and also gives plain directions for isolation and disinfection. It is greatly to be desired that the practice of which "Sanus" writes, should, as far as regards children, and women having having little children at home, be discontinued, as there is no more certain way of catching the disease than by contagion with persons so suffering.

THE stories that have been going the round of the gossipers about the heavy cost of last half-year's water due to the Corporation from the Woodlesford and Oulton Authority seems to have some foundation, as Mr. Schofield has issued bills offering 10s. reward for such information as will lead to a conviction of any person illegally or surrepititiously using town's water.

IT would have been a pity to lose any of this splendid weather for building, and Mr. Stainer appears to have thought the same, and is vigorously prosecuting his work for the new school at Stourton. Four months is none too long to have it completed, and that it appears, is the fiat of the School Board.

THE anticipated fracas at the special Local Board meeting has not come off after all. Although Mr. Turner laid down his case in a temperate and concise manner, Mr. W. Hargreaves must have realized intense pleasure in keeping his tongue still while everybody had their say against the Bill and then gradually to let out the modifications which had actually taken place, and which, many consider, have gone further than the Liberal Association asked or expected. After all the strong things that have been said about the Gas Co., its worthy chairman must have felt that his victory on Wednesday night counterbalanced all the troubles of the past.

QUID NUNC.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills—These remedies are unequalled throughout the world for bad legs, wounds, foul sores, and ulcers. Used according to directions given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Many poor sufferers who have been patients in the large hospitals under the care of eminent surgeons, and have derived little or no benefit from their treatment, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, scurvy and diseases of the skin there is nothing that can be used with so much benefit. In fact, in the worst forms of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, used conjointly, are irresistible.

It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke, "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have their skins blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. The more delicate the skin the quicker its ruin. THE ALBION MILK AND SULPHUR SOAP is the purest, the whitest, and most purifying of all soaps, by its purifying action taking away and preventing all pimples, blotches, and roughness. It is recommended by the entire medical profession as the most elegant preparation for the skin that is known. A boon to sensitive skins. THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, LIMITED.

The scheme to amalgamate the two Italian operatic houses of London, and to concentrate this form of entertainment within the walls of Covent Garden is about to be brought forward under the most favorable auspices. Practical men of business have taken the matter in hand, plans have been fully discussed, and the details of the prospectus well digested. Some of the highest personages of social life have expressed their acquiescence in the scheme which has already been supported by the promise of large sums of money by intending shareholders. Another Season has paved the way for the accomplishment of the views of those who believe amalgamation the best course to pursue in the interests of both enterprises. It is an open secret that the Italian Opera Season last year at her Majesty's Theatre was not a success, nor did Mr. Mapleson care to risk an Italian Season in the autumn. It has been thought better that Mr. Mapleson, reinforced by certain members of the splendid troupe of Covent Garden, shall confine his energy to the United States, where his experience of American affairs will be at the service of the Royal Italian Opera Company, Covent Garden (Limited). Freed from the limited competition of Her Majesty's Theatre, the whole staff of the Italian Opera singers, and the entire body of Italian Opera goers will be drawn towards Covent Garden, the Prospectus of which house for the forthcoming Season includes the names of the most attractive artists the Italian Operatic Stage can boast. Competition has always been disastrous to Italian Opera, both commercially and from the point of view of art. A large amount has been already subscribed to the Opera Company, Limited, and the Directors have now decided to issue the Prospectus to the public. The Scheme promises to pay from 11 to 15 per cent., and may be worth the consideration of every class of investor, small and large.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

The ordinery meeting of the above Board took place last Monday, present—J. Charlesworth Esq. (chairman) Messrs. W. Hargreaves, Holmes, J. Hargreaves, J. Batty, J. Oliver, J. Sanderson, S. Bramley, J. Turner, and the Clerk, Medical Officer, Collector, Treasurer, and Inspector.

Previous to reading the minutes, Mr. Sanderson enquired if the amended Bill of the Gas Co. had been laid on the table according to the resolution of last meeting.

Mr. W. Hargreaves stated that a copy of the Bill was sent to the Clerk immediately on their receipt, and had been seen by the Chairman as well. He believed the Board would find his statement substantiated by the clauses of the amended Bill.

The Clerk having produced the Bill, the several clauses which have been amended were read and generally approved.

Clause 4, relating to "artificial light" is struck out entirely.

Clause 28, alters the rate of dividend payable to 10 per cent on old shares and seven per cent on new. Instead of a "standard" rate, the sums are to be the "maximum" amount of dividend.

Clause 29 fixes the "maximum" price of gas to be five shillings. The standard rate of 5s. 5d. and the sliding scale are abolished.

Clause 36 allows not more than one per cent of the paid up capital to be placed as an insurance fund, against accident, strikes or other risks.

Clause 38 except so far as relates to any reserve fund at present existing, no sum shall be carried to reserve fund as provided in the previous Bill.

Clause 57 is a new clause giving power to Edmund Calverley, Esq., and his heirs or assigns, to make such railways, bridges, drains, &c., over or under the Co.'s pipes as he may desire. providing fourteen days' notice is given of such intention, and any damage or alteration caused by such work to be made good by the said Edmund Calverley or his assigns, &c.

Clause 63. All gas supplied to balance a column of water not less than six tenths of an inch from midnight to sunset, and eight tenths of an inch from sunset to midnight.

Mr J. Hargreaves then proposed that the minutes as read be confirmed. Mr. Sanderson had no objection whatever, to second the resolution, since hearing the amended Bill. Carried,—Mr. W. Hargreaves being neutral.

Mr. Sanderson had a joke with Mr. W. Hargreaves, as regards the paragraph of Quid Nunc in the Rothwell Times, relating to the Gas Bill, and his victory after the opposition which has been raised. He suggested that the writer was the organ of the chairman of the Gas Co. but Mr. Hargreaves of course denied all knowledge of the gentleman, and in proof of his sometimes being opposed to his opinions, mentioned the objectionable paragraph of a fortnight ago on the railway, and which inspired "Rothwellian's" pen the following week. Mr. Charlesworth jocosely intimated that they were arranging for a Whispering Gallery for their works, to which the editor responded that the telephone of the honorable chairman might sometimes be very useful to Quid Nunc. This agreeable bit of "chaff" having very pleasantly broken the often dull monotony of the meetings, the members again settled down to business.

TELEPHONE—The clerk reported that having written to the Postmaster General giving the Board's consent to the laying of telephonic wires for the use of Messrs J. & J. Charlesworth on condition of his paying a rate on the poles fixed on the roads of the Board, he had received a reply stating that the Postmaster General paid no rates at all for any telegraph or telephone poles.

It appears that the rates which could formerly be charged on the Telegraph Companies, are no longer in force since the Government purchased the telegraph business.

SEWAGE WORKS.—Mr. Jowitt, clerk of the works, presented his seventeenth report, from which it appears all the iron pipes through the beck have been laid and securely jointed, as well as a number of ordinary drain pipes in Cross Street. Connections have also been made with Mr. Newsome's property in conformity with the regulations. A quantity of material has been received from Messrs. Brook & Sons, of Huddersfield.

Mr. J. Hargreaves said it would be advisable to have the connections in the property adjoining the beck and in Cross Street, made as soon as possible, as the ground where the contractors are now working seems completely saturated with the contents of old drains, and is most obnoxious. He thought the influence of the Board should be used to induce people in this locality to connect at once. The matter was referred to the Sanitary and Sewage Committee.

HIGHWAYS.—Mr. W. Hargreaves complained of the state of roads under the bridges on the Leeds and Wakefield and Leeds and Barnsdale roads, and that the Midland Railway Co. ought to be called on to repair the roads. He asked that the clerk should be prepared to say by next meeting what powers the Board have in the matter.

The clerk promised to look into the subject.

Mr. J. Hargreaves pressed the necessity of having the levels and kerbing for Church Street done as soon as possible, and would like the Highway Committee to undertake that and the widening of the bridge as early as they could.

Mr. J. Hargreaves urged the necessity of having the roads and streets watered; the dust had been unbearable, and something definite ought to be done to-night.

Mr. Holmes reported that the Highway Committee had been entrusted with the matter, and that Mr. Oliver and he had seen a barrel which they thought very suitable, and with some necessary additions, would meet their requirements; they had not, however, seen their fellow-committee men, and did not feel prepared to purchase without consulting them. Mr. Oliver supported Mr. Holmes' description of the barrel, which he thought was a capital article for a second-hand one. Mr. W. Hargreaves urged that immediate steps should be taken for its purchase and repair. The Highway Committee undertook to complete the matter at once.

Mr. W. Hargreaves enquired what was the cost of watering the streets last summer. The clerk promised to reply at the next meeting, when it is anticipated the watering of the streets will be considered.

FINANCE.—Mr. Price, the collector, having prepared the rate as passed last meeting, the form for laying a general district rate of 1/8 in the £ was ordered to be signed by five members as usual; on the motion of Mr. W. Hargreaves and Mr. S. Bramley.

The chairman enquired at what amount the Finance Committee had put the water income this year. It was intimated that there would be some balance of income, but as the 1/8 rate hardly covered the anticipated expenditure, it had not been reckoned in the estimate.

Mr. Holmes moved that the overseers of Rothwell, Rothwell Haigh and Royds Green be requested to assess and value the whole of the water mains passing through the Board's district. Mr. W. Hargreaves seconded the motion, which was carried.

On the motion of Mr. J. Hargreaves and Mr. Oliver, cheques were granted for Messrs. Brook & Sons and Mr. Lawton's accounts.

The collector had received and paid over to the treasurer for water rate £31 3s. 6d.

SLAUGHTER-HOUSES.—Mr. Turner reported the result of the Committee's visits to Mr. W. Clayton's, Mr. W. Brown's and Mr. O. Brown's slaughter-houses, with all of which they were generally well satisfied, Mr. Clayton's being spoken of as quite a model. Both the Medical Officer and the Committee had found these premises in a much better state than they expected, the doctor stating that there were few slaughter-houses in large towns so well kept.

HEALTH REPORT.—Dr. Glaister, medical officer, read his monthly report as follows:—

To the chairman and members of the Rothwell Local Board.

Gentlemen,

We have had registered in this district during the past 4 weeks, 10 deaths (6 male and 4 females) and 10 births (6 males and 4 females), during the corresponding period of last year there were 5 deaths and 10 births.

Scarletina has caused 3 deaths, and there is one death registered as due to rotheln, a hybrid disease, caused by the combined action of the two poisons of scarletina and measles. The other causes of death are 1 female aged 28, rheumatic fever and endocarditis; 1 male 21 years, phthisis; 1 male 53 years, found drowned; 1 male 51 years, heart disease; 1 male 81 years, old age; and 1 male 10 months, meningitis. Scarlet fever still remains with us and progresses at the rate of 4 or 5 fresh cases every week. As there is special danger of infection arising from mild cases not under medical surpervision.

I have arranged with Mr. Harms and Mr. Thompson and these gentlemen kindly supply me with a weekly list of all children away from school on account of sickness. As evidence of the utility of this measure, I may mention that it was found on calling at the respective houses, two children named in the list were suffering from fever. No children from houses where fever has been will be received at school without a medical certificate.

JOHN GLAISTER, M.B. & C.M.,
Medical Officer of Health.

He had to report nine new cases of scarlet fever. Until Saturday, he had not heard of any fresh families been attacked, but since Saturday there had been three other families afflicted with it.

Mr. Glaister said that in any new case he at once called and gave a few directions, if not his own case, and requested the parents to let him know when their medical man considered the patient convalescent, and he would see that the room and bedding were disinfected. He considered this a better plan than closing the schools.

In reply to the chairman and other gentlemen the doctor did not know of any cases in the surrounding villages. The disease was not spreading rapidly, but continued to attack fresh houses. Scarlet fever is not caused by bad drains or by heat, but is always transmitted from case to case. Bad smells might increase the malignity of the attack, but would not originate it. It was a very objectionable practice to let children go to the funerals of persons dying from the disease, and bedding ought not to be exposed, till thoroughly disinfected.

The chairman thought that any persons exposing infected bedding ought to be dealt with in strong measures so as to prevent such dangerous practices.

In reply to Mr. Batty, the doctor believed the people generally did the best they could to prevent the spread of the disease.

WATER.—Mr. S. Batty had an interview with the Board on the subject of the charge for water to his premises, which at present reached 1s. a week. As he had no use for town's water for the shop, having an abundant supply from tanks, &c., he asked for an alteration in the mode of charging water rent. Mr. Batty was referred to a resolution passed on the matter some time ago, whereby persons having shops and houses together, if over £20 rateable value, may have a compromise effected for water rent. The question was referred to the Waterworks Committee, which Mr. Batty will be asked to attend.

Mr. Sanderson said they were now getting very short of water at Patrick Green, and the supply at Royds Green was not fit for drinking. He then referred to the "tank" business which seemed to have fallen through, and now asked for a supply of Leeds water the same as Rothwell. He thought it might be got near enough by cutting through the hill for some distance. This suggestion was warmly scouted by Mr. W. Hargreaves, who said it would cost nearly £2000 to supply the Green with Leeds water, and was surprised Mr. Sanderson should intimate such a thing for 25 houses.

The chairman thought if they could manage temporarily, the Wakefield Water Works would be the most likely source from which to get a supply.

Mr. Oliver felt that this matter ought not to wait, he urged that some arrangement should be come to by the Waterworks Committee at once, for Royds Green and for Mr. Lawton.

Mr. J. Hargreaves could not see why the "tank" question should be delayed.

Mr. Turner saw considerable difficulty in carrying out the "tank" plan, as their appeared to be a very small supply of water where it was intended to place the tank, and he doubted if it would be sufficient.

Mr. W. Hargreaves, on behalf of Messrs. Charlesworth ultimately offered to send a barrel of water from Newmarket, say once a week, when the supply at the Green ran short, until some better arrangement could be come to.

CO-OPERATIVE DEMONSTRATION AT ROTHWELL.

Saturday was quite a field day for the members and friends of the Co-operative movement in Rothwell, the occasion being the laying of the corner stone of a new store at the junction of Commercial Street and Church Street. The site, as is pretty well known by our readers, is a most eligible one, and is part of a plot of ground formerly belonging to the Hon. Mrs. Meynell Ingram, and for a long time lying waste or covered with ruins of little old buildings of former years. Some two or three years ago, after considerable correspondence, the Local Board succeeded in purchasing this prominent piece of land for the purpose of widening and improving Church Street. Having laid out the new street, the balance of land was offered for sale and purchased by the Leeds Industrial Co-operative Society. Having allowed the winter to pass, the Society commenced operations about a fortnight ago, and having cleared away the superfluous rubbish and excavated a considerable depth, last Saturday saw the corner stone laid under most favourable circumstances.

The building to be erected is not so pretentious nor ornamental as could have been desired by those who wish to see the architectural character of the town advanced, but is nevertheless well adapted for the purposes for which it is to be erected, and will form on this corner, as Kirk House does at the opposite side, a respectable entrance to our dear old town.

The ground floor of the new building will be divided into a separate shop and workroom for the boot and shoe department and a grocery and provision shop with flour-room attached. The upper floors are to be divided into storage rooms for flour and dry goods, and a room over the grocer's shop, with a separate and private entrance from Church-street, for meeting purposes for the local committee and members. The estimated cost, exclusive of land and fixtures, is £650.

The day as we have intimated was beautifully fine and warm, the only inconvenience being the clouds of dust which now and again swept round the corner. There was a large concourse of persons present, including a number of friends from Leeds who came in procession in several vehicles and on foot, headed by the Rothwell Model Band in their neat new uniform. The utmost good humour and evident enjoyment prevailed among the promoters throughout the day, and jokes and quips were not unfrequent, everybody seeming at home with everybody else.

Mr. Bell, (president of the society) in commencing the proceedings a little after a half-past three, in reply to the question why the building of a Co-operative shop should be connected with such a demonstration, and be different from the building of other shops, said they wished to take this opportunity of advocating and explaining their principles, their mode of working, and the results accomplished. They were banded together for the purposes of trade and to advance each other's interests. This was one of about 50 stores, most of which were their own freehold property, and he now had to call on Mr. T. Whitehead to present a trowel (which had been used before) and mallet with which Mr. Fawcett might lay the stone.

Mr. Whitehead, (a member of the local committee) in handing over the instruments with which the laying of the stone was to be accomplished, paid a compliment to Mr. Fawcett as a thorough gentleman. He believed Co-operative principles were the best things for going through life with for working men, and that thousands of men were now a week before hand through becoming members of such Societies. The shareholders were masters of the directors and of their officers, and as one of the masters he had great pleasure in handing over the trowel and mallet, and was sure Mr. Fawcett was well worthy of the watch and guard which was to be presented that night.

Mr. Swales, of Leeds, then deposited a bottle under the stone, containing copies of the Record, Co-operative News, Leeds Mercury, balance sheet, list of directors, a bill of the day's proceedings, and one of each of the checks used by the society.

The large well worked stone, bears on its side the following inscription in gilt letters:

This Stone was laid by
MR. J. W. FAWCETT,
Secretary of the
LEEDS INDUSTRIAL CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LIMITED,
May 20th, 1882.

Mr. Fawcett, who was loudly cheered on stepping forward, then spread the mortar, and tapping each corner of the stone said "Thus I declare this stone well and truly laid, praying that the Great Architect of the Universe may grant that the top-stone may be brought on without loss or accident, and that all our work may be blessed by him, without whose blessing he that laboureth, laboureth in vain."

The Band then played the National Anthem.

Mr. Fawcett, having expressed his deep sense of the honour which had been done him in requesting him to lay the Corner-Stone of their new store, proceeded to speak of the interest, wisdom, forethought, independence and enterprise testified, as shewn by the humanizing organisation with which they were connected, and held that such societies were worthy of the highest and noblest enthusiasm. After referring to those who had founded the Association, and their early struggles, he took the erection of this new store as an omen of greater good in the future, not only in the matter of commerce, but as a means of influencing the lives and habits of the people towards frugality, temperance, forethought and happiness. The object of such societies tended to the amelioration and advancement of the working man. This store was one of 53 belonging to the Society, 41 of which were freehold property, worth £100,000. He trusted that the spare land would soon be taken up by some of their local members for the building of nice houses of their own. Hoping that the store about to be erected would answer the end for which it was reared and with best wishes for future success, Mr. Fawcett concluded by an appropriate poetical quotation.

Mr. C. Illingworth next spoke in such a manner as to provoke the laughter of he crowd, while he also contrived in the midst of his jokes, to shew the benefit which he had derived from his connection with the society. He assurred his listeners that it was as easy as "come out," and in regard to the kind of people they desired as members, he warned poor eaters and men with small families that they were not wanted; they wanted customers who were large consumers.

Mr. H. Richardson mentioned that the society now numbered 20,000 members; their turn-over reached from £400,000 to £500,000 a year with a profit of about £40,000 which was divided among the shareholders. Referring to Mr. Fawcett, he said that his work would bear the closest examination, and he considered him a credit to Leeds Industrial Co-operative Society. The Board of Directors were proud and pleased to carry out the wish of the Rothwell Committee, for Mr. Fawcett to lay this stone, and he was sure the selection was creditable alike to the judgment, and kindness of the Rothwell people.

The meeting then adjourned to the Mechanics' Institute, where the large room and the club room were both fitted with tea tables which were speedily filled. An excellent tea was provided and full justice done to the viands, about 500 persons sitting down. A vote of thanks was cordially presented to the ladies by Mr. Hawkyard and Mr. Swales.

Arrangements had been made for the loan of the Whitehall Field, and from six o'clock, dancing and games were carried on to the enlivening music of the Model Band. During the evening, an open-air meeting was held for the presentation of a gold watch and guard to Mr. Fawcett, when several addresses were delivered.

Mr. Bell occupied the chair, and introduced Mr. Marshall, of Holbeck. After saying a few words on the good site of the new store and expressing a hope for increased success, he paid a well-merited tribute to Rothwell colliers as a class, holding that they were the "cream" of the working men in this district and had exhibited many good examples of sterling men. Although they worked hard, he thought however, they did not get a fair share of the profits. Speaking of the society, he considered it one of the grandest levers for uplifting working men, and paid a warm compliment to Mr. Fawcett, no one being more worthy of such a present than he was.

Mr. Whalley, on behalf of the Testimonial Committee, in handing over the watch and guard to the president for presentation, expressed his great pleasure in having to do with such a gift to Mr. Fawcett, whom he spoke of as an honest, straight forward, business like gentleman, and most creditably filling the office of cashier and secretary.

Mr. Bell, before making the presentation stated that this gift was from a few friends in token of their appreciation and admiration of Mr. Fawcett; the members generally, had not been asked, except those of the Rothwell Branch. The Rothwell friends had selected their own man, and also the style of present, both selections being highly creditable to them. He had known Mr. Fawcett as a member of the Local Committee, as a director, auditor, cashier and secretary, and in whatever respect he considered him, he could only come to the same conclusion as the friends who had subscribed to this present. Having stated the opinion of a gen leman ten years ago on Mr. Fawcett's character, he and others felt that Mr. Fawcett was worthy of as good and as valuable a watch as they could procure: a gift worthy of the society and worthy of their secretary. He hoped he would live long to wear this handsome watch and guard, and when he was gone, be able to hand it down through a long line of Fawcetts, who would thereby be reminded that there once live a Fawcett worthy of such a present. He trusted he would have health and strength and pleasure in wearing it, such pleasure as it afforded the subscribers in presenting it.

Mr. Bell then presented the watch and guard, amid the plaudits of the crowd and the playing of "See the conquering hero comes" by the Band. The article is very valuable, and is attached to a heavy albert guard of a handsome pattern, and is inscribed as follows:—Presented to Mr. John William Fawcett, secretary of the Leeds Industrial Co-operative Society, Limited, by a few members and friends, on his laying the corner-stone of a New Store at Rothwell, 20th May, 1882.

Mr. Fawcett, though labouring under considerable emotion, accepted the present in a very excellent and well delivered address. He felt it a great honor to be asked by the Local Committee to lay the stone but he had no idea of the steps which were to follow. In receiving the handsome gift they had just presented, he desired to return his heartfelt gratitude, and hoped nothing would ever be done by him, unworthy of the trust they had reposed in him. He very warmly thanked the members of the Local Committee, who had so generously subscribed to this testimonial, to the President who had so appropriately presented it, to Mr. Tabbern who was not present, to Mr. Whalley and other friends who had said such kind things about him. He also returned thanks for the present they had privately given to Mrs Fawcett, remarking how much self sacrifice she had borne, to enable him successfully to perform his various duties. He had tried to do a little, he hoped to do much more for the society, and promised as long as life and strength and reason remain still to do his duty faithfully. He trusted those who came after him would, on seeing that magnificent present, be incited and encouraged to diligence and faithfulness in the path of duty.

Mr. Wilberforce then addressed the meeting on the benefits of the society.

Mr. Webster said he had never taken part in a more interesting piece of business than they had done this day, in the laying of the stone for a new store, and the presentation of that watch and guard to Mr. Fawcett—a man well worthy of the honour they had conferred upon him.

A vote of thanks was then moved by Mr. Baxter to the president, the local committee and the ladies presiding at table, after which the meeting concluded.

The gala was kept up well into the evening, and everything appeared to have passed off most successfully.

PRIMITIVE METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.

Services on behalf of the above Sunday school were held last Sunday, by Mr. E. Simpson, of Pontefract. The chapel was crowded to suffocation both afternoon and evening, a number being unable to get in, Mr. Simpson's name attracting a good many Wesleyan friends. Several pieces and dialogues were recited, and the anniversary hymns were sung with the assistance of some nine or ten brass and string instrume ts. The collections amounted to over £5. The anniversrry will be continued next Sunday and Monday.

PARLIAMENT.

The Arrears Bill, having been read a second time in the early hours of Wednesday morning, will now go through the Committee, but not very easily.

The second reading of the Prevention of Crime Bill was passed at one o'clock this morning by 344 to 47, and the House went into Committee on it at once.

For the first time for many years Parliament has discontinued the uncalled for and anomalous usage of adjourning its sitting for the Derby day; and the ludicrous custom of breaking in upon important national business for the purpose of seeing a few horses run on Epsom Downs, has received a check this year which will not improbably prove the death of that Parliamentary holiday.

The House adjourned to-night for the Whitsuntide holidays, the next sitting being on Thursday the first of June, when the Crime Bill will take precedence.

PRIVATE BILLS.

The Committee of the Hull, Barnsley and West Riding Railway Bill still continues its sitting and may not finish even to-day.

The East and West Yorkshire Union Bill follows after the Whitsuntide holidays. Possibly evidence may be taken as early as Wednesday, that is supposing the former Bill is out of the way.

The Rothwell Gas Light Company's Bill was read a third time in the House of Commons yesterday, and will now pass to the Lords.

ATTEMPTED MURDER BY A LAD AT WAKEFIELD.

On Wednesday evening, a youth named Alfred Edwin Thompson, the son of a Wakefield furniture broker, attempted to murder Mr. Joseph De Trozier, homœopathic chemist of that town. He attacked him with both a hammer and knife, and inflicted several serious wounds on Mr. De Trozier's throat. After a desperate struggle, and an alarm being raised, his assailant fled, but was pursued and captured in about an hour. Robbery, it is supposed, was the motive which prompted the commission of the crime. It is alleged that the prisoner has recently been betting on horse-racing, and lost all the money he possessed on Wednesday by the result of the Derby. He is an intelligent youth, not yet 18, of diminutive stature, and has a fine forehead. His father is at present in a lunatic asylum, and his mother lives at Batley He is remanded till next Wednesday. Mr. De Troizer lies in a very critical condition, and his deposition has been taken,

WEST RIDING MAGISTRATES.—Steps are being taken with the view of adding the names of six local gentlemen to the Commission of the Peace for the West Riding of Yorkshire. The following is a list of gentlemen who, it is said, have been selected:—Mr. John Marsden, Walton; Capt. Godfrey Armitage, Ackworth; Mr. T. K. Sanderson, South-parade, Wakefield; Mr. J. Charlesworth, Lofthouse House; Mr. William Thomas Marriott, Sandal Grange; and Mr. William Hartley Lee, Northgate, Wakefield. Mr. Charlesworth, as our readers are well aware, is a member of the firm of Messrs. J. and J. Charlesworth, the extensive colliery proprietors, two members of which firm (Mr. John Barff Charlesworth and Major Albany Hawke Charlesworth) are already on the list of county magistrates. We are sure the elevation of Mr. Charlesworth to the magisterial bench will commend itself to all as an honour well deserved, and likely to prove a valuable acquisition to the list of justices.

THE GOVERNORSHIP OF WAKEFIELD PRISON.—We understand that the vacant post of Governor of Her Majesty's Prison at Wakefield has been offered by Her Majesty's Commissioners of Prisons to the Governor of Warwick Gaol. The post was rendered vacant by the retirement of Captain Godfrey Armytage, who is now residing at Ackworth, and who, it is said, is about to be placed on the Commission of the Peace for the West Riding.

CHEAP ADVERTISING.—The cheapest way of advertising articles wanted or for sale, houses to let or required, situations wanted or vacant, is to put a notice to that effect in the columns of this journal, such advertising only costs 3d a line.

EXECUTION OF BRAND.

Osmond Otto Brand, aged 27, the captain of a Hull fishing smack, was executed within the walls of Armley Gaol, Leeds, at eight o'clock on Tuesday morning, for the murder of one of his apprentices, named William Papper, whose death he had caused by a systematic course of ill-usage while at sea.

During the night the condemned man slept well, and ate a hearty breakfast in the morning.

Marwood was the executioner, and allowed a drop of eight and a half feet, causing almost instantaneous death.

On the previous night Brand wrote a final letter to his wife, and made a confession, bearing out what he had previously stated, namely, that he did not intend to murder the boy. He walked to the scaffold with a firm step, and resented the support of the warder. He was resigned to his fate, but it was noticed that he made no responses to the chaplain as the Burial Service was read.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

The Queen's 63rd birthday was celebrated on Wednesday both in Windsor and London by frequent peals of bells, and at the former place Royal salutes were fired.

LEEDS.—The inhabitants were on Wednesday reminded that it was the Queen's birthday by the flags which were hoisted on some of the public buildings in honour of the occasion.

THE BISHOPRIC OF NEWCASTLE.

One of the news agencies states that the Rev. Basil Wilberforce, Canon of Winchester, and son of the late Bishop of the diocese, or the Hon and Rev. Edward Carr Glyn, Vicar of Kensington, will probably be appointed as the first Bishop of Newcastle.

MARKETS.

LEEDS CORN, Tuesday.—To day's market was rather thinly attended. Wheat is quiet, at about last week's rates. Maize and beans rather easier. Irish oats firm; Russian sorts easier. No change in flour.—Leeds Corn Millers' Association Report.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—The fat beasts on offer to-day numbered 15 less than this day week. Good qualities were in active request, and trade being on the whole somewhat brisker in this department, dealers were able to secure a farthing per lb advance on late rates. The stock, which was well cleared out, included 10 pens of Irish beasts, six pens of Lincolnshire, four pens of Jutland, and a number of North country animals. Although trade was a trifle slower in sheep and lambs than last week, we cannot quote any alteration on late prices. Lambs made 1s to 1s 1d per lb. A good demand for fat calves, of which there were 20 pens on offer, were all cleared out at prices below. Trade slow, and small and fat pigs made a shade less than late rates, but strong stores about the same.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

WAKEFIELD CORN, Friday, 12.32 p.m.—We have had unsettled weather during the past week, and the wheat trade remains steady at late rates. New Indian wheats in moderate request at the full prices asked. A retail enquiry for hardy lots of Oderbrucs and Danzig barleys, shipped or arrived; the season is practically over. Beans 1s, oats 6d per quarter lower. Maize steady.

CRICKET.

ROTHWELL v. SHEEPSCAR LEATHER WORKS.

The above match was played at Rothwell last Saturday, in glorious weather, and in the presence of a fair number of spectators. The visitors commenced the batting to the deliveries of C. Tiffany and R. Whiteley. The Rothwell team were inconvenienced by the absence of their usual wicket keeper, the bowlers taking the post in turns. When 73 had been scored the last wicket for the visitors fell, A. Batty having been the most successful bowler for the home eleven, he having taken 4 wickets for 8 runs, two being taken in succession, through the instrumentality of Ellis, at square leg. A. Ward was the highest scorer for Rothwell, getting 17 not out.

RUNAWAY HORSE.—Last Saturday afternoon as Mr. William Armstead, of Rothwell, was returning from Leeds in a spring cart loaded with materials for making band, the horse bolted down Sandy Lane, he having got out to walk. The horse passed along Woodlesford Lane, Marsh Street and down Butcher Lane at a mad gallop; on reaching Church Street the contents of the trap were all squandered across the street in consequence of one of the wheels knocking against the pavement. A stand was brought about near the White Swan by the cart turning over. Several narrow escapes took place along the route.

FUNERAL REFORM.—We observe in the columns of a contemporary a paragraph under the above head narrating a story of funeral parsimony said to have occurred in connection with 'one of the most respected characters this village has ever known.' Being pretty well acquainted with the events transpiring in Rothwell, we beg to clear our little town of the matter referred to, and to state that no such occurrence has taken place in Rothwell. Either the correspondent is incorrect in his statement as to the place, or the editor has got the paragraph under the wrong head. We desire to remove from Rothwell the stigma of such impecuniosity being perpetrated within her borders.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We would particularly urge our friends to send in their letters and news, as early as possible, as we cannot accept contributions later than Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, except in the case of matters occurring on Wednesday or Thursday, which should be forwarded within a short period after. Advertisements may be sent as late as Friday morning.

CORRESPONDENCE.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our correspondents. ED.

THE WHISPERING GALLERY.

THE Rothwell Gas Bill has been read a third time in the House of Commons and in due course will become law, and the Gas Company will receive the increased powers which it will confer. To an outside observer, the great outcry against the Bill and the headlong opposition to it on the part of a small but clamorous faction, having its head quarters at the Liberal Club, now appears very much like a storm in a tea-cup, so completely has it subsided, leaving no trace behind—not even on the Gas Bill.

THE report of the committee of the Leeds Town Council on electric lighting, does not give much hope of any near prospect of the town or any part of it being better lighted than it is at present, and those who wish to keep pace with the times in the matter of lighting must either wait with patience for about twenty years or else remove their quarters to some more progressive and enlightened locality.

THE Australian cricketers continued their successful progress at Brighton last week, and put together the highest total ever scored in a first class match in this country; and the individual score of Mr. Murdock has only twice been eclipsed in England, and on each occasion by our premier batsman, Mr. W. G. Grace. Had not the Derby Day opportunely intervened, the colonists would undoubtedly have suffered defeat at the hands of the splendid team which had been collected by Mr. C. J. Thornton, at Twickenham, and the state of that match when abandoned on Tuesday evening shows, that although a very powerful lot of players, our visitors will not be allowed to have things entirely their own way when opposed to our best representatives.

THE two Woodlesford Cricket Clubs appear to to be travelling in very opposite directions so far as the present season has gone. The original organisation has twice had to suffer a crushing defeat, and has once been a party to an unseemly wrangle, while the Brewery eleven have come off victorious in all their three matches. Which is the most worthy of being termed the representative club now?

A correspondent writes, "I should be glad if you would call public attention to the untidy state of the roads at Woodlesford and ask people to compare them with those at Oulton, which are in excellent order. As the roads in both villages are under the management of the same paid official, it is quite evident that he pays more attention to one place than the other, and if such is the case, he is neglecting a public duty. Perhaps this intimation may have the desired effect.

THE dust on Saturday was unbearable; there appeared to be no members of the Local Board and Sanitary Authority taking their walks abroad, else they would surely have got such a benefit a would secure to the long suffering public, some means of laying the dust in the street. The showers we have had the last few days will do a great deal, however, towards making our thoroughfares more comfortable, as well as satisfying the land which is becoming so richly covered with products.

QUID NUNC.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—These remedies are unequalled throughout the world for bad legs, wounds, foul sores, and ulcers. Used according to directions given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Many poor sufferers who have been patients in the large hospitals under the care of eminent surgeons, and have derived little or no benefit from their treatment, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, scurvy, and diseases of the skin there is nothing that can be used with so much benefit. In fact, in the worst forms of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, used conjointly, are irresistible.

LIBERALS & CONSERVATIVES UNITED!—This may sound strange, but it is nevertheless true, that Liberals and Conservatives alike are unanimous in declaring that BUDDEN'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND AND COLTSFOOT" is the best remedy for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and, in fact, any Affections of the Chest and Lungs. One dose relieves, one botlle cures. Ask for "BUDDEN'S BALSAM," and take nothing else.—Bottles 1s. $1\frac{1}{2}$d. 2s. 9d. Agent for Rothwell, A. Marshall, Stationer and Patent Medicine Dealer.

To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than hese adulterated articles

THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, LIMITED.

The scheme to amalgamate the two Italian operatic houses of London, and to concentrate this form of entertainment within the walls of Covent Garden is about to be brought forward under the most favorable auspices. Practical men of business have taken the matter in hand, plans have been fully discussed, and the details of the prospectus well digested. Some of the highest personages of social life have expressed their acquiescence in the scheme which has already been supported by the promise of large sums of money by intending shareholders. Another Season has paved the way for the accomplishment of the views of those who believe amalgamation the best course to pursue in the interests of both enterprises. It is an open secret that the Italian Opera Season last year at her Majesty's Theatre was not a success, nor did Mr. Mapleson care to risk an Italian Season in the autumn. It has been thought better that Mr. Mapleson, reinforced by certain members of the splendid troupe of Covent Garden, shall confine his energy to the United States, where his experience of American affairs will be at the service of the Royal Italian Opera Company, Covent Garden (Limited). Freed from the limited competition of Her Majesty's Theatre, the whole staff of the Italian Opera singers, and the entire body of Italian Opera goers will be drawn towards Covent Garden, the Prospectus of which house for the forthcoming Season includes the names of the most attractive artists the Italian Operatic Stage can boast. Competition has always been disastrous to Italian Opera, both commercially and from the point of view of art. A large amount has been already subscribed to the Opera Company, Limited, and the Directors have now decided to issue the Prospectus to the public. The Scheme promises to pay from 11 to 15 per cent., and may be worth the consideration of every class of investor, small and large.

WHITSUNTIDE.

With fine, dry weather and a fair degree of health, there is no season of the year so popularly accepted as the "tripping holiday," as is Whitsuntide. For several years past, the gladsome anticipations of elders and younkers of a season of pleasure at Whitsuntide have been woefully spoiled by the dull, cold, showery weather we have experienced, and it had come to be a very poten consideration in making holiday arrangements whether the "clerk of the weather office" looked smilingly or otherwise. Serious fears were entertained this year that we were "going to have one of the old sort" of Whitsuntides, and it was not until Saturday noon that the signs became more reassuring. Since then, with the exception of a shower on Sunday afternoon, sir Sol has been most propitious, and the god of the clouds has kept back any exhibitions of his power. When we think of the millions of Sunday scholars and teachers who make Whitsuntide their grand review, and recall the pleasurable expectations, realizations and remembrances of these festive gatherings in days when there was more of sentiment and less of world-hard matter-of-fact in one's nature, we look beyond the symbolic gods of the ancients, and for the sake of the little ones and of the hard working honest sons and daughters of toil who make this their own day holiday, we bow before the God "who ruleth over all" and reverently gather up and present the thanks and praises of all hearts for so beautiful and favourable a time.

We are quite aware there are some who in the midst of gladness and beauty all around, are oblivious of anything save the glass, the theatre, the gambling saloon; but in these days of advancing temperance habits, of increased evangelistic efforts, and of almost general educational advantages, we would fain think, nay, we are convinced that the large majority of our countrymen and women will have spent this holiday in such a manner as to make themselves and others better and happier, both physically and mentally.

The collieries ceased work on Saturday, re-commencing on Thursday morning; the Match Factory also closing on the Friday evening till Thursday morning. Most of the shops had their shutters up the latter half of both Monday and Tuesday, there being nothing to do except such outside orders as required attention.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARIES—Altho' the Church and Wesleyan schools in Rothwell do not have their anniversary at this season, it is nevertheless specially known as the "children's holiday" and from the reports all round us, a very large majority of Sunday Schools held their festival on Whitsunday and Monday. In Leeds, this was the case almost without exception, and the long trains of scholars and teachers with appropriate banners might be seen "processioning" nearly every part of our great town; many of the schools being taken to fields kindly lent by friends, while in others, meetings for entertainment or prize giving were held. From Wakefield, Methley, Garforth and many other places near us come similar reports.

In our own locality, the Rothwell Primitives, Oulton Wesleyan, Carlton Wesleyan, Robin Hood Free Church, Stourton Wesleyan, and Lofthouse Wesleyan schools, celebrated their anniversary in the usual happy manner as detailed in other columns of this journal. While we rejoice in the pleasure of the younger people as they indulge in the outdoor pastimes, it is gratifying to see others who are not so young as they once were", taking part with the little ones in catching the ball or playing "tursey." May such combinations of the young and older never become out of fashion.

CRICKET.—Perhaps next to the claims of Whitsuntide as the 'children's holiday' come those who delight in handling the willow. The truly English and manly game of cricket is never so pleasurable as when played under such favouring circumstances as prevailed on Monday and Tuesday. With sufficient moisture in the ground to prevent dust, and yet the grass dry enough to admit of a 'loll' without danger of getting a touch of rheumatism, with a moderate degree of sunshine, and a gentle zephyr blowing across the soft greensward, the most fastidious cricketer must have been perfectly satisfied with the weather. Easter-tide, the opening of the cricket season, promised well for lovers of the game, but no sooner had that holiday passed nicely over than wet and cold have been most of our Saturdays since, so that a number of matches have never come off at all. The advent of Whitsuntide, however, has brought a change for the better, and all over the country opposing teams have pitched their wickets, and tried conclusions on the carefully-kept ground of city, town, and village clubs. While the 'crack' players have been piling 'centuries' on our great battlefields, we publish the doings of our local clubs, which have caused considerable interest

BICYCLING.—It is not a wonder that the members of our village bicycle club should have seized upon this eminently suitable weather for touring, and we mention elsewhere the adventures of several of them at Hull, Selby, Boston Spa, and other places.

TRIPS.—The numerous cheap trips provided by the various railway companies, have been largely taken advantage of, by people both in town and country, some rising early in the morning for a day in Liverpool, Scarbro', Blackpool, or Morecambe, while the picturesque scenery and mountain air of Matlock or Mount Snowdon attracted others, another class of holiday-makers visiting Manchester, London, and other large towns.

Whit-Monday is usually a great day for Friendly Societies, and we were reminded of the existence of the Old Benefit Society by the procession (headed by the Oulton Brass Band) to Rothwell Parish Church, where a suitable service was held.

The Oulton Band also had galas on Monday and Tuesday. The feast as usual was in Oulton on Whit-Monday, the only new feature being the introduction of donkeys, (a la the sands) which were hired to aspiring equestrians at a small rate per quarter hour.

We fear, as we close this resumè we shall have to record some work for the gentlemen in blue, but would fain hope that, although there have certainly been several cases calling for their interposition, this holiday may pass, without having its escutcheon blotted by the tale of some poor fellow who instead of enjoying the cheering beauties of nature, has been "boozing" in a heated taproom, and losing what bit of sense he had, has put his foot into the legal bucket, and got into trouble.

Now that the holidays are over, let us hope that, with renewed vigour and improving prospects the present year and its successors may give us plenty of work, reasonable returns for labour, and a general increase of contentment and happiness.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARIES.

ROTHWELL PRIMITIVE.—On Sunday last, the anniversary of this school was continued, the services being conducted by the Rev. H. Crabtree, of Normanton, morning, afternoon, and evening. In the afternoon Mr. Crabtree gave an address to the teachers and scholars, and in the evening preached a useful and interesting sermon from the words "Nurse this child for me, and I will give thee thy wages." During the services the scholars sang their hymns, and gave several dialogues and recitations in a pleasing manner. The congregations were very large, the three collections amounting to £3 14s., which, with last Sunday's receipts, makes a total of about £9.

The usual procession was made on Monday, starting from the school at half-past eleven, headed by the string and brass instruments, Mr. Hampson (the conductor), and attended by a number of teachers and friends. After perambulating the streets, and frequently halting to give some subscriber a 'sing', the children returned to the school about half-past four, where a plentiful supply of buns and tea awaited them

A public tea was also held in the Schoolroom at half-past five, and a considerable number of persons partook of the good things provided. After tea, the teachers and scholars proceeded to the Cricket Field, where races were run and games and other amusements indulged in by both young and old, everybody seeming in for a pleasant evening's enjoyment, the proceedings terminating about 9 o'clock.

On Tuesday about 50 of the teachers and scholars joined a trip to Morecambe where the train arrived at 10.15. The party proceeded into the town for breakfast, after which a visit was paid to the Strawberry Gardens by waggonettes; after viewing the gardens and enjoying the amusements therein provided for about 2 hours, the party returned to Morecambe. Having dined, the company became somewhat squandered, each going to his own place of enjoyment, meeting again at the station for the homeward journey. The Rothwell friends arrived at the station in good time for the return trains at 7.45., but owing to the large crowd of people, they were unable to get settled in either of the two intended trains, and therefore had to stay till nearly eleven o'clock before they got started, arriving at Hunslet shortly after 2 o'clock, when the 'toilers on' commenced their journey to Rothwell, and landed at half-past three, thoroughly tired, but well satisfied with the day's outing.

CARLTON WESLEYAN.—This anniversary was celebrated on Whit-Tuesday. About one o'clock the goodly array of scholars and teachers turned out and paraded the various streets of the village singing the anniversary hymns at over a dozen places. On returning to the school, tea was provided in the open-air for the scholars, while about 230 friends also partook of an excellent tea in the school-room. After tea, an adjournment to a field in Beckett's Lane was made, where the evening was spent in playing cricket, ring, etc. The anniversary sermons are to be preached on Sunday, by Mr. Emmerson, of Leeds.

ROBIN HOOD FREE CHURCH—Last Sunday, the anniversary in connection with the above school was commenced by Mr. Flemming, of Leeds, delivering an address to the parents and scholars during the afternoon. On Monday the usual procession took place, followed by a tea in the school-room. After tea the assembly met in a field, and indulged in games and pastimes. The sermons are not to be preached for more than a month.

LOFTHOUSE WESLEYAN.—The above mentioned school held their festival on Monday last, and the sermons will be preached in a few weeks' time. The anniversary hymns were, however, used at the ordinary services last Sunday, as well as at a young people's service in the afternoon. The proceedings on Monday were of the usual type, namely a procession and tea, followed by recreation in a field of Mr. Lunn's, kindly lent for the occasion.

OULTON WESLEYAN.—The Sunday School anniversary services were, as has been usual, held on Whit-Sunday, and were conducted by the Rev. G. W. Russell, of Wakefield, one of the circuit ministers, who preached in the morning and evening, and addressed the scholars, parents, and friends in the afternoon, the services throughout being very interesting. A selection of hymns for the occasion was sung by the scholars, the same selection being used throughout the services. Mr. Flockton again acted as conductor, and in addition to his colleagues at the chapel, was assisted by Mr. C. Ward and Mr. Harrison, of Rothwell, Mr. Williamson, of Wakefield, and others. The singing elicited general admiration, and well repaid the care which had been bestowed in the promotion of that very interesting part of the services. The selection included the anthem "Turn not Thy face from my sins," the solos being very pleasingly given by Miss Walker. Mr. W. H. Flockton did very essential service at the harmonium. The collections were over £4, and were a little in advance of last year's. On Monday the scholars had their usual tea and festival at Clump Cliffe, which, by the kindness of Mrs. Armitage had again been placed at their disposal, and after the scholars had done very ample justice to the good things which were provided, tables were set out on the lawn for the teachers and friends of the cause, of whom a fair number came from Rothwell and Leeds, and a goodly company were regaled in the open air, to the increased enjoyment of all—thanks to the genial weather which prevailed. The Clump Cliffe grounds and the portion of Methley Park to which access was given, afford a fine opportunity for games and sports in great variety, so that racing, scrambling, games of cricket and football, other games, active or quiet, were pursued with a keen relish, not more by the children than by many of the adults who seemed for a moment to live again those youthful days when—

> "Like sportive deer they coursed about,
> And shouted as they ran;
> Turning to mirth all things of earth,
> As only boyhood can."

OULTON.

A report of the Sunday School Anniversary is published elsewhere.

Two galas were given by the Oulton Brass Band in a field kindly lent by B. Grosvenor, Esq., at which there was a large attendance both on Monday and Tuesday, the delightful evenings being most favourable for enjoying a dance in the open air.

The Band turned out on Whit-Monday for the first time, in their brand new uniform, and very smart indeed the members looked. The dress is of blue, with gold braid and scarlet facings.

A number of Sunday School children from Leeds, came down to Methley and Oulton by boat and by train, where they thoroughly enjoyed themselves in the green fields, which some of them saw for the first time last Monday.

MARKETS.

LEEDS CORN, Tuesday.—The market to day is of a holiday character, both as regards the attendance and the demand. Wheat is little enquired after, and last week's rates are barely maintained. Maize, peas, beans, and oats are rather easier. No change in flour—No. 1, 37s 6d; No. 2, 34s 6d; No. 3, 33s.—Leeds Corn Millers' Association Report.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—Owing doubtless to the holiday season, the supply of stock was much smaller to day than last week, and at the close there was a good clearance. The fat beasts included six pens of American cattle, nine pens of Lincolnshire, and four pens of Irish—the remainder being north country beasts. Last week's prices were well sustained, there being a decided upward tendency, especially for better qualities, but we cannot quote any alteration on last week's prices. Dealers in sheep were able to secure an advance on last week's prices.

		this week,		last week,
No. of fat beasts,		1500,		1749
„ sheep	„	4000,	„	5400
„ milch cows &c	„	70,	„	92

Prices were as follows:—

Lean beasts, £10 to £17 each.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

WAKEFIELD CORN, Friday, 12.32 p.m.—The weather continues favourable for the growing crops, but wheat remains steady at about late rates, with very little doing. An occasional sale for holding over is all that is passing in Barley. Beans firm, maize and oats quiet.

PROPERTY SALE.

Messrs. Oliver and Appleton offered for sale by auction last night at the White Swan Inn, Rothwell, 5 freehold dwelling-houses situated in Wood-lane, and owned by Mr. Jonathan Bramley, who we hear, is about to emigrate. Mr. Appleton conducted the sale, and Mr. William Wright is solicitor to the vendor. The property is well constructed, and is of recent erection, it being built a few years ago at a cost of about £900. Bidding commenced at £500, and after several intermediate offers was sold to Mr. J Taylor of Huddersfield, for £720.

DR BARDSLEY'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS are now acknowledged by our best physicians to be the only sure and safe remedy for all diseases arising from impure blood, such as scrofula and scrofulous humours. Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s. 9d.

THE PROPOSED RAILWAY.

After many delays, we are now informed that the Committee on the East and West Yorkshire Union Railway will sit on Wednesday next. The several gentlemen who have prepared evidence in its support met last Wednesday and compared notes together. We anticipate, therefore, in our next issue to report some progress in this (to Rothwell) very important matter.

CRICKET.

Last Saturday the Rothwell C. C. (first eleven) travelled to Allerton Bywater, and after a pleasant game returned home victorious, scoring 80 against 48. T Dobson's bowling proved very effective, taking 7 wickets for 21 runs.

At home the second eleven were enjoying (?) the afternoon leather hunting, and the time for drawing had almost arrived before the last representative of the Pudsey Albion had been disposed of for the respectable total of 144. At seven o'clock Rothwell had one wicket down for 12 runs.

On Monday the first eleven suffered a reverse at the hands of Lower Wortley Victoria, who compiled a total of 72 in their first innings, while Rothwell only managed 79 in both innings. G Gibson, who only bowled 8 balls, took 2 wickets for 2 runs.

Lee Fair Victoria were the opponents of the first team on Whit-Tuesday. A Ward was the highest scorer with 29, although A Fowler had to retire when he had made 18 runs.

As is their custom, the second eleven journeyed to Glass Houghton on Tuesday, where they were thoroughly beaten in one innings, nine different men trying their luck in the trundling department before dinner; after that pleasant occupation however, the remaining wickets soon fell and things appeared a little brighter for Rothwell, regret was expressed that the dinner had not taken place before the match commenced; it was now too late for the most sanguine to hope for victory, and after a most pleasant and enjoyable day, they returned home defeated by an innings and 59 runs.

AURORA BICYCLE CLUB.

Several members of the above club have taken advantage of the holidays for an extended tour to Hull and neighbourhood, where, favoured by the beautiful weather, they enjoyed themselves very much. On Whit-Monday they went to the Botanical Gardens, where the captain (Mr Middlemiss) rode in a two miles race, but he being virtually scratch, on the 170 mark, had no chance against the limit men. In the evening the grounds presented a very lively appearance, being illuminated by numerous Chinese lanterns and coloured fires, dancing and other amusements being kept up to a late hour. On Tuesday afternoon one of the members returned home, and rode 18 miles out of his way, causing him to have to ride 74 miles, which he did in 6¼ hours. Those remaining at Hull took tickets for Cleethorpes on Wednesday morning, where they spent a jolly day; returning in the evening, they received an invitation from the second engineer of the German emigrant S. S. 'Hansa,' to visit him on board next morning, which they accordingly did. Arriving on board, he explained to them the complicated mechanism of marine engines and boilers, as well as showing them the various other parts of the vessel afterwards; in his cabin they had the pleasure of drinking the health of their host, and the prosperity of the ship and crew in German läger beer. After thus spending a most pleasant and profitable morning, they started back home, where they duly arrived last night. The junior members of the club found plenty of enjoyment and fun at Harrogate, Boston Spa, Selby, and other places.

THE PRINCESS LOUISE AND THE "SARMATIAN."

The Allan Line steamship "Sarmatian," which arrived at Moville on Friday last, had among her saloon passengers the Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, and her suite. Her Royal Highness during the passage from Liverpool to Moville expressed a wish to visit the female steerage passengers, which she did, accompanied by Captain Graham. She spoke kindly to several, tasted their food, made a careful inspection of their sleeping berths, and expressed herself much pleased with what she had seen. The system adopted by the Messrs. Allen in the berthing of their steerage passengers, viz., the separation of the sexes during sleeping hours, is a strong point in favor of the line.

False Report.—The report of a malignant and most serious murder was widely circulated in Rothwell and the vicinity on Saturday afternoon, and it was not until six o'clock that definite information could be obtained proving its incorrectness. This time the supposed victim was no other than the man who, rightly or wrongly, is doing his utmost to conciliate the Irish people, and to give them his best help in redressing grievances and removing cause of complaint. "Mr. Gladstone's shot" was the fearful news which spread like wildfire from lip to lip, horror and dismay being depicted on every countenance. As we have said, the truth of the rumour was happily denied through many sources, after six o'clock, and it was with a feeling of intense relief that one read in Monday's news, of the aged Premier rusticating in peace on the estate of Lord Roseberry, and that ample provision was made for his protection from the hand of the wily assassin. God grant his life may long be spared.

This week we commence the new tale entitled, "Among the shoals" by Cyril Hathway, on page 6.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We would particularly urge our friends to send in their letters and news, as early as possible, as we cannot accept contributions later than Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, except in the case of matters occurring on Wednesday or Thursday, which should be forwarded within a short period after. Advertisements may be sent as late as Friday morning.

CORRESPONDENCE.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our correspondents. Ed.

THE WHISPERING GALLERY.

News of the doings of State officials generally emanates from London or its vicinity, but a somewhat remarkable instance of an opposite character occurred lately. Most of your readers would hear the rumour on Saturday afternoon respecting the atrocious assassination of Mr Gladstone, which fortunately proved unfounded On Monday morning we read in the London News letters that such a rumour had reached London on Sunday afternoon, and as might be expected, filled every one with consternation and rage; the news offices were besieged with anxious enquirers, and the telegraph officials were inundated with messages hither and thither respecting this all-surpassing crime. So far as can be learned, it was a scrap of paper thrown out of a train when passing Rothwell Haigh station on Saturday afternoon which has produced this great commotion throughout the kingdom. How great a fire a little spark may kindle.

Why cannot the Rothwell School Board and the Hon. Mrs. Meynell Ingram agree on doing something with the school-house at Waterloo. Its present state is a disgrace to all connected with it. The cows seem to be master of the situation just now, and anybody who wants a night's lodging cheap, can have it by climbing through one of the broken panes. Something appeared a few months ago about the Board wishing to have Mrs. Ingram's consent to pull it down and turn the materials into money towards the easing of the rates, but a legal or other impediment seems to have prevented even that means of clearing away the building and of assisting in the repayment of the loan borrowed for its re-building. Surely a lady of wealth and position like the Hon. Mrs. Meynell Ingram cannot know of this business.

Probably never within the memory of the proverbial 'oldest inhabitant' has the weather during the Whitsuntide holidays been more favorable to pleasure seekers than has this year been the case. A blazing hot sun, tempered with a pleasant breeze, has made the popular holiday most enjoyable, and all who have been able to do so, have had full measure of outdoor recreation.

The local cricketers have as usual been busily engaged, but none of them have been very fortunate in their engagements, defeat having been the lot of nearly all. Two out of the three matches played at Woodlesford on Monday and Tuesday were brought to a premature termination through the decision of the umpire having been disputed, and as is invariably the case, scenes of a highly discreditable nature took place, such, in fact, as would suffice to bring disgrace upon any club concerned in them. If cricket in Woodlesford is to retain the esteem of the public, such exhibitions as took place on the Brewery and Woodlesford grounds must not be repeated, otherwise the term 'cricketer' will become synonymous with 'squabbler,' and the 'Woodlesford squabblers' will be the undisputed title of the village players.

The sensation par excellance of the Whitsuntide festivities was the first appearance in public of the members of the Oulton Brass Band in all the glories of their new uniform. The please-admire-me-at-a-distance and ultra-military style and demeanour of several of the musicians was worth travelling a considerable distance to witness, but as the band will be on exhibition again very shortly, those who have not yet witnessed this imposing spectacle will no doubt have an early opportunity of gratifying their curiosity to the fullest extent.

Is there any truth in the rumour that the paper mill at Woodlesford has been let to an enterprising firm, who are intending to introduce an entirely new class of trade into this district which will create employment for a large number of young girls, and which will largely benefit the poorer section of the local community.

A SKILFUL SURGICAL OPERATION.

The American Ambassador at Vienna, Mr. Kasson, has lately forwarded to his Government an interesting account of a remarkable surgical operation lately performed by Prof. Billroth, of Vienna, which, wonderful to tell, consisted in the removal of a portion of the human stomach, involving nearly one-third of the organ—and, strange to say, the patient recovered—the only successful operation of the kind ever performed. The disease for which this terrible operation was performed was cancer of the stomach, attended with the following symptoms:—The appetite is quite poor. There is a peculiar indescribable distress in the stomach, a feeling that has been described as a faint "all-gone" sensation; a sticky slime collects about the teeth, especially in the morning, accompanied by an unpleasant taste. Food fails to satisfy their peculiar faint sensation, but on the contrary, it appears to aggravate the feeling. The eyes are sunken, tinged with yellow; the hands and feet become cold and sticky—a cold perspiration. The sufferers feel tired all the time, and sleep does not seem to give rest. After a time the patient becomes nervous and irritable, gloomy, his mind filled with evil forebodings. When rising suddenly from a recumbent position there is a dizziness, a whistling sensation, and he is obliged to grasp something firm to keep from falling. The bowels become costive, the skin dry and hot at times; the blood becoming thick and stagnant and does not circulate properly. After a time the patient spits up food soon after eating, sometimes in a sour and fermented condition, sometimes sweetish to the taste. Oftentimes there is palpitation of the heart, and the patient fears he may have heart disease. Towards the last the patient is unable to retain any food whatever, as the opening into the intestines becomes closed, or nearly so. Although this disease is indeed alarming, sufferers with the above-named symptoms should not be nervous, for nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand have no cancer, but simply dyspepsia or indigestion, a disease easily removed if treated in the proper manner. The safest and best remedy for the disease is Seigel's Curative Syrup, a vegetable preparation sold by all chemists and medicine vendors, and by the proprietors, A J White, Limited, 21, Farringdon Road, London, E.C. This Syrup strikes at the very foundation of the disease, and drives it, root and branch, out of the system. The genuine has "A J. White Limited," engraved in the Government Stamp.

Epps's Cocoa.—Grateful and Comforting.—"By thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps, has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette—Make simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in Packets labelled—"James Epps & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."—Also makers of Epps's Chocolate Essence for afternoon use.

The most wholesome and nutritious of confections is far less consumed than it would be were it not for the greatly adulterated articles sold under the name of chocolate. Every cake of Chocolate bearing the name of Cadbury is guaranteed to consist solely of pure Cocoa and white sugar, and may therefore be given to children with perfect safety. Chocolate makers by special appointment to the Queen.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills—These remedies are unequalled throughout the world for bad legs, wounds, foul sores, and ulcers. Used according to directions given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Many poor sufferers who have been patients in the large hospitals under the care of eminent surgeons, and have derived little or no benefit from their treatment, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, scurvy, and diseases of the skin there is nothing that can be used with so much benefit. In fact, in the worst forms of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, used conjointly, are irresistible.

LIBERALS & CONSERVATIVES UNITED!—This may sound strange, but it is nevertheless true, that Liberals and Conservatives alike are unanimous in declaring that BUDDEN'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND AND COLTSFOOT" is the best remedy for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and, in fact, any Affections of the Chest and Lungs. One dose relieves, one bottle cures. Ask for "BUDDEN'S BALSAM," and take nothing else.—Bottles 1s. 1½d. 2s. 9d. Agent for Rothwell, A. Marshall, Stationer and Patent Medicine Dealer.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoa? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of pure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than these adulterated articles

One Experience from Many. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s 9d.

Box sent post free on receipt of 15 or 35 stamps by Wm. Mather, Wholesale Druggist, Manchester.

Throat Affections and Hoarseness.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." These famous "lozenges" are now sold by most respectable chemists in this country at 1s. 1½d. per box. People troubled with a "hacking cough," a "slight cold," or bronchial affections, cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious Pulmonary and Asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government Stamp around each box.—Prepared by John I. Brown & Sons, Boston, U.S. European depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have their skins blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. The more delicate the skin the quicker its ruin. THE ALBION MILK AND SULPHUR SOAP is the purest, the whitest, and most purifying of all soaps, by its [illegible] action taking away on the [illegible] pimples, blotches, and roughness. It is recommended by the entire medical profession as "a most [illegible] preparation for the skin that is known [illegible] skins. By all Chemists, in tablets, 6d. and 1s.—The Albion Sanitary Soap Co., 532, Oxford Street, London.

Advice to Mothers!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. It will relieve the poor sufferer immediately. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to taste, it produces natural, quiet sleep, by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It soothes the child, it softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for dysentery and diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.

Valuable Discovery for the Hair.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Ask your Chemist for "The Mexican Hair Renewer," sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere at 3s. 6d. per Bottle. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

Floriline!—For the Teeth and Breath.—A few drops of the liquid "Floriline" sprinkled on a wet tooth-brush produces a pleasant lather, which thoroughly cleanses the teeth from all parasites or impurities, hardens the gums, prevents tartar, stops decay, gives to the teeth a peculiar pearly-whiteness, and a delightful fragrance to the breath. It removes all unpleasant odour arising from decayed teeth or tobacco smoke. "The Fragrant Floriline," being composed in part of Honey and sweet herbs, is delicious to the taste, and the greatest toilet discovery of the age. Price 2s. 6d. of all Chemists and Perfumers. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

SIR STAFFORD NORTHCOTE ON COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS.

Sir Stafford Northcote, speaking on Saturday at the annual dinner of the Commercial Travellers' Benevolent Institution at Exeter, said that that was one of those benevolent institutions of which they had so many in England, and which were founded partly out of feelings of prudence, but more out of feelings of kindness and goodwill. They would find in every profession in England a kindly fellow-feeling among men working together, and that, whatever their relations might have been, whether wholly friendly or partly antagonistic, yet when one was removed there was a feeling of kindly interest in those who had been dependent upon him, and that the widow and orphan of a deceased friend should never be forgotten in England. (Cheers.) He thought they must not forget the general dictates of Providence in these matters, and it would be very unfortunate if they allowed themselves to be led away by anything in the nature of a merely benevolent institution from the consideration of that which was the real duty of every man in receipt of a precarious or life income, and who had a family dependent upon him—he meant the duty of making some adequate provision for the support of his family after his death. He did not say life insurance was the only way in which that could be done. It was the most common and most convenient way, though there were, no doubt, cases in which provision might be more fittingly and properly made, but he thought that they should bear in mind that it was the duty of men engaged in a profession in which they were themselves earning a fair income—more than sufficient for their actual daily wants—to make some provision for those who had to come after them. He did not profess to be able to speak with any personal knowledge of the work of commercial travellers generally, yet often he had met with them in his journeys and had had occasion to see how very intelligent and how very painstaking a body of men they for the most part were. They were a body of very considerable importance because after all they were the links of that great institution, the home trade of the country. It was through them that the circulation of trade went on. Of course, as time went on, great changes had taken place in the mode in which business was conducted. Much more was done by correspondence, advertising, and other means than those formerly employed, but still there was necessarily a demand, if they wished to develop their trade, for the personal qualities of the commercial travellers, who could never be done away with. There must be effective interchange between producer and consumer. For this work men of intelligence were required, and they must be men of energy, of good manners, and of good conduct and character, to carry on a business which was of a somewhat delicate character. He had always thought that the functions intrusted to these ambassadors, if one might so call them, were functions of a very important character. In this country we could not afford to dispense with the services of those who would make known what we were doing, and who would keep alive the circulation of the country within itself. Every year impressed upon him more and more the importance of the home trade of the country, and looking, as he did, at commercial travellers as a most important part, as the springs of the home trade, he was anxious to do what he could to insure them proper consideration on the part of the public. They remembered an old saying of Lord Nelson's. At one time when he was looking out for his enemies, as they then were—the French—he could not exactly find them. He had a powerful fleet ready to meet any enemy, and was prepared to do any service that he might be called upon to perform, but his difficulty was in getting information from various ports of the world as to where his enemy was to be found. He used to complain that he had not a sufficient supply of frigates, and to say, "When I die the word 'frigates' will be written on my heart." (Laughter.) He could not help thinking, with regard to our great manufacturers and the great works which they were doing, that they wanted frigates to go out and keep them alive, to keep them in touch with all parts of the country, and to give and bring back information in order to keep them abreast with the demands of the country. The personal qualities which should distinguish those who went out might be of a very high order, and ought to be of a quality by no means despicable, because they required men who could go into society, men who could make themselves sufficiently acceptable to be able to speak without annoying those whom they addressed men able to get information without seeming to be too inquisitive, and who could be sufficiently pressing without becoming bores. (Laughter and cheers.) He was especially pleased with those he had met in the West of England. With great heartiness he proposed "Success to the Commercial Travellers' Institute." (Cheers.)

THE LUNGS OF LONDON.

It is but rarely that so complete a picture of the lungs of London is given as that in the last report of the Metropolitan Board of works. From this it appears that the various metropolitan parks and recreation-grounds under the Board's control comprise altogether an area of 1,676 acres, or a little over 2½ square miles; and when it is remembered that what is known as the metropolitan area, defined by the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, and under the jurisdiction of the Board, extends over 122 square miles, and has within its limits a population of more than three millions and a half, it will be acknowledged that the aggregate of these pleasure grounds is after all but small, and that were it not for the royal parks, which, happily, may be regarded as assured public possessions, and for a few commons in and near the outskirts of the Metropolis which are not under the Board's control, London would, in proportion to its size and population, be hardly so well provided with places of open-air resort as some other cities and towns.

The places of recreation maintained by the Board are—Finsbury-park, 115 acres; Southwark-park, 63 acres; gardens on the Victoria, Albert, and Chelsea Embankments, and in Leicester-square, 14 acres; Blackheath, 276 acres; Hampstead-heath, 240 acres; Shepherd's-bush-common, 8 acres; London-fields, 27 acres; Hackney-downs, 50 acres; Well-street-common, 30 acres; North Mill-field, 29 acres; South Mill-field, 28 acres; Clapton-common, 9¼ acres; Stoke Newington-common, 5½ acres; waste land at Dalston-lane and Grove-street, Hackney, 2 acres; Tooting Beck-common, 144 acres; Tooting Graveney-common, 63 acres; Clapham common, 220 acres; Bostall-heath, 55 acres; Plumstead-common, 110 acres; Shoulder-of-Mutton-green, 4 acres; Wormwood Scrubs, 194 acres; total, 1,676½ acres.

ENGLAND AND THE ST. GOTHARD.

The English Consul at Antwerp was of opinion some time before the opening of the St. Gothard Railway that its existence would do wonders in benefiting the trade of Belgium (remarks the Globe). This expectation may seem to some readers a little far fetched, but it is nevertheless supported by some very definite arguments adduced by Mr. Grattan in his Consular report. The idea upon which it is founded is that the commodities passing from north-western Europe, and more especially from England to the Levant and India, will now be diverted from the Calais and Mont Cenis route to that vid Antwerp and the St. Gothard, causing a very large loss of commerce to France and a corresponding gain to Belgium and Germany. The proof of these anticipations is to be found in a detailed calculation of the distances, and these are given with some care in the report. From Calais to Milan vid Mont Cenis is said to be 1,354 kilometres, and from Boulogne to the same place is 43 kilometres shorter. Next on the list comes the route from Ostend through the St. Gothard tunnel—a length of 1,258 kilometres; and finally we have the journey from Antwerp to Milan, measuring only 1,178 kilometres. It would seem from this that there is a gain of 60 to 100 miles in taking the new route from a Belgian port instead of the old one from Calais or Boulogne; and the Consul alludes also to a considerable saving in expense expected by choosing the former line. It is necessary, of course, to take into account the greater distance of the Belgian ports from these shores; but considering the high charges made on the lines leading to Calais and Boulogne, and the great facilities now afforded for conveyance from London and the east coast to Antwerp, their consideration is not likely to operate much to the disadvantage of Belgium, provided that the rate of speed along the new line of communication is not greatly inferior to that which the French provide under their recent improved arrangements.

He Had Something Else to Do!—An old farmer out West, living on the line of one of the recent railroad surveys, and who is owner of a barn of large dimensions, with huge swinging doors on both sides, observed a posse of surveyors busily driving a row of stakes through his premises, which extend to the very centre of his big barn. Sauntering leisurely towards the trespassers, with an air savouring somewhat somewhat of indignation he addressed the leader of the gang as follows:—"Layin' eout another railroad?" "Surveying for one," was the reply. "Goin' threw my barn?" "Don't see how we can avoid it. Well, now, mister, said the farmer, I calkerlate I've got sumthin' tew say 'bout that. I want you tew understan' that I've got sumthin' else tew dew beside runnin' out tew open and shut the doors every time a train wants tew go threw."

Mr. RUSKIN'S MUSEUM at SHEFFIELD.

Mr. Ruskin has just made an important communication with regard to his projected St. George's Museum at Walkley. With a view to securing more general support from the public for the objects of St. George's Guild, he has modified the conditions of membership. He enumerates the different objects he aims at, stating that, though the agricultural work is the business nearest his heart, the duty of which he is best capable, and which will be the consummation of all that hitherto has been endeavoured in his writings, must be found in the completion of the design for St. George's Museum at Sheffield. People frequently ask him why he chose Sheffield for it in preference to other towns. His answer is that he acknowledges ironwork as an art always necessary and useful to man, and English work in iron as masterful of its kind. Another reason is because Sheffield is in Yorkshire, and Yorkshire yet, in the main temper of its inhabitants, is old English, and capable therefore yet of the ideas of honesty and piety by which old England lived; finally, because Sheffield is within easy reach of beautiful natural scenery, and of the best art by English hands at Lincoln, York, Durham, Selby, and Furness. A committee of Sheffield gentlemen has taken up Mr. Ruskin's proposals, and is co-operating with him to secure their accomplishment. Mr. Ruskin has rejected the designs prepared for him, and says he shall design the building himself according to his own notions of what it ought to be. It is believed that Mr. Ruskin intends, provided Sheffield supplies a suitable building, to store there his priceless collection of art treasures, for the permanent benefit of the people, under the supervision of himself and a committee formed of companions of St. George's. At present works of great value are daily arriving at Walkley, where another building is to be erected to house them till the great museum is completed.

At a special meeting of St. George's Guild, held at Sheffield on Friday evening in last week, a statement from Mr. Ruskin was read by his curator, Mr. Swan. Mr. Ruskin says.—

"The immediate additions to the Walkley Museum should, I think, be limited to the erection of a very simple and inexpensive, but entirely strong and comfortable (and, as far as may be, fireproof) building, two-storied and divided in each story by a gallery with a terminal attached room; the lower (ground) story consisting of the public library with an attached students' reading room, and the upper, or second floor, sky-lighted, consisting of the art gallery, with attached jewel room. The public library would contain the mass of the museum books, of which all would be chosen for their good contents and some further for curious print, pretty binding, and the like, of which the outsides (within glass doors), and the most interesting pages of others, opened under glass on flat tables, should be by all visitors visible, but the use of the books granted by special privilege in the attached reading room to such persons as the future committee of management may think proper. The public library would further contain all such prints, water-colour drawings, maps, &c., as might be by any device or arrangement advantageously exhibited in it illustrative of history, poetry, and the other higher forms of literature. The public art gallery would in the proposed building be devoted especially to the illustration of sculpture and its associated craftsmanships in metal-work, including fine goldsmith's work and pottery, but such larger pictures as the museum may with prudence as to funds become possessed of would be easily arranged so as to make the general effect of the gallery more warm and cheerful. The attached jewel room would contain a series, of which the existing collection is a sufficient germ, of crystalline minerals notable either for their own beauty or for their uses in the arts illustrated in the greater gallery, and the elements of mineralogical science might be far more practicably and pleasantly taught in connexion with a series of specimens thus limited than by the infinitude of a general collection."

For the present, Mr. Ruskin would not wish any attempt to be made for the illustration of botany or zoology. He wishes to employ his own now much diminished strength on the subjects familiar to him, in which he believes he can be still serviceable to the public, and the uses of the museum itself will be in proportion to the clearness of elementary arrangement and illustration in a few subjects of connected study, and will not be forwarded by the extension of imperfect efforts or an accumulation of miscellaneous objects.

Mr. Ruskin attaches great importance to sculpture in the plan for the museum, "because sculpture is the foundation, the school of painting." But painting, if first studied, prevents or at least disturbs, the understanding of the qualities of sculpture. Therefore the immediate and complete arrangement of the art gallery at Sheffield will be chiefly designed for the study of sculpture. It must be carefully observed, however, that the word "sculpture" will be there somewhat otherwise interpreted than by the present guides of public taste. "The idea at first formed of a sculpture gallery will doubtless be of a comfortless room, with a smoky cast of the Venus of Melos in the middle of it, an undersized Laocoon at one end, an Apollo Belvidere at the other, and busts of Roman Emperors all round." The sculpture gallery of the Walkley Museum will, on the contrary, be arranged on Mr. Ruskin's strong conviction and frequent assertion that "a Yorkshire market-maid or milkmaid is better worth looking at than any quantity of Venuses of Melos," while, on the other hand, "a town which is doing its best to extinguish the sun itself cannot be benefited by the possession of statues of Apollo." The Sheffield Art Gallery will therefore be unencumbered by any life size statues whatsoever, and in the niches and lighted recesses of its walls will show only such examples of the art of sculpture as may best teach the ordinary workman the use of his chisel and his wits.

Mr. Ruskin thinks that Sheffield itself alone may provide the funds needed for the erection of the building, but there is an instant and much more serious ground for appeal to the public, not for the walls of the museum, but its contents. There is an opportunity at this time of securing the foundation of its library such as Mr. Ruskin believes can never occur again. He refers to the forthcoming sale of the library at Hamilton Palace. "That library," he says, "contains a collection of manuscripts which the late Duke permitted me to examine at leisure now some thirty years ago. It contains many manuscripts for which I have no hope of contending successfully, even if I wished to do so, against the British Museum or the libraries of Paris and Vienna. But it contains also a very large number of manuscripts among which I could assuredly chose some for which the partly exhausted general demand might not extravagantly outbid, and I think the English public ought to have confidence enough in my knowledge of art and history to trust me with a considerable sum for this purpose."

INJURIOUS INSECTS AND FARM CROPS.

Mr. H. M. Jenkins, the Secretary of the Royal Agricultural Society, has just issued a circular to members and others in which he states that the seeds and plant diseases committee would be much obliged if any person would forward to Miss E. A. Ormerod, of Dunster-lodge, Isleworth, the consulting entomologist of the society, any information respecting the injuries caused by wireworms to various crops that they might be able to give, also as to any remedial that has been found beneficial.

It is intended to collect and publish the results of the observations and practical experience of agriculturists in all parts of the kingdom concerning the attacks of wireworms, which have been unusually disastrous this season, in the same manner as has been done by Miss Ormerod during the past year with regard to the turnip flea, and all persons are earnestly requested to give their assistance in this work.

Information is especially desired upon the following points:—

(1.) The extent of the injury and the probable money loss caused by such attacks.

(2.) Methods of treating pastures or clover leys before they are broken up and the results of the application of dressings and of rolling, bush harrowing, and other means which have been found serviceable to prevent the click beetles from laying their eggs and destroying the wireworms.

(3.) The effects of any special methods of cultivation as well as of the treatment of land whose crops have been affected—such as rolling, treading by sheep, or other means.

(4.) The results of the application of artificial manures in encouraging the rapid growth of the plants affected, the special effect of rape cake, and of caustic manures put on to directly check the wireworms.

(5.) As to whether land is more subject to wireworms attacks after certain crops (for instance "seeds"), and the special precautions taken in such cases; also whether crops, such as mustard and peas, act as preventatives of attack.

(6.) Upon any other points in connection with wireworm attacks that may have been noted. The circular contains a very good illustration of the click beetle and wireworm, to enable farmers and others to identify the pests.

Why They Do Not.—It was a Boston girl who asked, "Why is it that two souls mated in the impenetrable mystery of their nativity float by each other on the ocean-currents of existence without being instinctively drawn together, blended, and beautified in the assimilating alembic of eternal love?" That is an easy one, says an American editor. It is because butter is forty-five per cents a pound and a good sealskin saeque costs as high as five hundred dollars. The necessaries of life must experience a fall in price before two souls will readily blend in the assimilating alembic, and so forth.

MR. BRIGHT ON THE LOVE OF BOOKS.

The new buildings of the Birmingham Central Library and temporary Art Gallery were formally opened on Thursday in last week, by Mr. Bright, in the presence of a large and distinguished gathering.

After some preliminary observations Mr. Bright made a most interesting speech, in which he dwelt upon the advantages of reading, and the pleasure derivable from the love of books. He proceeded to say:—

It is usual to speak a great many of what are called platitudes on an occasion of this kind, and I beg your especial indulgence for I have begun to think that nearly everything that can be said on questions of this nature, and questions of education has already been said scores of times and, perhaps, hundreds of times over. However, we have a duty to-day, and it is one of a most pleasant character, for our object is to open an institution which has its rise in a sense of its necessity in this population, and for which we hope for a continued and a very long existence of good work. It is, as has already been described, often I think, a foundation which is being set open among this dense population with the hope that it may supply streams of mental refreshment, of instruction, of improvement, and of wisdom for long years to come, and not of the wisdom of our time only, but of the wisdom of all times which has been garnered up for the profit of succeeding generations of men. When I was now and then, after the receipt of the letter of the Mayor, driven to ask myself what I should say at a meeting of this kind, there came into my mind an incident of my own experience that has often interested me and may not be without interest to you. I learnt one evening in London—it was at an evening party at which many persons were assembled—from a friend of mine that a friend of his and mine was lying dangerously, and, as it turned out, fatally ill in his chambers in the Temple. That friend of mine was the late Sir David Dundas, who was for many years in Parliament, and with whose friendship for many years I was favoured. I went down the next morning to ask after him, and, if it were proper, to see him. He invited me, through his servant, into his room, and I found him upon his bed of sickness, feeble, not able to talk much, and scarcely able to turn himself in his bed. We had some little conversation, and in the course of it he offered to me something like a benediction. He said—I remember his words very well—"I have never pretended to be a learned man or a scholar, but God has given me a great love of books." He then referred to the writings of the celebrated Lord Bacon, and taking a quotation from a letter which that eminent person had written to a friend, he turned to me and said, "May God lead you by the hand." That was one of the passages fixed in his mind from his reading of the words of Lord Bacon. Now, that was a solemn hour with my friend—if I may quote a very expressive and beautiful line from one of Scotland's real, but one of her minor poets, Michael Bruce—

> "When dim in his breast life's dying taper burns."

At that solemn hour, reviewing his past life, reviewing the enjoyment he had partaken of, he thanked God for having given him "a great love of books." Two days after that, I think—the second or third after that interview—that "dying taper" was extinguished, and my friend passed into the unseen world. It occurred to me—and has often occurred to me—what a text the language of my friend was; and if I were a preacher, or if I were in the mood for preaching, I think I could speak a sermon from that text. What is a great love of books? It is, in point of fact, something like a personal introduction to the great and good men of all past times. Books, it is true, are silent as you see them on their shelves; but, silent as they are, when I enter a library I feel as if almost the dead were present, and I know if I could put questions to these books, they would answer me with all the faithfulness and fulness which has been left in them by the great men who have left the books to us. Have none of us—or, may I not say, are there any of us who have not felt some of this feeling when in a great library? I do not mean in a library quite so big as that in the British Museum or the Bodleian Library at Oxford, where books are so many that they seem rather to overwhelm one, but libraries that are not absolutely unapproachable in their magnitude. The other day, on a recent occasion, when a great many persons were assembled at Windsor at a recent marriage, I had the opportunity of spending a quiet hour in the library at Windsor Castle. I have been in other great libraries. I recollect many years ago one at Woburn Abbey, and on an occasion not so long ago at Chatsworth; and there are hundreds of libraries throughout this country which are of the kind that I describe—such that when you are within their walls and see these shelves and these thousands of volumes, and consider for a moment who they are that wrote them, who has gathered them together, for whom they are intended, how much wisdom they contain, what they will tell to future ages, it is impossible not to feel something of solemnity and tranquility when you are spending time in rooms like these. And if you come to houses of less note you find libraries that are of great estimation and which, in a less degree, are able to afford mental aliment to those who are connected with them; and I am bound to say—and if anyone cares very much for some other things he will not blame me when I say to them "You may have in a house costly pictures and costly ornaments, and a great variety of decoration; yet, so far as my judgment goes, I would prefer to have one comfortable room well stocked with books to all that you can give me in the way of decoration which even the highest art can supply." The only subject of lamentation is—one feels that always, I think, in the presence of a library—that life is too short; and I am afraid I must also say that our industry is so far deficient, that we seem to have no hope of a full enjoyment of the ample repast that is spread before us. (Hear, hear.) But it is not only in the houses of royalty and in the houses of tremendous personages—(laughter)—that these libraries are great things to possess and great things to use; and it is not even in the houses of what we may call the middle-class wealthy, but in the houses of the humble, a little library, in my opinion, is a most precious possession. Only the other day I went by accident into the house of a respectable old man in my neighbourhood, who told me he was then eighty-four years of age. He had a few simple, but pleasant, pictures on the walls, and on one side, between the fire and the window, was a shelf with a number of books. I daresay I should have found his Bible, and probably a hymn book, and a score or more of other volumes, which to him and his family were precious. But that little library—it might not exceed 20 or 30 volumes—was a proof of something higher in that house than, unfortunately, you will find in many houses in this country. (Hear, hear.) Not long ago I called upon an old man much older. Since I saw him he has passed to the other world; but he was then, I think, in his 90th year, or close upon it. There he was, with his spectacles, and a volume and weekly paper, which he read constantly, and during the ten or 15 years of his old age in which he had been unable to follow his usual and ordinary occupation he found a newspaper or a book one of the means by which the dulness and the weariness of age and solitude were very much mitigated and relieved. (Hear, hear.) I have spoken of the biggest libraries, and of some not so large, and of the 20 volumes in the home of this old man; now I will speak of an incident where one volume alone seemed to me to have a great effect. Some years ago—I daresay it is 20 years since—on the invitation of two friends of mine, I was spending a fortnight in Sutherlandshire, on the Helmsdale river, engaged in the healthful occupation of endeavouring to get some salmon out of it—(laughter)—a precarious occupation. (Laughter.) There is generally, almost always, either too much water or too little (laughter), or, as my gillie used to say, "The salmon are no in the humour, Sir, (laughter); and if they knew what we had come about, it was not likely they would be in the humour. (Laughter.) But in the course of the day down the river we entered the cottage of a shepherd. There was no one at home, I think, but the shepherd's wife or mother—I forget which; but she was an elderly woman, matronly, very kind, and very courteous to us. While we were in the house I saw upon the window sill a small and very thin volume, and I took the liberty of going up to it and taking it in my hand. I found, to my surprise and delight, that it was an edition which I had never met with before—an edition of "Paradise Regained," the work of a poet unsurpassed in any country or in any age, and a poem which I believe great authorities admit, if "Paradise Lost" did not exist, would be the finest poem in our language. I said I was surprised and delighted, in that remote country, in the solitary house, in the humble abode of that shepherd, when I found this volume, which seemed to me to transfigure the cottage. (Hear, hear.) I felt as if that humble dwelling were illumined, as it was indeed, by the genius of Milton; and I may say I took the liberty of asking how the volume came there, and who it was that read it; and I learnt that the good woman of the house had a son, who had been brought up for the ministry, and I think at the time I was there he was engaged in his labours as a Presbyterian minister in the colony of Canada. Whenever I think of some of the rivers of Scotland—when I think of the river Helmsdale—as my mind turns to that cottage, I always see and shall never forget that small, thin volume which I found on the window sill, and the finding of which seemed to me to lift the dwellers in that cottage to a somewhat higher sphere. (Applause.) I am afraid you will think I am merely telling you stories about myself (cheers); but in one of those moments since I received the mayor's letter I took the liberty of asking a friend of mine, who is not far from me on the platform, what he thought was the kind of subject which should be spoken of here, and how it should be treated. (Laughter.) And his answer was this:—He said, "I suppose and believe that you have read a good many books; why should you not tell us something about them?" Therefore that turned my thoughts a little in that direction. I am not a critic, and I never was a writer. Some people say that critics are writers who have failed to write (laughter), and being not very kindly disposed towards those who have succeeded, they become rather spiteful in their criticisms. Well, I am not a critic, but still I have an opinion of books that I read, and I read one not very lately—at least, a large portion of it—to which I should like to refer. It is a book containing the memoirs and poems and other compositions of, to my mind, the most remarkable old lady that I ever heard of, one Janet Hamilton, who lived, I think, in the town of Coatbridge, in Scotland—in Lanarkshire, if I am not mistaken. Now, I should like to tell you what can be done by a person to whom God has given a great love of books. Janet Hamilton was the daughter of a shoemaker, who employed one journeyman, and, as might be reasonably supposed, she became afterwards the wife of the journeyman—(laughter)—and at a very early age, too—earlier than I should recommend in similar cases. However, during her life she had a family of ten children, most of whom, I believe, grew up to manhood and womanhood. But she never went to school, and her mother, who was the shoemaker's wife, taught her to read. She did not learn to write till she was 50, and she became blind at 60, and she lived, I think, to be about 75 or 76. So far for the points of her life. Now, she never saw a mountain, she never saw any river but the river Clyde, and she never was 20 miles away from her own humble dwelling. She read, in her childhood, at five, or six, or seven years of age, Bible stories that her mother procured for her, and at eight years of age she found by accident on a weaver's loom in her neighbourhood two volumes. One was "Paradise Lost" and the other was Allan Ramsay's Poems. Now, she read with an extraordinary eagerness, and did not forget what she read, as some of us are much too apt to do. She read through all the village library—the history, the biography, the travels. When she got to Shakespeare Shakespeare was like a revelation to her (cheers), and she had no words with which to express her admiration for his writings. She said that in those days it was not considered a very good thing for serious people to read Shakespeare (laughter), and there was a hole in the wall in her house near the chair on which she nursed her children and where she worked at some kind of tambour work, and when people came in she put Shakespeare into this hole in the wall, so that it might not be seen, and her conduct might not be criticized. (Laughter.) Well, she said that in her childhood her mother had read her every morning, after she could read a chapter in her Bible, which was done without intermission until she left her home and had a home of her own. She said that her love of books was her ruling passion, and that, notwithstanding that, so far as she knew, nothing was neglected. But she suffered ultimately from sitting up to read till two o'clock in the morning, for she believed that it had the effect of very much injuring, and at last depriving her of, her eyesight. Somebody asked her how it was that never having been to school, she wrote so accurately—not only poems, for she wrote for one of Cassell's publications when she was 54 years of age, although she only learned to write at 50, and it is almost impossible now to read her writing, the letters are so curiously formed; but she was asked how she came to write so grammatically, never having been to school, and she said, "You might as well ask why the laverock—that is, the lark—can sing." She said God had given her, not, as Sir David Dundas said, "a great love of books," but a natural tact or gift of grammar. (Laughter.) This old lady has written poems, some of which—if there were time I would quote one or two of them—but certainly there are one or two of them, that if placed among the poems of Burns in a volume of his, no one would for a moment doubt were the productions of that the greatest of the Scotch poets. That, I think, is an amusing story. I confess it has surprised me beyond anything I have read for a long time, and I doubt if we have on record the particulars of a more remarkable person than my old friend Janet Hamilton. I am very sorry I never had the opportunity of seeing her, though friends of mine were intimate with her, but I had the pleasure afterwards of giving a little subscription to a fund that was raised for the purpose of putting up a memorial to her in her town, and nearly opposite, I believe, to the house in which she lived. (Cheers.) Now, I hope my friend who recommended me to speak about books will not think I have entirely neglected his recommendation, but I would not wish to ask your attention only to Scotland. I have spoken of Sir David Dundas, who was a Scotchman, of the book in the cottage of the Helmsdale shepherd, and now of Janet Hamilton. If you will permit me for a few minutes I should like to ask you to cross the Atlantic and see if there is anything we can learn there. (Cheers.) It is not very many years since authorities in criticism in England said, "Can any good book came from the United States?" At this momont there are millions of persons in that Republic nearly all of whom speak our language, nearly all of whom can read our books, not a few of whom are writing books which we may read with advantage. It is an immense new field for the writers of the English language in this country, and it is an immense new field for us who take the good things which the writers in the English language there and here provide for us. Well, they have had a good many poets of late years, in fact, I may say that the only poets that the United States have produced must necessarily have been of late years; but the poets which rise to my mind at the present time are Bryant, who was the oldest and has passed away; Longfellow, who comes next (cheers), known much more to Englishmen than Bryant, and who now has passed away; Whittier, who is beginning to be more known in this country than he has been; Wendell Holmes (cheers); and Mr. Russell Lowell, Minister from the United States to our Court, and no less, I think I may say, Minister to our people. (Cheers.) Longfellow is, or was, a man of whom I had a little personal knowledge. I spent a morning with him once at the house of the late eminent physician, Sir Henry Holland, and as I walked away with him through Hanover-square he was speaking to me of his friend Whittier. Nothing could be more kindly, more generous, more affectionate than his language towards his brother poet. There was no rivalry, no jealousy. He said that he thought Whittier was a poet remarkable in one thing, that he seemed always in his writings to improve. I would like to ask you if you have ever read what I consider the greatest of the poems of the United States—that is Longfellow's "Song of Hiawatha." Many people have ridiculed the "Song of Hiawatha" because of the simplicity of the metre, but if you only read the first few lines of it, which I will venture to read to you, you will, I hope, feel rather as I felt, and be disposed, if opportunity offers, to read the poem through, and through again if you have already read it. He begins:—

> "Ye whose hearts are fresh and simple,
> Who have faith in God and Nature,
> Who believe that in all ages
> Every human heart is human,
> That in even savage bosoms
> There are longings, yearnings, strivings
> For the good they comprehend not,
> That the feeble hands and helpless,
> Groping blindly in the darkness,
> Touch God's right hand in that darkness,
> And are lifted up and strengthened;—
> Listen to this simple story,
> To this song of Hiawatha!"

(Cheers). And then through that poem you have descriptions of Indian life and Indian legends, which to me are of inexpressible beauty; and I do not hesitate to say, as far as my reading has led me to judge, that it is a poem that deserves to live, and will live, and at this moment it is the finest poem of any language that has been produced by any writer of the United States. Now I shall say a word about John Greenleaf Whittier, because, though I have not seen him, yet I have had correspondence with him, and I have a great affection for him; and, besides, there is a certain other connexion, as he in the United States is a member of the small Church of which I also in this country am a member. I met, some time ago, during the American war, an eminent citizen of the State of Massachusetts, who told me that he thought that there was no man in the United States whose writings at the time and for some years before the war had so great an influence upon public opinion in that country as the writings of John Greenleaf Whittier; and, no doubt, that arose partly from this, that he wrote strongly on the subject of freedom and strongly against the system of slavery which was about to involve that great country in a great civil war. (Cheers.) I would not wish to exaggerate anything with regard to the American poets, but I think a great deal may be said in their favour. (Hear, hear.) Whittier himself, when he attacks the question of negro slavery and the horror and the curse of it, writes in a manner which must have roused the indignation and excited the animosity of the people for whom he wrote against that enormous evil. I will read you one stanza from one of his little poems and ask you whether, if such an enormity of slavery had existed among us, this would not been likely to rouse our indignation. He wrote a poem called "The Farewell of a Virginia Slave-mother to her Daughters," who were sold South into a worse bondage than that of Virginia. He says, or the slave-mother says:—

> "Gone, gone, sold and gone,
> To the rice-swamp dark and lone.
> There no mother's eye is near them,
> There no mother's ear can hear them,
> Never, when the torturing lash
> Seams their back with many a gash,
> Shall a mother's kindness bless them,
> Or a mother's arms caress them.
> Gone, gone, sold and gone,
> To the rice-swamp dark and lone,
> From Virginia's hill and waters,
> Wo is me, my stolen daughters!"

If God gives a real poet to a people like that, at a time like that, and puts into his heart those sentiments, and into his mouth those words, does He not really speak to that people and ask them to return to the ways of mercy and righteousness? (Cheers.) In one of the recent editions of Mr. Whittier's poems he inserts a small preface of five or six stanzas, and the last stanza is one which I think explains the tone and general object of his writings:—

> "O, Freedom, if to me belong,
> Nor mighty Milton's gift divine,
> Nor Marvell's wit and graceful song,
> As theirs I lay, like them, my best gifts on thy shrine.

And so the best gifts of his genius and poesy are on the side of freedom. They have helped to do their work in the United States. They will do their work wherever the English language is spoken hear, hear); they will tend to purify the individual, and to exalt the nation. (Cheers.)

After making some further allusions to the poets of America, and passing an eulogium on Bancroft's "History and Colonization of the United States," Mr. Bright concluded by saying:—

We have talked quite enough about all these points. Poetry or prose books, at any rate, offer to us lessons of wisdom. In this central library—I think I said at the beginning it was to be a perpetual fountain, never closed—no price is asked, no question as to what particular class of book you desire to read; everything is as free and open as security will permit; and not to the rich only, but to the poor, and a large class who cannot be called and designated as poor—I mean the industrious, and, I hope, in the main fairly paid artisans throughout the ingenious population of Birmingham. (Hear, hear.) My own impression, is that there is no blessing that can be given to an artisan's family greater than a love of books. (Cheers.) The home influence of such a possession is one which will guard them from many temptations and from many evils. How common it is in all classes—too common—but how common it is among what are termed the working classes—I have seen it many times in my district—for even an industrious and careful parent to find that his son or his daughter has been to him a source of great trouble and great pain. If it were possible, even in one of these homes, to have one single person who was a lover of books and knew how to spend an evening usefully with a book, and who could occasionally read something from the book to the rest of the family, perhaps to his aged parents, how great would be the blessing to the family, how great a safeguard would be afforded. And then to the men themselves, when they came, as in the case which I have mentioned, to the feebleness of age, and when they can no longer work, and when the sands of life are, as it were, ebbing out, what can be more advantageous, what more a blessing than in these hours of feebleness, may be sometimes, of suffering—it must be often of solitude—if there be the power to derive instruction, and amusement, and refreshment from books which your great library will offer to every one? (Applause.) To the young especially this is of great importance, for if there be no seed-time there will certainly be no harvest, and the youth of life is the seed-time of life. I see in this great meeting a number of young men. It is impossible for anybody to confer upon them a greater blessing than if he could stimulate them to a firm belief that to them now, and to them during all their lives, it may be a priceless gain that they should associate themselves constantly with this library and draw from it any books they like. The more they read, the more, in all probability, they will like and wish to read. Mr. Lewis Morris, in his late charming poem called "The Ode of Life," in that part of it dedicate to youth, and in addressing the imaginary youth of whom he is writing, says:—

> "For thee the fair poetic page is spread
> Of the great living and the greater dead;
> For thee the greater gains of science lie
> Stretched open to thine eye."

What can be better than this, than "the fair poetic page," the great instructions of history, the gains of science? All these are laid before us, and of these we may freely partake. I spoke of the library in the beginning of my observations as a fountain of refreshment, and instruction, and wisdom. Of it may be said that he who drinks shall still thirst, and, thirsting for knowledge and still drinking, we may hope that he will grow to a greater mental and moral stature, more useful as a citizen and more noble as a man. Mr. Mayor, I cannot sit down without offering my word of congratulation to you over the circumstances which have brought about this day's interesting occupation. The wisdom and the generosity of your municipality are conspicuous. If not known you are becoming known as the leading municipality in this country. (Applause.) I entertain the earnest hope that the ingenious artisans of this great town may add to all their other powers and virtues the growth in knowledge which this library will henceforth offer to them. Many of us who are here to-day can see little of its fruits, but to those who are here 25 years hence, which is but the length of time since I first as your representative stood upon this platform (cheers), if there be any good in your noble grammer-school, if there be any good in your board schools, if there be any good in a free Press, if there be any good in this great library about which we now with some reason boast and which you rejoice over—if there be any good in these things, then I say that at the end of 25 years those who are here, who note the state of things now and compare it with the state of things then, should have the opportunity not only of judging, but of deciding, that a great, and permanent, and blessed improvement has taken place in the character, the occupation, and everything that is admirable in the population of Birmingham.

The right hon. gentleman having spoken for about an hour, resumed his seat amid hearty cheering.

THE IRON TRADE IN AMERICA.

In a leader, noticing the strike of the American ironworkers, the Standard says:—

In the year 1880 there were 697 furnaces at work in the United States, producing an output of 3,070,875 tons of pig iron. This vast amount of metal is scattered over the States and territories of Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, Michigan, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Missouri, Illinois, West Virginia, Alabama, Kentucky, Tennesse, Maryland, Georgia, Virginia, Connecticut, Indiana, Massachusetts, Oregon, Maine, Vermont, Texas, North Carolina, Utah, and Minnesota. In reality the two latter regions produce an inappreciable amount, though with Colorado they may be expected at a very early date to take a more prominent place among the ferruginous districts of the Republic. Pennsylvania and Ohio are, however, by far the most important iron regions of America. The former State turns out annually nearly 1,700,000 tons of pig iron, and the output of the latter is at present fully half a million tons. Pennsylvania is, indeed, the Black country of the States. Of this busy province Pittsburg is unquestionably the capital. The traveller who journeys from Philadelphia to "Merthyr of America" runs in twelve hours over three hundred and sixty miles of a well-cultivated, pleasantly-wooded region of cornfields, orchards which look so much like England that, were it not for the unfamilar tobacco patches and the broad expanses of tasselled maize, one might for a moment forget that three thousand miles of ocean stretched between the two regions. As one nears the end of the journey the country grows wilder, and the spurs of the Alleghanies appear as the train runs through the valley of the Junita, a confluent of the Seequehanna, which at Harrisburg is crossed by a bridge three thousand six hundred and seventy feet long. Then slowly the black pall which hangs over the horizon tells that Pittsburg is at hand. The tourist who emerges from the "depot" with the din of exhaust steam, counter flies, pinions, Nasmyth hammers, "hooters," and the other adjuncts of Tubal Cain's calling, deafening his ears, finds it difficult to realise the fact that it is barely a century since John Penn the younger sold the first town lots, on which the great city now stands, to Isaac Craig and Stephen Bayard. In 1619, the Virginia Colonists, having provided themselves with wives at the cost of one hundred pounds of tobacco per spouse, began smelting the ore on Falling Creek, not far from the now vanished Jamestown. Nevertheless, three years later, iron was so scarce in the Old Dominion that its export was forbidden under a penalty of ten pounds of tobacco for each pound of iron; and in 1728 the forge which had been erected eight years before in Berks County, Pennsylvania, was attacked by Indians. Yet to-day the wild lands known in those days as his Majesty's Plantations in America produce nearly half as much pig iron as the Mother Country, and rather more steel. When the vast Western deposits, hitherto barely touched, are developed, it is difficulty to forecast the future.

CREMATION AND CREMATORIES.

The following is an extract from an article in the Pall Mall Gazette on the above subject:—

The cremation of Garibaldi, which is to be carried out in accordance with his last will and testament, will tend to revive public interest in a controversy of which little has been heard for some time. At present the practice is not popular; for the most of us it is not even possible. Even at Milan the number of cremations does not exceed one hundred per annum. There have, however, been two practical attempts made of late to substitute cremation for burial. The one has been made in the Old World, the other in the New. In the former the subject has been brought before the Municipal Council of Paris by a proposal to make cremation universally compulsory. In the latter the initiative comes from the United States Cremation Company, which uses the crematory built by Dr. Julius Le Moyne in Little Washington, Pennsylvania, five years ago, for the cremation of Baron de Palm, whose corpse was the first cremated in America. Baron de Palm, the first subject passed through the furnace, was a Bavarian diplomatist, a "Grand Commander of the Sovereign Order of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem, Prince of the Roman Empire, and Knight of St. John of Malta." Baron de Palm, whose patents of nobility were said to date from 832, settled in Chicago in 1861, and shortly afterwards took a prominent part in the establishment of the Theosophical Society, which, under the inspiration of Mdme. Belavatsky and the leadership of Colonel Olcott, has transferred its operations from the American Republic to our Indian Empire. The furnace in which he was cremated was built by Dr. Le Moyne at a cost of £370. The process of combustion is effected by the consumption of forty bushels of coke, the cost of which at the time was stated to be about 3s., and it lasts about an hour, although for perfect safety the process is continued for twice that time The fire is lit thirty-six hours before the furnace is required, and the temperature raised to a point which renders the introduction of the corpse somewhat unpleasant. The body, enveloped in a winding-sheet, soaked in alum water and covered with primroses, geraniums, roses, and evergreens, is laid in a crib, which is passed into the furnace. The process of combustion can be watched by spectators through a small hole in the furnace door. For the first ten seconds a faint odour is perceptible, after that the process is inodorous. The sight of the body in the flames has been described with much minuteness of detail, but we need say no more than that at the close of the process from five to seven pounds' weight of ashes alone remain. After twenty-four hours these ashes are collected and sealed up in a vase for preservation by the relatives of the deceased. According to the statutes of the Cremation Society every shareholder has a right to be cremated in return for an entrance fee of three dollars and an annual subscription of a similar amount. The total cost of a cremation is estimated at forty-five dollars, and the process from the first lighting of the fire to the extraction of the ashes after the furnace has cooled lasts exactly fifty hours. . . .

FATAL BOATING ACCIDENT.

A sad boating fatality occurred late on Friday evening in last week, at Kent's Bank, near Grange, on the west side of Morecambe Bay, by which two young gentlemen lost their lives and another had a very narrow escape.

It appears that Mr. Norman Chandler, son of Mr. H. Chandler, of Boarbank Mansion, Allithwaite, bought a sailing yacht a few days ago and had it stationed at Kent's Bank. On Friday night Mr. Chandler and two friends, Mr. Young and Mr. Herbert Elliott, determined to sail round Humphrey Head, and anchored in a creek near Holywell. There was a strong current running, accompanied by a high wind. All went well for about a mile, but when making a tack the yacht ran against the bank of the channel, capsizing and throwing the occupants into the water. Mr. Chandler and Mr. Elliott endeavoured to make for the shore; Mr. Young took hold of the mainmast. The two former were capital swimmers, but Mr. Elliott was rendered almost powerless by being struck with some portion of the vessel. Mr. Chandler, however, nobly assisted Mr. Elliott until a strong wave separated them, and Mr. Elliott was lost. Mr. Chandler swam to a shallow part of the bay, where he regained his feet, and shouted to Mr. Young, who feebly responded. It is thought that as the tide rose Mr. Young crept higher up the mast, but when he was 4ft. from the top, the mast unfortunately broke.

Mr. Chandler, to save his life, had to swim across a channel about a mile and a half wide. He then roused the occupants of a farmhouse, who administered stimulants to the half-drowned man. On recovering he set out with others to search for his friends. The yacht was found half-buried in the sand. Mr. Young's body was found on the west side of the channel, Mr. Elliott's a mile lower down on the Morecambe side. Both bodies showed signs of a desperate struggle for life. The young men were all 20 years of age.

GARDENING OPERATIONS FOR THE WEEK.

(From the Gardener's Magazine.)

(An excellent weekly journal, containing much valuable information for amateur and professional gardeners.)

Alyssums, Evergreen Candytufts, Pansies, Wallflowers, and a few other subjects of a similar character may now be propagated in quantity by means of cuttings. The cuttings should be put in beds of sandy soil made up in frames or on a shady border and be covered with handlights or sashes.

Balsams should not be allowed to become pot-bound until they are put in the pots in which they are to bloom, as a check to the roots throws them into bloom prematurely and stops all growth. Therefore, as fast as they fill their pots with roots shift on in rich light soil, if large specimens are required. Plants in six-inch pots are the most suitable for the conservatory. Do not let them suffer for want of water, and keep well aired and in a good greenhouse temperature.

Bedding Plants to have as little water as possible, as it tends to prevent their rooting deep. Pick over the beds between the plants, and pay scrupulous attention to pinching and pegging as required, as on this will depend the beauty of the display as the plants come into full bloom.

Bulbs.—As the leaves decay, all those that are usually taken up should be lifted and laid aside in a shady dry place, with earth over them, to ripen. They should then be cleared and stowed away.

Conservatory and Stove Climbers require an occasional thinning, regulating, and stopping.

Greenhouse and Conservatory Plants must have constant attention now. Turn out for the summer those that require to be in the open air for the completion of their growth and the ripening of their wood. Take care in all cases to guard against worms finding entrance to the pots.

Kitchen Garden ground will be now, for the most part, covered, and everything in full growth. The hoe must never be idle; weeds grow faster than the crops, and exhaust the soil rapidly, and, if allowed to seed, make the mischief worse. Cucumbers, Gourds, Tomatoes, and Capsicums should be put out at once; the soil should be rich; and for tomatoes a sunny aspect must be chosen. Liquid manure should be freely used to all crops in full growth, and especially to strawberries, but there should be two or three waterings with plain water to one with liquid manure. Sow early Horn Carrots, Scarlet Runners and French Beans, Turnips, Lettuces, Radishes, Cabbages, Spinach, Endive, Cauliflower, and Peas and Beans.

Melons need no shade if the Hillocks are of good sound turfy loam and the plants have water when shut up at night. Scorching seldom happens except through mismanagement. The general causes of ill-health are watering with cold hard water, planting in rich light soil, or keeping them too dry while growing. To ripen the fruit dryness is essential, but while the plants are growing they require plenty of tepid water, and the soil should be tough turfy loam.

Pines must have atmospheric moisture, to prevent exhaustion by hot bright weather. Shut up early and syringe lightly, and pour water on the floor of the house early every morning. Give a little air at night about two hours after shutting up to water. The temperature may go up to 95 deg. for a maximum.

Roses.—Gardens newly made may be furnished with roses now as well as at any time of the year. Dwarf plants in small pots, if turned out with care, in ground well dug and liberally manured, will grow with vigour and bloom well in the autumn. A plantation of dwarf roses may be formed as successfully now as at any time of the year.

Tomatoes will bear more abundantly and occasion less trouble if constantly stopped just beyond the fruit. Give them plenty of water and mulch the surface with rotten manure.

Watering and Weeding are the principal labours of this month, and both must be pursued with diligence. Where systematic irrigation with sewage can be carried on, the most wonderful results may be expected, but ordinary watering is often injurious rather than beneficial, for the simple reason that it is only half done. In such cases we should advise the cultivator to abstain from giving water as long as possible, and then to give it in abundance, watering only a small plot every day in order to saturate the ground, and taking a week or more to go over a piece which would be done in a day by mere surface dribblings.

A preaching crusade against Secret Societies in general and Fenian organisations in particular is, it is said, about to be undertaken by the Roman Catholic clergy of the metropolis.

THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, LIMITED.

The scheme to amalgamate the two Italian operatic houses of London, and to concentrate this form of entertainment within the walls of Covent Garden is about to be brought forward under the most favorable auspices. Practical men of business have taken the matter in hand, plans have been fully discussed, and the details of the prospectus well digested. Some of the highest personages of social life have expressed their acquiescence in the scheme which has already been supported by the promise of large sums of money by intending shareholders. Another Season has paved the way for the accomplishment of the views of those who believe amalgamation the best course to pursue in the interests of both enterprises. It is an open secret that the Italian Opera Season last year at her Majesty's Theatre was not a success, nor did Mr. Mapleson care to risk an Italian Season in the autumn. It has been thought better that Mr. Mapleson, reinforced by certain members of the splendid troupe of Covent Garden, shall confine his energy to the United States, where his experience of American affairs will be at the service of the Royal Italian Opera Company, Covent Garden (Limited). Freed from the limited competition of Her Majesty's Theatre, the whole staff of the Italian Opera singers, and the entire body of Italian Opera goers will be drawn towards Covent Garden, the Prospectus of which house for the forthcoming Season includes the names of the most attractive artists the Italian Operatic Stage can boast. Competition has always been disastrous to Italian Opera, both commercially and from the point of view of art. A large amount has been already subscribed to the Opera Company, Limited, and the Directors have now decided to issue the Prospectus to the public. The Scheme promises to pay from 11 to 18 per cent., and may be worth the consideration of every class of investor, small and large.

Friday, June 9, 1882.

At last we have the satisfaction of knowing that, whatever the result, the East and West Yorkshire Union Railway Bill is before the Parliamentary Committee, and its claims will be placed before gentlemen who no doubt, are well able to decide whether the people of this district and other interested localities are to have their desire granted or not. Although there is a formidable array of opposition, several of the Companies are only watching certain clauses which specially affect their interests, and may be arranged by compromise, and we are glad to notice that the list of private gentlemen having petitions against the scheme is reduced to one. All we can now do is to wait patiently and watch the progress of events.

By the kindness of Mr. Wetherell, surveyor for the above line, we were enabled to give the first intimation on Wednesday afternoon respecting the hearing of the evidence before the Parliamentary Committee on what we sometimes call "The Rothwell Railway Bill," by exposing in Mr. Marshall's shop window a telegram to the following effect:—

House of Commons, 1.10. p.m.,
From Wetherell, House of Commons.
To Marshall, Times Office, Rothwell.

(Case open. Rodwell now addressing the Committee. Hull and Barnsley got their Bill. Our case looks favourable. Will write to-morrow.)

Hundreds, possibly thousands of people flocked to read the information for themselves, that at last, this Bill, on which rest the hopes of future prosperity for Rothwell and neighbourhood, had arrived at the Committee stage. We are sure that we echo the feelings of ninety-hundredths of the people, when we wing our heartiest good wishes with the gentlemen who have so laboriously prepared evidence in support of the line, and who go up from this and other places on the line to support and enforce the promotion of this scheme. If good wishes, earnest anticipations, enthusiastic support, liberal contributions, and careful, exhaustive evidence will win the day, the Rothwell Railway will be a thing of actual fact within two years from this, and the men who have done what they could, little or more, to further it, will look back with pride on the part they took in securing its success.

ROTHWELL LOCAL BOARD.

The usual meeting of the above Board was held on Monday evening, present—Messrs. W. Hargreaves, (chairman); Holmes, J. Hargreaves, J. Batty, S. Bramley, J. Oliver, J. Sanderson, J. Turner, and the clerk, treasurer and inspector.

The minutes of last meeting having been read and confirmed, the business was proceeded with.

ROTHWELL SEWAGE.—Mr. Jowitt, clerk of the works, read his 18th report, announcing that the main trunk of the drainage works is now finished; during the fortnight there have been laid 150 yards of pipes, 5 shafts, and 3 man holes. Connections had also been made with property belonging to Mr. Dickinson, Mr. W. Hainsworth, and Mr. Lake; also Mr. Judson's farm, the property of E. Calverley, Esq.

In reply to Mr. Bramley, Mr. Jowett said there were plenty of 6 inch pipes for the present.

Mr. J. Hargreaves thought that, as a number of persons have already been connected, the Clerk of Works should now hand in particulars of the same, and that accounts should be sent to the various parties for payment. This was agreed.

Mr. Hargreaves also wished to take the advice of the Board whether anything more should be done in Butcher Lane towards replacing the 'pavers' taken up for the main drain.

Mr. Sanderson having ascertained that the 'pavers' are good, was rather inclined to take up all the stones and macadamise the street. Mr. J. Hargreaves was quite sure they might be much more service elsewhere, where there was more traffic. Nothing further however was decided, except that this street, as well as the other unfinished pieces of work, shall be properly completed and cleaned by the contractor before withdrawing his men.

A letter was read from Mr. Parkinson, urging the advisability of the house connections being made throughout the line of sewage works by the present contractors. For several reasons, the Board did not see their way to accept this suggestion, and the matter was eventually left over.

The actual work for which Mr. Jowitt was engaged being now completed, and he having intimated his willingness to retire at once, it was proposed by Mr. Bramley, seconded by Mr. Batty and carried, That as the services of Mr. Jowitt as Clerk of Works terminate on Saturday next, a letter be written to Mr. Parkinson, requesting him to finish whatever work he may have with Mr. Jowitt during the present week.

Mr. Holmes suggested that Mr. Jowitt would be a likely man for some other work for which they might require some one, and on Mr. Jowitt's re-admission to the room, he stated his willingness to undertake any other work the Board might desire, if he was at liberty to do it.

The chairman remarked about the pipes which were left lying about in various parts of the district. Mr. Bramley suggested they should all be collected and put on the piece of land belonging to the Board. Mr. W. Hargreaves jocosely remarked that he believed they might be having a bill sent in some day for using certain land for Board purposes, which belonged to Mr. Wm. Hargreaves, and advised that the property laying about on that land be removed and placed in the Board's piece along with the pipes laying in various parts of the district.

Attention having also been called to the water pipes lying in the Board's district, the Clerk was instructed to write the Hunslet Sanitary Authority requesting that these pipes be removed as soon as possible.

Application for half-year's rent of £2, for sewage pipes going through the land belonging to Mr. Calverley was referred. Mr. Holmes said this length of pipes should be measured, as well as the various lengths going through the land of other owners, and such list be preserved for future reference. Mr. Turner thoroughly coincided with the suggestion, and urged that it was very important to have this matter carefully and properly done the first time.

Mr. Bumby also wrote, asking for a settlement of his claim for damages. The clerk was directed to ask Mr. Haley to complete this matter.

HIGHWAYS.—The clerk said the contract for team labour concluded that day.

Considerable discussion arose as to the most economical way of hiring team labour; the kind of horses used, and the idleness of the men being strongly complained of by several members. Mr. Sanderson suggested what seemed to meet with general approval as a better means of utilizing the men and horses employed on the roads; he thought a great saving would be gained by having one man to 'hack,' and two to fill the carts, and instead of shovelling the stone out of the cart, to have them shot up where required. Mr. Oliver, Mr. Holmes and the chairman all spoke more or less on the same subjects. Mr. J. Hargreaves and Mr. Holmes also referred to the time at which work was commenced, and asked that a clause should be inserted in the agreement, to commence work on the roads at seven in the morning, and to terminate not earlier than five in the evening, and that payments for the contract shall be made monthly.

It was eventually decided on the motion of Mr. J. Hargreaves, seconded by Mr. Oliver, to advertise in the Rothwell Times for team labour as before; also for 'horses' per day.

HEALTH REPORT.—Dr. Glaister, the medical officer, attended and was sorry to have to report the spread of scarlet fever; they had over 20 new cases since last meeting. There are now 37 children in the acute stage of the disease, besides several mild cases, which were not medically attended. In the National School, out of 400 children on the books, there were only 207 present, and it was a question whether the schools should not be closed.

The chairman remarked that the Board School was not suffering anything like so severely as the National; there were about 180 children in attendance out of some 250.

Dr. Glaister did not think the schools were to blame at all for spreading the disease. He did not desire to recommend the closing of the schools, but it was a part of the routine in such epidemics; a considerable responsibility rested on his shoulders and those of the Board, if every means were not taken for preventing their spread

The chairman thought that the argument was on the other side, as the fever had spread most rapidly while the schools had been closed for the holidays.

In reply to Mr. Turner, Dr. Glaister said that the hotter weather might tend to increase the disease, but would not cause it.

Dr. Glaister stated, as published in the bills, that any person exposing a child during the process of desqumation, is liable to prosecution. The clerk also read the clauses of the Public Health Act, bearing on the subject.

Mr. Batty enquired how long a child should be kept from school on account of fever. Dr. Glaister said there was no definite time, but it should not attend until desquamation is quite complete and everything has been thoroughly disinfected. The chairman also stated that the teachers would not admit a scholar until they receive a certificate to the effect that he is in a fit state to attend.

The practice of mothers going into the houses of persons having the disease, and especially of taking young children with them was strongly denounced, as a means of spreading the disease. It was reported that a child died lately of the disease in this district, and several mothers immediately went in with young children, and remained for a considerable time in the infected house. The Board was agreed that flagrant actions like these deserved prosecution, and instructions were given to the officers of health to report any such case as directly breaks the law in these matters, in order that the Board may prosecute according to the powers conferred by the Public Health Act, as already stated in bills posted about the district some time ago.

It being the opinion of the Board and also of Dr. Glaister, that the closing of the schools is not likely to check the spread of the disease, but rather to increase it, a minute of the conversation held was ordered to be placed on the books.

HOSPITAL.—Mr. Sanderson, as a member of the Rural Sanitary Authority, stated that a meeting of the Authority was held on Wednesday, and that Dr Nowell in his annual report,, recommended the establishment of an hospital in the locality. He (Mr. Sanderson) had promised to bring this matter before the Board, and to enquire if the Board had any objection to join the Authority in carrying out the suggestion of Dr. Nowell, as a joint hospital under the Board and Authority. He asked Dr. Glaister's opinion.

Dr. Glaister said that his experience in Leeds was that very great difficulty is found in getting people to allow their friends or children to go into an hospital: the poorest people preferring to keep them at home. He had no doubt whatever that not a single mother in the district would allow her sick child to be removed to a fever hospital, were there one here now. His opinion was, that the cheaper and better way was to send any serious fever case to the excellent hospital at Leeds, and to pay the cost. In a case of small-pox, it would be well if the Board could make arrangements with the Leeds authorities for at once removing the patient there.

The chairman expressed his warm approval of the suggestion of Mr. Glaister, and declined being a party to the opening of a joint hospital.

Mr. James Hargreaves thought it strange to hear such a proposition from the Rural Authority as there was not such a thing connected with the Hunslet Union, they had to send all to Leeds.

Mr. Batty asked how the agreement with the Leeds Authorities should be framed; and after some conversation it was thought best to arrange for so much a case.

The chairman then proposed and Mr. Turner seconded—That the clerk write to the authorities of the Hospital, with a view to making an arrangement with them for the removal and attendance of any case of small-pox or diphtheria in this district.

FINANCE.—A number of accounts and salaries were passed and ordered to be paid.

During the fortnight the collector has received and paid in to the treasurer—

General District Rate	5	0	3
Water Rents	47	17	3
	£53	6	6

PLANS.—Mr. Hargreaves and Mr. Batty moved the approval of Mr. Judson's plans for certain alterations and improvements.

WATER.—The clerk read the reply of the Local Government Board respecting Mr. Lawton's supply of water, but there are no directions as to what the Board shall do in this particular case, and a more definite reply is to be asked for.

Mr. Oliver wished some arrangement could be made with Lord Stourton, so that the Board might put in the water without losing money at it. He would like Lord Stourton to be written to as well.

Mr. Sanderson thought they should ask about Royds Green as well.

BRIDGE.—Mr. Turner would like enquiry to be made as to whether the Church Street, bridge is not a county bridge.—Agreed.

ROTHWELL TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.

An eight days' mission was commenced by the above Society, on Sunday evening last, when a temperance sermon was preached in the Wesleyan Chapel by the Rev. Chas. A. Collingwood. There was a large congregation, who listened with interest and attention to the very excellent discourse. The sermon was founded on the advice given by Gamaliel in reference to Peter on trial, "Refrain from these men, and let them alone; for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought; but if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it, lest haply ye be found even to fight against God." Commencing with a denunciation of the time-serving and cowardly policy of Gamaliel, as evinced in these words, the preacher proceeded to point out that all past efforts for the advancement of any good work have been met by opposition; after much struggling it is tolerated, and is ultimately accepted and generally approved.

was the case with the gospel itself, and d also been exemplified in the matter of perance. He held that with the means aliel had, of examining the doctrines and ings of the apostles, he ought honestly carefully to have considered whether they ld be supported or put down; if good, as a leader of the people, should have wn his influence on their side, and not folded his arms, and let them struggle lone. These arguments were used with t force in regard to the action of christian ple, particularly in relation to the temper- movement. Mr. Collingwood then rred to some of the evil results of the k traffic, and the urgent need for all istian people to further and support the ns used for its diminution and abolition. losing, an earnest and eloquent appeal made, to assist the movement by discon- ing the use of intoxicants themselves, by using their influence with others for same object.

On Monday a meeting was held in the large m of the Mechanics' Institute, which was l filled. Mr W. Cave, at the request of president, Mr. Clark, occupied the chair, gave an able address on the subject of perance. Mr. R. Clough, of Rochdale, ent of the Temperance League), was the ertised speaker, and proceeded to address audience on the various aspects of the stion as observed in his own experience. speech was agreeably illustrated by anec- incident, and humour, and was atten- ly listened to and heartily applauded.

On Tuesday evening, Mr. Clough addressed rge open-air meeting on the piece of land r the Cross, and again delighted and rested his audience by his strong argu- ts, his stirring appeals, and his sparkling ticisms. In the absence of Dr. Nowell, o was expected to occupy the chair) Mr. mpson introduced the lecturer and sided. Towards the close of the meeting, Nowell came in, and after apologising his delay, made some suitable remarks on subject in hand.

On Wednesday, the meeting was again held the open-air, and was largely attended. W. Batty took the chair, and introduced speakers. Mr. Smith, of Leeds, made a ing speech, mainly consisting of his own experiences, and the change which had n wrought in him by the adoption of total tinence and religion. Mr. Matson ceeded in an argumentative address, in ich statistics shewed plainly the great antages, nationally and individually, which uld accrue from the practice of temperance.

Last evening, the meeting was held in the chanics' Hall, which was nearly full. J. Butterick presided, and the audience s addressed by Mr. Stansfield, of Hunslet, d Mr. Emmerson, of Beeston Hill.

Mr. Stansfield referred to his own know- ge of the two sides, and also read a mposition on the subject.

Mr. Emmerson delivered an eloquent dress, which for point, earnestness, interest d wit, was a marked success, and must e carried conviction to the minds of all o heard.

Votes of thanks were presented each ening at the close of the meetings. The mber of signatures to the temperance edge for the five evenings is 56 up-grown rsons and 25 children.

The Temperance Band has played a promi- nt and attractive part in the services, ving paraded the town previous to the etings, and accompanied the singing of the ospel Temperance Hymns, which have been ed throughout. Mr. T. Blackburn has led e band, while Mr. J. Idle conducted the oir.

OULTON-WITH-WOODLESFORD SCHOOL BOARD.

The monthly meeting of the Board was ld on Monday last, Mr. Jackson, chair- an; the Rev. A. J. Irvin, Messrs. Mason d Nowell and the clerk and attendance ficer were present. The minutes of the evious meeting having been read and nfirmed, the clerk reported that he had vertised for a pupil teacher but without ccess; Mr. Longbottom had however ritten, stating that Henry Nowell, a pupil his department, was desirous of entering e service of the Board as a pupil teacher. e Board agreed to the appointment, at a ary of £5 per annum, to be increased to 5 on passing the examination.

The usual salaries and some small accounts re ordered to be paid, and cheques were awn for the same. The requirements of e school were ordered to be supplied. The ount of school fees, &c., received during month and payments made were reported. The clerk was instructed to advertise in Schoolmaster for a successor to Mr. ngbottom, (who is leaving the service of Board) at a salary of £100 per annum, th house and water.

Mr. Mason reported that Mr. Calverley clined to make any change in the present rangements respecting the holidays at ulton Schools, and the Board decided that holidays at the Woodlesford School shall main unaltered.

Remissions of school fees were granted in cases.

EAST AND WEST YORKSHIRE UNION RAILWAY.

The Committee to whom this bill has been referred sat on Wednesday, Mr. PORTMAN in the chair. The other members of the Committee were Lord Henry Scott, Mr. Thorold Rogers, and Mr. Charles Ross. The petitioners against the bill were the Midland, the Great Northern, the Great Northern and Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire (jointly), the Hull and Barnsley, and the North-Eastern Railway Companies, the Aire and Calder Navigation, and Mr. Calverley; Oulton. Mr. Hunter Rodwell, Q.C., Mr. Vaughan Richards, QC., Mr Ledgard, and Mr. Buckingham Pope were counsel for the promoters; Mr. Bidder, Q.C. and Mr. Saunders, Q.C., for the Midland Railway; Mr. Pope, Q.C., and Mr. Balfour Browne for the Great Northern and Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire; Mr. Bidder, Q.C., Mr. Pembroke Stephens, Q.C., and Mr. Meysey-Thompson for the North-Eastern Railway. The Aire and Calder Navigation and Hull and Barnsley Railways were not represented by counsel. —Mr. RODWELL, Q.C., in opening the case for the promoters, said if the Hull and Barnsley line was necessary the present was still more required. The line was not in any degree a speculative line, but was a genuine attempt made by the colliery owners, ironmasters, and landed proprietors to serve their own local wants and to develop the capacities of the district. The district was at present suffering from the want of railway accommodation; and no less than four large collieries were in liquidation owing to the want of this accommodation. The railway consists of a main line from Drax to Ardsley, and several spurs to bring the railway into communication with the other railways with which the promoters wished to be connected. Railways Nos. 1 and 2, twenty-three miles in length, connect the Great Northern Railway at Ardsley with the Hull and Barnsley authorised line at Drax. No. 3 railway gives communication with Wakefield by a spur near Lofthouse; No. 4 railway connects the line with the Midland Railway at Woodlesford, and gives a direct communication with Leeds; No. 5 railway connects the line with the North-Eastern Railway at Burton Salmon; and spur A 1 opens up a communication with the Robin Hood Colliery. Being intended for local accommodation and to serve the district, the stations would be numerous, and would be at Lofthouse, Rothwell, Woodlesford, Castleford, Allerton Bywater, Fairbairn, Hillam and Birkin, Gateforth, Burn, and Camblesforth, eastward to Drax. The proposed capital was £520,000, with the usual running powers. The Hull and Barnsley Company, for various reasons, did not wish to take any prominent part in the inquiry; and there was no doubt that they would welcome the line as an important extension and feeder of their system. The railway would largely develop the mineral wealth of the district. It ran through a coalfield 23 miles in extent. There were already in existence no less than 20 pits of the largest capacity between Ardsley and Ledstone, and he should prove by scientific witnesses that beyond this there was a large field of coal which only required railway accommodation to be opened out and become workable. The opening of this new field was all the more necessary because he was informed that the coalfield eastward of Ardsley was rapidly running out. The district was capable of producing an output of 3½ millions per annum. There were stone-quarries of great value in the district; and the line would greatly benefit the tenants and landowners of the valuable warp land towards Drax. He did not intend to enlarge upon the great advantage the line would be as opening out a communication with Hull and the extensive new docks there, because the Committee had already heard a great deal of evidence on that point, nor would he dwell upon the notorious fact that the North-Eastern Railway gave great advantages with their northern pits which they did not give to Hull. With regard to the petitions presented against the bill, the people of Rothwell had presented a petition in favour of the line, and they were very much surprised that Mr. Calverley should oppose it. The North Eastern petition was simply a petition against competition. Whilst he could understand their opposition, he could not understand the opposition of the Great Northern and Midland Railways. With the exception of Mr. Calverley, the consent of the landowners from one end of the line to the other had been obtained, and all the towns in the district were ready to welcome the formation of the line.

The first witness called was Mr. Joseph Charlesworth, colliery and land owner, Lofthouse Park. He stated that he was one of the partners in the firm of Messrs. J. and J. Charlesworth, was a promoter of the scheme, was one of the preliminary directors, and had subscribed towards the preliminary expenses. The firm of which he was a member had four large collieries in the district, namely, the Rothwell Haigh, Robin Hood, Newmarket, and Bottomboat Collieries, which gave employment to nearly 2,000 men, and produced an output of 1,100,000 tons of coal per annum. The firm owned 750 acres of freehold land in the district and leased 4,500 acres. They possessed 39 million tons of unworked coal capable of being brought to market. If the new line were made, they estimated that their daily output of coal would be increased from 2,400 tons to 3,000 tons. They paid £9 000 to Mr. Calverley last year as a royalty on coal, and if their output were increased the royalty would be increased. The proposed line would not be much shorter to Hull than the present line; but the great difficulty was the delay. The North-Eastern Railway appeared to him to throw every difficulty in their way. The witness was under examination most of the day.

The Committee of the House of Commons, presided over by Mr. PORTMAN, appointed to consider this Bill, met again yesterday.

Mr. Thos. Bower, of the firm of Messrs. T. and R. Bower, colliery owners, of Allerton Main, examined by Mr. Ledgard for the promoters, said that the firm held land under Sir Chas. Lowther, Mr. Calverley, and other gentlemen, from which they took the coal. They paid Mr. Calverley about £2,000 a year for royalties. His family some time ago worked all the pits in the neighbourhood of the proposed line, but had parted with some of them to a company, which had since failed, partly owing to the depression in trade, and partly owing to the lack of railway accommodation and the consequent high rates of carriage. His object in supporting this bill was that they might get direct access to Hull, and so be able to compete in the shipping business; and also that he might be able to send his coal to the towns in the West Riding. The firm held 3,200 acres of land which contained coal. This line would reduce the distance to Leeds by one half, as at present the North-Eastern Company gave no facilities whatever for sending coal to that town. At present most of the coal was carried by water. He estimated that the increased business they would obtain if this line was made would be at the rate of 1,000 tons a day. Since this bill was deposited, the North Eastern had sent a letter offering reduced rates to Leeds. Last year the firm sent 58,000 tons of coal to Leeds by water, and if this line were made he was of opinion that they would be able to do a large trade by railway also. The North-Eastern rates to Hull were excessive. They were advanced in 1872 from 1s. 9d. to 2s. 3d. a ton when coal was dear, and they had not been reduced. The rate to Antwerp was 5s. 3d., and to Hornsea it was 5s. 10d. a ton. It would be a great convenience to have access to the new docks at Hull. He was one of the provisional directors of the line, and was prepared to subscribe capital if the bill were passed. He had no doubt that the capital would be raised. He had not heard any one object to it except Mr. Calverley.

Witness was cross-examined by Mr. Bidder (for the Midland and North-Eastern Co.'s) with a view to show that the rate for carriage would be no less by this proposed line than by the existing Companies, so far as this colliery is concerned.

Cross-examined by Mr Balfour Brown for the Great Northern: He admitted that the steam coal from the Barnsley pits, which would be carried over the Hull and Barnsley to Hull, might injure their trade at Hull to some extent.

Re-examined: It was not true that this line was promoted in the interest of the Hull and Barnsley. Personally, he preferred a connection with the Great Northern system.

Mr Joseph Akroyd, Allerton Bywater, colliery proprietor, examined by Mr Buckingham Pope, said that he was a shareholder in the Silkstone and Haigh Moor Collieries. The rates on the North Eastern had prevented them from competing with the collieries on the Midland line, and he considered that they would be greatly benefited by this line. In fact it was the [illegible] The Allerton Bywater Colliery was one of the nearest to Hull, and the coal was sent to the Baltic and the Mediterranean and the French trade. If this line were not made he would be in a worse position than now, because the Hull and Barnsley line would take in the South Yorkshire coal for shipping at Hull. The losses on collieries in the district during the last few years had been more than the cost of this line would be.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bidder: Witness said that he expected a cheaper rate of carriage by the new line, but admitted that according to the distance it worked out at a half-penny per mile—the same rate at which coal was carried by the North-Eastern.

Mr. Matthew Hall, manager of the Lofthouse Colliery Company, examined by Mr. Ledgard, said they commenced winning coal in 1878, and had been extending the output ever since. The output last year was 190,000 tons. The coal was suitable for shipment, and Hull was the natural port for export. The rate to Hull was 3s. 10d. per ton, but they complained, and it was reduced first to 3s. 6d., then to 3s. 1d., and afterwards to 2s. 10d. a ton. They had applied to the North-Eastern for cells at Hull, but they had never got them. There were 79 cells at the station, and 71 were let to one merchant. They imported a good deal of timber from Hull, and it would be an advantage to have a return cargo by the new line.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bidder: He expected that the rate to Hull would be lower by the new line—about 1s. 6d., a third penny a mile. He did not know of any coal carried at that rate.

The Committee adjourned.

MARKETS.

LEEDS CORN, Tuesday.—Our market to day has been well attended. The business done, however, has not been large, the sale for wheat being limited at last week's prices. Maize, beans, and peas remain steady; oats firm. Flour without change—No. 1, 37s 6d; No. 2, 34s 6d; No. 3, 33s.—Leeds Corn Millers Association Report.

WAKEFIELD CATTLE, Wednesday.—To-day's market was characterised by larger supplies of beef, mutton, and lamb, a larger attendance of buyers, and a better tone in the trade. Twenty-five pens were occupied by Canadian bullocks in splendid condition, fourteen pens were filled with useful Irish animals, and there was also a pen of bullocks from Hamburg, and several droves of very good north-country animals. Owing to the increased supply and various other causes, the quotations for beef were a shade easier. Sheep met with a moderate inquiry, and late quotations were maintained. Lambs were in good request. Pig trade ruled heavy. A fair clearance had been effected at the close.

WOODLELFORD AND OULTON CHORAL SOCIETY.

The annual Soiree in connection with this society was held on Wednesday 31st May ulto., in the Board Schools, the proceedings commencing with a tea which was provided and served under the superintendence of a committee of the lady members of the society, and partaken of by a considerable number of members and friends. Immediately after the tea the president (the Rev. A. J. E. Irvine) who was obliged to leave early to fulfil another engagement, addressed a few remarks to the members, having reference to the position of the society as shewn by the report and balance sheet, and congratulated them on both the position and prospects of the society.

After an interval of half an-hour or more during which the tables were removed and the room cleared for the subsequent festive proceedings, a general meeting was held for the election of officers for the coming year, Mr. Flockton, one of the vice-presidents occupying the chair in Mr. Irvine's absence. The following is a list of the selected officers:—

PRESIDENT.—The Rev. A. J. E. Irvine (vicar of Woodlesford.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.—Messrs. C. J. Hoyle and W. Flockton.

HON. TREASURER.—Mr. R. J. Smith.

HON. SECRETARY.—Mr. Walter Lockwood.

COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Joseph Craven, W. Hirst, T. West, Wm. Poole, H. Bell and Misses Castle and Stead. The addition of ladies to the committee is a new feature in the annals of this society, but a very proper one considering the large proportion of lady members which it numbers.

After the transaction of this business, dancing was commenced and heartily kept up to the end of the night's proceedings; the services of an efficient pianist having been engaged to supply the music. For the entertainment of those who did not dance or who only cared to engage in that active recreation occasionally, draughts and whist and other quiet games could be indulged in at tables set apart for the purpose, and in an adjoining class room, a variety of refreshments were provided so that no reasonable efforts were wanting to make the night's proceedings what they proved to be, thoroughly enjoyed throughout.

There has been a considerable increase of members both honorary and practical during the past year, and the balance sheet shews a balance of nearly £4 in the hands of the treasurer.

A class for elementary instruction is to be formed during the coming session, a sufficient number of names having already been obtained to give it a good start. This will no doubt in a short time be a valuable help to the higher class in improving the musical capacity of its members and facilitating the singing at sight which is so essential to efficiency.

MR. JOHN BATTY F.R.H.S. AT BRADFORD.

At the meeting of the Bradford Historical and Antiquarian Society held on the 5th of May, Mr. John Batty, F.R.H.S., of Ardsley and formerly of Rothwell, read the second part of his paper on "The year book of East Ardsley from 1652 to 1666, he having read the first part on 14th of April, at the same place. Mr. T. T. Empsall occupied the chair.

Mr. Batty said that in the former part of his paper he had confined his remarks to those matters which might be termed illustrations of national history, but to-night he should deal with local affairs now nearly obsolete. "Hues" and "Crys" for felonies are frequently mentioned; in 1655 a sum of money was spent in searching for a woman who had escaped from the House of Correction. About 1653 the roads in some places were in such a bad condition that bridges had to be erected in order to avoid the ditches, and for several succeeding years payments are entered for the "repairinge" of some of those bridges. Beacons and Watchmen are mentioned, and it states that in 1803 Beacons were erected, an invasion by Bonaparte being feared; it also says that the inhabitants had to contribute to the repair of "Ye House of Correction" at Wakefield. The "Pinder" was selected and the oath of office administered. "Coroner's Inquests" or "Coroner's Quests" are spoken of, and as no district officer was appointed it was a difficult matter getting a Coroner in those days. In 1664, money was paid for "goeinge to Leedes for a Coroner" and in 1666 "Spent uppon Robert Simpson and his horse goeinge to Barnsley to fetch a coroner;" the inhabitants of Ardsley, who committed suicide are all mentioned by name; other entries show that the "Whipping-post" and "Stocks," the "Village Butts" and "Ducking-stool" were in use in the parish. Excise charges, fines and licences are referred to in several places, at one period a fine of one shilling was imposed on all persons who absented themselves from church on Sunday, and an extra fine of 3s. 4d. if found tippling by the churchwardens who visited each public-house during divine service; a publican named Barnwell was fined twenty shillings for brewing without licence. Abuses in the cloth and woollen trade seem to have been common about this time as a "Searcher of Cloth" or "Inspector of Woollens" is mentioned, rules were made and several fines imposed on persons who did not adhere to them. Overseers were appointed to arrange about orphans being apprenticed to some trade, and a system for the relief of the poor was instituted, the money required being obtained by assessment. During the "Cromwellian" era, St. Michael's Church lapsed into such a dilapidated condition that it had to be closed for six years. In conclusion, Mr. Batty spoke of how many points of interest may be brought out of such a book as this; besides furnishing a curious insight into the local government and social condition of an obscure parish; it gives signs of a natural struggling for religious freedom, the ultimate accomplishment of which, has placed England in its present glorious position. A vote of thanks was proposed to Mr. Batty for his excellent paper by Mr. Bottomley, seconded by Mr. Brooks, and supported by Dr. Maffey and Mr. Empsall. Mr. Batty briefly replied.

THEFT FROM A MOTHER—Albert Atkinson Hartley, (17), of Rothwell, was charged with breaking into the house of his mother, Harriet Hodges, Butcher-lane, Rothwell, between the 27th of May and 2nd of June, and stealing therefrom 2 quilts, 1 sheet and other articles. When apprehended by P.C. 129 Wilson, 2 pawn tickets referring to the missing property were found upon him. He is remanded until to-day.

CRICKET.

ROTHWELL v. HUNSLET NELSON.

The Rothwell first team was down on the card to play Hunslet last Saturday, at home, and made a very fair show of figures, although it must be remembered that Hunslet had their best team playing in the Emsley cup ties against Low Wortley Victoria. A Ward was for the 3rd time this season top scorer, his average with the bat being 27·1.

OULTON v. LEEDS CLARENCE (an eleven).

Played at Oulton on Saturday, and was remarkable for the distinctive trundling of Mr. Irvin's 'teasers.' Some of the home eleven were weak in the fielding department. Eventually the match had to be abandoned owing to rain. The club is down for the Brewery eleven on Saturday, and a day's match with Cudworth on Monday. Score:—

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We would particularly urge our friends to send in their letters and news, as early as possible, as we cannot accept contributions later than Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, except in the case of matters occurring on Wednesday or Thursday, which should be forwarded within a short period after. Advertisements may be sent as late as Friday morning.

CORRESPONDENCE.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our correspondents. ED.

THE WHISPERING GALLERY.

IF report speaks truly, good things are in store for the sporting community of Leeds and district, as it is currently rumoured that the race-course at Stourton has recently been purchased for the purpose of reviving the old Leeds races which have long been abandoned. Should this turn out to be correct, in addition to the facilities which will be offered for witnessing the popular sport we may look out for a large increase in the number of strolling and dissolute vagabonds who always infest the neighbourhood of race meetings, which will certainly not be a desirable state of things.

THE annual social reunion of the Woodlesford Choral Society took place last week, and by all accounts passed off with the usual success. It is stated that the company was not a very numerous one, but that did not prevent those present enjoying themselves thoroughly, and the only losers were the absentees.

ONE of the most interesting cricket matches of the season in this locality, will be brought off to morrow, when the elevens of the Brewery and Oulton will contend for the supremacy. Conjecture as to the result is very rife, and appearances seem to indicate a close finish. Nous verrons

BUSINESS promises ere long to be rather brisk in the marriage market, so far as regards the higher circles of genteel society, two of our most prominent neighbours having been laid by the heels by Master Cupid; as the report in the case of one party seems to require further confirmation, it will be as well not to mention names in that case; but it may be taken for granted that Miss Calverley, of Oulton Hall, will at no very distant date, leave the home of her forefathers and her maiden name at one and the same time.

IF the racecourse, as mentioned above, really has been acquired for the purpose stated, the proprietor might at no very extraordinary cost lay down a first class cricket ground, suitable for county and other matches, and thus enable Leeds to assume its proper and rightful position as a cricket centre, which position is at present being usurped by Bradford.

EVERYBODY except the unlucky doorkeeper of the "Whispering Gallery" is on the tip toe of expectation as regards the "Rothwell Railway Scheme" as some enthusiasts delight to call it. Certainly there is plenty of opposition to cool their ardour, but so, all the Companies and the solitary private opponent put together are quite insufficient to stop the onward tide of expectation as regards its success, and as one opens the door of the Gallery, a storm of congratulations deafen one's ears and we cannot hear the cries of those people at all, who, it is said do not want it.

QUID NUNC.

OULTON WESLEYAN SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY.

To the Editor of the Rothwell Times.

Dear Sir,

The correspondent who furnishes you with a report of the above, appears to have omitted any mention of a new and very pleasing feature, and one which was introduced at this anniversary for the first time, viz.—the decoration of the Chapel. The task of decorating was undertaken by several ladies and gentlemen connected with the school. The space containing the communion table was literally covered with a choice selection of hothouse plants, which were kindly lent by, and arranged under the personal superintendence of Mr. Mason, and the other parts of the chapel were relieved by plants and flowers, wild flowers predominating, the whole having a very nice effect. I think hearty thanks are due both to those who lent or gave the plants or flowers, and those who assisted in the arranging of them, and I trust that the step taken this year will form a precedent and be kept up each anniversary.

I am, dear sir,
Yours truly,
FLOREAT.

Sold only in boxes, 7½d. and 1s 1½d., labelled "JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received: "Gentlemen,—it may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment) in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, L.R.C.P.E. Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

Holloway's Ointment and Pills—Diseases of the skin, ringworm, scurvy, scorbutic eruptions and swellings, sore heads, and the most inveterate skin disease to which the human frame is subject, cannot be treated with a more easy and reliable remedy than Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which act so peculiarly on the constitution and so purify the blood, that those diseases are at once eradicated from the system, and a lasting cure obtained. They are equally efficacious in the cure of excoriations, burns, scalds, glandular swellings, ulcerous wounds, rheumatism and contracted and stiffened joints. These medicines operate mildly but surely. The cures effected by them are not temporary or apparent only, but complete and permanent.

The most wholesome and nutritious of confections is far less consumed than it would be were it not for the greatly adulterated articles sold under the name of chocolate. Every cake of Chocolate bearing the name of Cadbury is guaranteed to consist solely of pure Cocoa and white sugar, and may therefore be given to children with perfect safety. Chocolate makers by special appointment to the Queen.

Dr. Bernays, Public Analyst for Southwark, on Cocoa "When does Cocoa cease to be Cocoa? What are we to say to Cocoas containing only 12 to 20 per cent. of Cocoas? If the public would receive advice, a slice of bread and butter with a thin drink of genuine Cocoa would be both wholesomer and cheaper than when thickened and sweetened." To ensure a cup of dure Cocoa use Cadbury's Cocoa Essence, which is thin, refreshing, and three to four times stronger than hese adulterated articles

LIBERALS & CONSERVATIVES UNITED!—This may sound strange, but it is nevertheless true, that Liberals and Conservatives alike are unanimous in declaring that BUDDEN'S BALSAM OF HOREHOUND AND COLTSFOOT" is the best remedy for Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and, in fact, any Affections of the Chest and Lungs. One dose relieves, one bottle cures. Ask for "BUDDEN'S BALSAM," and take nothing else.—Bottles 1s. 1½d. 2s. 9d. Agent for Rothwell, A. Marshall, Stationer and Patent Medicine Dealer.

A SKILFUL SURGICAL OPERATION.

The American Ambassador at Vienna, Mr. Kasson, has lately forwarded to his Government an interesting account of a remarkable surgical operation lately performed by Prof. Billroth, of Vienna, which, wonderful to tell, consisted in the removal of a portion of the human stomach, involving nearly one-third of the organ—and, strange to say, the patient recovered—the only successful operation of the kind ever performed. The disease for which this terrible operation was performed was, cancer of the stomach, attended with the following symptoms:—The appetite is quite poor. Their is a peculiar indescribable distress in the stomach, a feeling that has been described as a faint "all-gone" sensation; a sticky slime collects about the teeth, especially in the morning, accompanied by an unpleasant taste. Food fails to satisfy their peculiar faint sensation, but on the contrary, it appears to aggravate the feeling. The eyes are sunken, tinged with yellow; the hands and feet become cold and sticky—a cold perspiration. The sufferers feel tired all the time, and sleep does not seem to give rest. After a time the patient becomes nervous and irritable, gloomy, his mind filled with evil forebodings. When rising suddenly from a recumbent position there is a dizziness, a whistling sensation, and he is obliged to grasp something firm to keep from falling. The bowels become costive, the skin dry and hot at times; the blood becoming thick and stagnant and does not circulate properly. After a time the patient spits up food soon after eating, sometimes in a sour and fermented condition, sometimes sweetish to the taste. Oftentimes there is palpitation of the heart, and the patient fears he may have heart disease. Towards the last the patient is unable to retain any food whatever, as the opening into the intestines becomes closed, or nearly so. Although this disease is indeed alarming, sufferers with the above-named symptoms should not be nervous, for nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand have no cancer, but simply dyspepsia or indigestion, a disease easily removed if treated in the proper manner. The safest and best remedy for the disease is Seigel's Curative Syrup, a vegetable preparation sold by all chemists and medicine vendors, and by the proprietors, A J White, Limited, 21, Farringdon Road, London, E.C. This Syrup strikes at the very foundation of the disease, and drives it, root and branch, out of the system. The genuine has "A J. WHITE, LIMITED," engraved in the Government Stamp.

ONE EXPERIENCE FROM MANY. "I had been sick and miserable so long and had caused my husband so much trouble and expense, no one seemed to know what ailed me, and I was completely disheartened and discouraged. In this frame of mind I got a box of Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills, and used them unknown to my family. I soon began to improve and gained so fast that my husband and family thought it strange and unnatural, but when I told them what had helped me, they said, 'Hurrah for Dr. Bardsley's Antibilious Pills! long may they prosper, for they have made mother well and us happy." Sold by all Chemists in Boxes at 13½d. and 2s. 9d.

Box sent post free on receipt of 15 or 35 stamps by Wm. Mather, Wholesale Druggist, Manchester.

These famous "lozenges" are now sold by most respectable chemists in this country at 1s. 1½d. per box. People troubled with a "hacking cough," a "slight cold," or bronchial affections, cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious Pulmonary and Asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government Stamp around each box.—Prepared by JOHN I. BROWN & SONS, Boston, U.S. European depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

THE SKIN.—The Glory of Woman, the Pride of Man.—It contains the delicate lines of beauty, and constitutes all that we term "Loveliness," yet how many thousands have their skins blemished by the use of the irritant soaps, Carbolic, Coal Tar, Glycerine, and the coarse coloured soaps, caustic with alkali, and made of putrid fats. The more delicate the skin the quicker its ruin. THE ALBION MILK AND SULPHUR SOAP is the purest, the whitest, and most purifying of all soaps, by its purifying action taking away and preventing all pimples, blotches, and roughness. It is recommended by the entire medical profession as the most elegant preparation for the skin that is known. A boon to sensitive skins. By all Chemists, in tablets, 6d. and 1s.—The Albion Sanitary Soap Co., 532, Oxford Street, London.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS!—Are you broken in your rest by a sick child suffering with the pain of cutting teeth? Go at once to a chemist and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup is sold by Medicine dealers everywhere at 1s. 1½d. per bottle.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE HAIR.—If your hair is turning grey or white, or falling off, use "The Mexican Hair Renewer," for it will positively restore in every case Grey or White hair to its original colour, without leaving the disagreeable smell of most "Restorers." It makes the hair charmingly beautiful, as well as promoting the growth of the hair on bald spots, where the glands are not decayed. Ask your Chemist for "THE MEXICAN HAIR RENEWER," sold by Chemists and Perfumers everywhere at 3s. 6d. per Bottle. Wholesale depot removed to 33, Farringdon Road, London.

THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN, LIMITED.

The scheme to amalgamate the two Italian operatic houses of London, and to concentrate this form of entertainment within the walls of Covent Garden is about to be brought forward under the most favorable auspices. Practical men of business have taken the matter in hand, plans have been fully discussed, and the details of the prospectus well digested. Some of the highest personages of social life have expressed their acquiescence in the scheme which has already been supported by the promise of large sums of money by intending shareholders. Another Season has paved the way for the accomplishment of the views of those who believe amalgamation the best course to pursue in the interests of both enterprises. It is an open secret that the Italian Opera Season last year at her Majesty's Theatre was not a success, nor did Mr. Mapleson care to risk an Italian Season in the autumn. It has been thought better that Mr. Mapleson, reinforced by certain members of the splendid troupe of Covent Garden, shall confine his energy to the United States, where his experience of American affairs will be at the service of the Royal Italian Opera Company, Covent Garden (Limited). Freed from the limited competition of Her Majesty's Theatre, the whole staff of the Italian Opera singers, and the entire body of Italian Opera goers will be drawn towards Covent Garden, the Prospectus of which house for the forthcoming Season includes the names of the most attractive artists the Italian Operatic Stage can boast. Competition has always been disastrous to Italian Opera, both commercially and from the point of view of art. A large amount has been already subscribed to the Opera Company, Limited, and the Directors have now decided to issue the Prospectus to the public. The Scheme promises to pay from 11 to 15 per cent., and may be worth the consideration of every class of investor, small and large.

ROTHWELL TEMPERANCE MISSION

The meetings in connection with the eight days' mission of the Rothwell Temperance Society were continued on Friday and succeeding days.

The array of speakers on Friday in the Mechanics' Institute, was perhaps the most attractive and effective of the whole series of meetings. The Rev. C. A. Collingwood occupied the chair, and filled that post with his usual tact and ability, addressing some very excellent remarks to those present. Mr. H. Hibbert, of Bradford, was the advertised speaker, and, as all who have heard him will acknowledge, is a host in himself, blending most pleasingly a happy knack of illustrations with his strong arguments and earnest appeals. Besides him, however, the platform was re-inforced by the presence of Mr. Hector Davidson, who never spoke more excellently and convincingly.

On Saturday, the meeting was held in the open air, and was largely attended by men and youths, although the air was very cold. The attraction was the announcement that Mr. Jasper and his stalwart son would speak, and both one and the other did good service to the cause by their experimental observations and resolutions, and no doubt did a great deal towards deciding working men especially as against any strength giving qualities of intoxicating drinks. Mr. J. R. Seanor occupied the chair, and conducted the meeting.

On Sunday, the Rev. J. Spensley preached sermons in the Primitive Methodist Chapel, afternoon and evening, bearing on the subject of the mission, and earnestly exhorted all christians to join the temperance movement. There were large congregations, particularly in the evening, and some good impressions were made.

On Tuesday, there was a large gathering of Band of Hope children in the Hall, Mr. J. Goodall in the chair, when Mr. W. Cave gave an excellent address to the little teetotallers.

On Wednesday evening, a special public meeting was held in the Hall, the band having previously paraded the town. The platform presented the most promising and respectable array of speakers that we have seen for some time, and the addresses given were worthy of being listened to by as many thousands as there were hundreds.

The room was quite not filled which was certainly anticipated, and deserved to be, especially as this was the only meeting at which persons wishing well to the cause or having received benefit from the efforts made could help to defray the amount which the committee had expended in printing and use of the Hall. We would not like to put it down to the fact that there was a collection that many who might and ought to have been present were not; surely there is too much of the honest desire to pay for what we get, in the hearts of the Rothwell men. However, the meeting was an excellent one, and we congratulate the committee on the capital "platform" they presented on this evening.

At seven o'clock, the Rev. C. A. Collingwood opened the meeting with the singing of a Gospel Temperance hymn and a short prayer, after which he expressed his pleasure in stating that the Rev. R. S. Boulter, a recently returned missionary from India, whom many of them knew, had kindly consented to take the chair, and he very heartily invited him now to occupy it.

The Rev. R. S. Boulter having taken the post offered, gave some valuable experiences on the drink question in India. He stated that Europeans taking spirits could not live in that country, and that those who took any intoxicants whatever, were, in proportion, liable to take the fever very much more than the total abstainer. He and his wife had been out there nearly ten years, and had entirely abstained from such drinks, (he being a life teetotaler), and they had neither of them suffered from fever or any other disorder endemic to India. He heartily supported the object of this meeting, and wished them every success.

Mr. P. Gilston in addressing the meeting, expressed the gratification he had in seeing Mr. Boulter in the chair, and in hearing the remarks he had made respecting the temperance question in India. It appeared that not only was total abstinence the best in England, but also in the tropics, as well as for the teetotaler who has penetrated nearest to the North Pole. Mr. Gilston continued to show from his own observation, how temperance men were the men who got on, while others were left behind or sunk into obscurity.

Mr. Laycock followed in a plain but effective address in which he gave a short history of his own life and experience; commencing work as a poor lad, only earning 18s. a week when married, he had left the pot and pipe, and devoted himself to education and economy After gaining some rudiments of knowledge he secured a position as foreman, and afterwards commenced business as a small master —he now employed 170 work-people at his mill. He ascribed all his success to becoming sober, thoughtful, and persevering. He urged working men to follow his example, and leaving the drink, devote themselves to higher and nobler pursuits.

Mr. Jonathan Smith was the next speaker and his address evinced a remarkable power of eloquence seldom heard, his well-arranged sentences flowing as easily and naturally as the outpour of water from a well-filled reservoir. The basis of his remarks were a healthy mind and soul in a healthy body. He was thankful to say that though nearly 38 years old, and two brothers aged 36 and 40, they had never required a dose of medicine nor taken a shillingsworth of drink all their lives, but had always rejoiced in the best of health. This he attributed to temperate habits, Dr. Allbutt supporting his opinion. He had also for over twenty years, along with his friend Mr. Laycock, striven to gain as much knowledge as he could, and was resolved to continue doing so. He spoke lastly of the great possibilities of the human soul, of the higher objects which may be attained, and the blessed influence which may be brought to bear on others, by raising the whole man into a higher, holier and more beautiful life.

The speakers were all loudly and warmly applauded, and great attention was given to their addresses.

A collection was now made towards the expenses of the mission, after which the Rev. C. A. Collingwood moved a hearty vote of thanks to the speakers, seconded by Mr. B. Clark, and carried.

Mr. Gilston suitably acknowledged the vote of thanks.

Dr. Nowell had great pleasure in moving a vote of thanks to the chairman, whom he was glad to have met with He believed he had the highest authority for stating that the best state of health is not compatible with persons who drink intoxicants. As a medical man, he had always much better hope of a patient who was an abstainer than of one who was not.

Mr. E. Taylor seconded the vote which was carried.

Mr. Boulter having briefly replied, the doxology was sung and the benediction pronounced, and the meeting concluded

DEATH OF MR. MITCHELL.

An inquest was held yesterday, at the Silver Cross Inn, Dewsbury Road, before Mr. J. C. Malcolm, the Borough Coroner, on the body of David Mitchell (53), Moor-crescent, Hunslet. The deceased, who was one of the releiving officers of the Hunslet Union, died on Tuesday from internal injuries, the result of a fall on Saturday night. He was found lying near the Craven Gate Inn, Hunslet, by a person of the name of Atkinson. He was conveyed home to bed. The next day Mr. Groves, surgeon, was called in, and attended him up to the time of his death. During his illness he made a statement to the effect that his foot had tripped him up. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

CRICKET.

It need scarcely be said that it is the Secretary upon whom devolves the greater portion of the work connected with the club, and that an intelligent and energetic man should be chosen to fill this important post goes without saying.

The duties incidental to the office are very numerous, and at times trying, and it is the unfortunate secretary upon whose shoulders the blame is usually laid if anything goes wrong. He has to arrange the matches to be played, and to be found fault with if the list is not satisfactory, and during the season he is generally held responsible if any of the selected players failed to put in an appearance in a match; he is expected to collect all the subscriptions, and is regarded with disfavor at the end of the season if they are not all paid, when at the same time it is the duty of the players to pay their contributions unsolicited. There are many more of the disagreeables which fall to the lot of the secretary who has usuallly the additional satisfaction of knowing that his office is an honorary one, the sweets of which are few and far between, the only solace which he can derive from it being the knowledge that he has done his duty, with which solitary comfort he has to be satisfied as it is not the general practice of cricketers to take much note of the amount of credit due to the secretary in times of prosperity, whilst in times of adversity and and low water, he is greeted with more than his share of complaint.

The Secretary should invariably be a man well used to accounts and correspondence, as it is much easier for such a one to carry on the clerical duties of the post in the occasional spare moments of his ordinary business hours, than for a working man who scarcely takes up his pen from one week end to another; moreover, other cricket clubs are sometimes inclined to judge those wishful to arrange matches with them by the character of the secretary's written application, and thus many organisations are debarred the pleasure of good fixtures through having for a secretary a comparatively illiterate individual whose badly worded and written letters have a tendency to lower the status of his club.

In addition to educational qualifications, the secretary should be well versed in every detail of the game and its management, he should keep himself posted up in the doings of other clubs during a season, in order to be able at its close to form a good idea of the strength of probable opponents; and having this knowledge he will be better able to make up a list of matches in which his club will have a reasonable chance of securing a fair amount of success, care being taken, that the list shall include a few clubs of known ability, defeat by whom will not be accounted disgrace, whereas a victory would bring additional credit upon the club, and the increased number of spectators who are always attracted by the prospect of good play, will by their payment for admission to the ground materially assist the funds of the club.

Finally, the secretary should be courteous and agreeable in his dealings with his fellow members, and while exercising a requisite amount of authority, avoid any appearance of dictatorship or mastery; such conduct only tending to create ill-feeling and insubordination, the sure forerunners of disunion and disruption; he should also keep a sharp look out, and at once supply the necessary requirements of the club, such as practice materials; by this means he will be enabled to keep the whole concern working smoothly and agreeably, with pleasure to himself and satisfaction to all concerned.

The committee of a cricket club should be composed of those who have the true interests of their club at heart, and who will think no task too heavy or irksome to be undertaken in its behalf. It is not advisable that all the members of the committee should be players, as however desirous of doing their duty impartially they may be, they cannot always resist the temptation to secure a place in the eleven, when they know that at the same time they are excluding better exponents of the game than themselves. By all means have a fair proportion of players on the committee, but let their number be balanced by those who take no part in the matches. In many cases where the principal players occupy this office exclusively, complaints that deserving men are left out of the elevens, are very frequent, and a non-player may often detect the signs of growing ability in a youthful aspirant for local fame sooner than his more actively engaged and less observant colleague, and may be the means of bringing to light talent which would otherwise remain for a long time in obscurity. It is desirable therefore to have a few retired players on the committee who should take a special interest in the doings of the second eleven, or if there is no second eleven, they should attend the practice meetings and note carefully the progress towards excellence made by the most promising of the youngsters in order that they may not be lost sight of, but that their services may be made of use when the opportunity presents itself.

MR. JONATHAN BRAMLEY.

This is not the time when Rothwell can spare her best sons, and it is with sorrow we report the loss of Mr. Jonathan Bramley, who has left England for Quebec, Canada. An excellent type of many connected with pit life, who by dint of hard, persevering, patient work, have raised themselves to a position among their fellows, and who not only benefit themselves and families, but are also an example for younger men to copy. As a steady, honest, straightforward faithful servant, Mr. Bramley carries with him the best wishes of both masters and men, while all who knew him will feel that a good man and true has gone from our midst.

On Monday evening, a presentation was made to him by the teachers and scholars of the Primitive Methodist Sunday School, of which he has been a teacher nearly 30 years. The memorial consisted of a neat writing desk, and was presented by Mr. Edwin Taylor, whose name was the first entered on the school books as a scholar at its foundation. Mr. Bramley suitably replied.

We understand he is bound for Quebec, having sailed yesterday from Liverpool. We heartily wish him a pleasant voyage and success in his new home.

EAST AND WEST YORKSHIRE UNION RAILWAY.

From various sources we learn a few further particulars respecting the scheme in which we are all so interested.

The committee consist of four gentlemen sitting as examiners in a room in the House some 50 feet by 30. There are any number of black gowned, white wigged counsellors, several reporters and other officials. The witnesses address their remarks to the Parliamentary reporter, who sits right in front of them within arm's length. The committee sits from 12 to 4 daily excepting Saturday. The gentlemen on whom rest the responsibility of deciding these applicatisns, are thus described by a gentleman now in London.

Mr. Portman (the chairman) is a tall, single eyed gentleman; judged by the countenance generally, he will be able to see as far and as well with that one eye as most men who have two. He is a genial, attentive committee man.

Prof. Thorold Rogers is a quiet, painstaking, grey-headed man of about 60. His features are careworn, and he is dressed in plain fashion.

Mr. Murray is a good-looking young man 30 to 35, and follows the arguments and watches the points with never flagging interest.

Mr. Ross is also a young man, but dull and sleepy, altogether of a most vacant type. He appears to enjoy his lunch about two o'clock, after which he goes comfortably to sleep, perfectly oblivious of the East and West Yorkshire Railway and its promoters.

As will be observed from the evidence yesterday, Mr. W. Hargreaves was the only Rothwell gentleman put into the box, and the lengthy and exhaustive facts he had carefully gathered were compressed into comparatively small compass. It seems probable that Mr. Seanor and Mr. Newsome, who were wired for on Monday evening, and went up on Tuesday, will not be called, and that the case for the promoters will be finished to-day. It is thought by the gentlemen representing this locality that the mass of evidence already adduced is considered sufficient, and that a favourable issue will ensue.

CHEAP ADVERTISING.—The cheapest way of advertising articles wanted or for sale, houses to let or required, situations wanted or vacant, is to put a notice to that effect in the columns of this journal, such advertising only costs 3d a line.

DEATH OF MR. PRICE.

It is our mournful duty to announce that this afternoon at a quarter to two, Mr. William Price, of Churchfield, Rothwell, died in his own house. He had just partaken of a hearty dinner, and appeared as well and happy as ever when Mr. C Bennett, his clerk went to the house for the Board Room key; as he was coming out of the house Mr. Price was coming out of the passage and asked if he had the key, to which he replied "yes." When they got to the end of the house, Mr. Bennett said 'You look rather pale.' He did not answer but tried to hold on by the wall, he was falling and Mr. Bennett caught him in his arms. He called of the servant, who came, and they dragged him into the house, the servant then went for Dr. Glaister who came in about 5 minutes. Mr. Bennett and he then carried him upstairs and put him on his bed. Miss Price was not at home. she had gone to Leeds, but came home in a cab in about a quarter of an hour after it had happened.

It is yet too soon to say anything of the gentleman who has so suddenly been removed from us, but there are few who knew Mr. Price, but will sincerely mourn his loss.

ROTHWELL GAS BILL.

The above bill promoted by the Rothwell Gas Light Co., limited, was read a second time in the House of Lords on Tuesday night.

POLICE NEWS.

WEST RIDING COURT.—Friday.

Bona-Fide Travellers or Not?—Enoch Ward, miner, Methley, and Thomas Nelson, miner, Bottomboat, were charged with having obtained beer at the Bowling Green Hotel, Rothwell, during prohibited hours, by representing themselves to be travellers, on Sunday, the 28th ult.—Evidence was given by Police-sergeant Turton, Police constable Clark, and Robert Ellis, the landlord of the hotel. It appeared that prior to calling at the Bowling Green, the defendants had stopped for refreshment at the Lord Nelson, Carlton, only about a mile off. Ellis being unaware of this fact, and knowing they came from Methley, supplied them with beer without asking any questions. The Bench held that as the Bowling Green was over three miles distance from the defendants' homes, they were bona-fide travellers, notwithstanding that they had called at the Lord Nelson. The case was therefore dismissed.

A Bad Son.—A youth named Albert Hopkinson Hartley, who resides with his widowed mother at Rothwell, was charged with stealing a blanket, five pillow cases, a table cloth, and numerous other articles, of the total value of about 30s., the property of Harriet Hodges, his mother. The prisoner (who is prosecutrix's son by a former husband) has lived mostly with his mother, but went away during last month. Whilst he was away, his mother also left home for a while, locking the house up. During her absence the prisoner returned, broke into the place through the window, and stole the goods in question, which he pawned at a shop in Hunslet He was apprehended by Police-constable Wilson. The prisoner, who pleaded guilty, was committed to the House of Correction for one month. The Bench thought the prosecutrix (who had been accustomed to send her son with goods to pledge) had not exercised sufficient precaution, and they allowed the pawnbroker (on making his application) half the value of the things.

The Drunkards.—Benjamin Wood, a factory hand, Morley, was charged by Police constable Slimmon with being drunk and incapable on the roadside at Rothwell Haigh, on Sunday the 28th ult. The defendant, who did not appear, had 16s. 8d. to pay.—Thomas Fleming, miner, Ouzlewell Green, was charged by the same constable with a similar offence at Carlton, on Saturday night the 27th ult. The defendant who did not appear, had 15s to pay.—Thomas Tennant, band spinner, an elderly man living at Lord Milton Cottage, Carlton, was charged with a similar offence at the same place and on the same night. Police constable Slimmon preferred the charge. The defendant indignantly denied the charge, and called a quarryman named Thackray, who said the police might just as well fetch a preacher out of the pulpit as charge the defendant with drunkenness. He declared that the policeman, without the slightest cause, dragged the defendant, who was not drunk, out of the urinal, and shook him and pulled him about. The defendant, who produced a certificate from Dr. Nowell to the effect that he was sober, and also a certificate of character, was discharged.—Joseph Budby, a coke burner at Ardsley, was ordered in his absence to pay 15s. for being drunk on the 30th ult. Police-constable Hartley proved the case.—John Marshall, labourer, Rothwell, was charged with being drunk in Church Street, at a quarter past eleven o'clock on Whit-Tuesday night. Police-constable Seal proved the case, and the defendant, who did not appear, had 15s. to pay.—Joseph Frost, miner, Rothwell, was ordered in his absence to pay £1 for driving about the village of Rothwell with a pony and trap on Whit-Monday afternoon, while intoxicated.

Robbery at Carlton.—On Sunday last about half-past two in the afternoon, P.C. 502 Slimmons received information that some Brahma chickens had been stolen from the highway, while feeding there. The constable, who was in plain clothes took immediate steps for their recovery, and observing a gang of six men going to Rothwell Haigh, followed them to the Angel Inn, suspecting one of the party was the thief. He spoke to Richard Pilling, stating that he was a policeman, and that he wished to search him. This he refused to allow and was taken into custody. One of his friends thereupon rose to strike Slimmons with a stick, but the landlords' son, John W. Smith, came to his assistance. Another of the gang threatened to set a bull dog at him, but the landlord coming to his help, the constable was protected. As Pilling refused to walk, the constable had to engage Mr. Smith's waggonnette, with which they drove to Wakefield. As there have been a number of similar thefts prisoner was taken into custody, and is to be brought up at Wakefield to-day. The fowls are the property of James Eason, butcher, of Carlton.

Re-opening of the Leeds Races.—The rumour which was published in the "Whispering Gallery" last week turns out to be quite correct, and we are now informed that the Manchester Racing Co. has purchased the land on the north side of Pontefract Road, about half a mile from Thwaite Gate, so well known to our readers as the Race-course. We learn that steps are being taken to make a proper track, and that as soon as practicable these races are intended to be revived. It is nearly fifty years since the land was used for this purpose.

AURORA BICYCLE CLUB.

The race for the sub-captaincy of the above club came off last Saturday, the course being from Wakefield to Rothwell via Stanley and Oulton, and was won by Mr. J. Waterhouse, in 29 minutes; the bad roads and head wind will account for what looks like slow time. A rather unfortunate accident occurred to Mr. Thomas Copley, who had a severe 'cropper,' and has injured a blood vessel in his arm; this was the cause of the late arrival of the competitors.

EAST & WEST YORKSHIRE UNION RAILWAY.

The Parliamentary Committee, for the consideration of this bill have received evidence as follows, Mr. Portman, presiding:—

Friday.

Mr. W. H. England, managing director of the West Yorkshire Iron and Coal Company, Ardsley, near Wakefield, said the firm had five blasting furnaces and five pits drawing coal. Their full capacity for making iron was 70,000 tons a year. Four of the furnaces are in blast, and made 60,000 a year. They drew 1,600 tons of coal a week, or about 300,000 tons a year. They had 240 coke ovens and made a great deal of coke. They bought large quantities of coal in addition to what they drew at their own pits; and the line would give them greater facilities for getting coal, especially opening out a communication with Rothwell Haigh, which coal was adapted for coke. Their total tonnage by railway was 650,000 tons. They paid £40,000 to 45,000 a year for carriage, and between £60,000 and £70,000 for wages. They desired to enter into competition with Middlesbrough in exporting iron to the Continent; but the rates were against them. Although they were some forty miles nearer Hull than Middlesbrough, their rates were higher, and great difficulties were thrown in their way by the North-Eastern Railway Company. They desired, like the Scotch and Middlesbrough ironmasters, to obtain the benefit of Spanish ore, but owing to the rates were unable to do so. The proposed line would afford them further facilities for disposing of their slag which they made in large quantities, and which was extensively used for repairing roads. Formerly they used to have a large coal trade with the north-eastern district, but owing to the difficulties thrown in their way and the high rates, the trade had fallen off.

Mr D Stonehouse, a member of the firm of Stonehouse Brothers, coal merchants, oil importers, and grease merchants, Hull, said the coal trade at Hull was carried on at considerable disadvantage to the public and to coal merchants. The North-Eastern Railway let the whole of the six coal stations at Hull to Messrs. Strachan and Co., and, in fact, they gave that firm a virtual monopoly of the coal trade by railway, and threw every difficulty in the way of other coal merchants. As an instance of the way in which the North-Eastern Railway did their business at Hull, the witness mentioned that before the appointment of the Railway Commisioners they allowed Messrs Strachan to levy a tax of 1s. per ton on all coal coming into Hull for other parties, and also charge 3d. a ton for weighing. The Railway Commissioners ordered the charges to be abolished; but since then the company have allowed Messrs Strachan other advantages, such as 21 cwt. to the ton for heavy orders, and 20½ cwt. to the ton for private parties and other coal merchants. A very considerable system of payment to station-masters is carried on. In fact, station masters are really coal merchants. They buy coals, and sell coals, and give credit, and do everything that merchants do.

Mr. James Blackburn, resident manager at Messrs. Bower's colliery, gave instances in which the North-Eastern had refused to place them on the same footing as their neighbours at Foxholes and other places.

Mr. Robert Holiday, senior partner in the firm of Messrs. Robert Holiday and Sons, colliery proprietors, East Ardsley, gave evidence in support of the Bill.

Professor Green, of the Yorkshire College, stated that there were valuable beds of stone which extended almost continuously from Ardsley to Woodlesford. He also gave it as his opinion that the coal measures extended from a point where they cease to come to the surface—namely, somewhere about Frystone—and existed under the limestone beyond the termination of the proposed railway at Drax. The witness also testified to the extensive bed of limestone which existed in the district, and said railway accommodation was necessary for the successful carrying on of quarries For instance, there were large quarries near Fairbairn and Newton which were scarcely making any lime at all, because there was no railway near; but at Garforth and Micklefield, near a railway, there were very large quarries in full operation.

Monday.

Mr. J. O. Greaves, mining engineer and colliery proprietor, mineral agent to Lord Mount-Temple and Lord Houghton, was examined by Mr. Rodwell, Q.C., and said that he was well acquainted with the geology of the district through which this railway would run, and, in his opinion, there was a coalfield all the way from the junction at Ardsley to the junction at Drax. There was a coal area of 112,473 acres, and the yield from it would be 468,157,600 tons. This was the coal yet unworked from a point near Ardsley to a point near Drax. Unless this line was made there would be no railway communication for this large bed of coal. On Lord Mount-Temple's estate they would be able to increase the output considerably if they had the advantage of the railway. They sent a large quantity of coal from Fryston Colliery to Hull at present, but if the Hull and Barnsley line were made, the South Yorkshire owners would have a decided advantage over those in West Yorkshire.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bidder.—Witness admitted having stated in 1880 that the yield of coal on the Hull and Barnsley line was 683 millions of tons, and yet that no new pits had been opened in that district No colliery opened in the district through which this proposed line would pass would be more than 2¼ miles from an existing railway. The custom in the district has been to make a connection with the nearest railway.

The chairman thought it was hardly necessary to have any more evidence with regard to the probability of coal being found.

Mr. T. Embleton, consulting engineer to Messrs. Charlesworth, and mining agent for Lord Mexborough said he was satisfied that what Mr. Greaves had said as to the quantity of coal yet unworked in this district was correct. He agreed that the collieries already opened were urgently in need of further railway communication.

Mr. J. E. Mammatt, mining engineer at Leeds, said he was consulting engineer to Mr. Wheeler, of Ledstone, who had petitioned in favour of the bill, and authorised him to give evidence in support of the railway. Knowing the district, he considered it of great importance that the railway should be made.

Mr. James Whiteley, quarry owner, of Leeds, said that he sent from Rothwell Haigh Quarries about 400 tons of stone per month. The principal market for it was London. He had the advantage of Messrs. Charlesworth's private sidings which ran through the quarries. What he desired by the new line was to have access to the Great Northern system. At present the cost of carting to Ardsley was 2s 6d a ton. It would be very important to have also direct access to Hull.

Mr. J. Armitage, of the Robin Hood Quarries, gave similar and corroborative evidence.

Tuesday

Mr. James Lowther, M.P., whose father, Sir Chas. Lowther, possesses a considerable property at Swillington and Kippax, gave evidence in support of the bill this morning. There are extensive coal measures, he stated, under his father's estate at Kippax and Allerton Bywater. Some were being worked at present, but until the formation of the Leeds and Castleford Railway, having only water connection, the coal was under considerable disadvantage. Messrs. Bower, who leased portions of the coalfield, had informed him that they would be compelled to give up the leases unless they acquired better railway facilities. Until that morning he had never heard of Messrs. Bower's Allerton Coal Company, having, on condition that the North-Eastern Railway made a connection between their Leeds and Castleford line and the colliery, agreed to send their coal by no other railway. He would not like to express any distinct opinion on the matter; but as the lessor, Sir Charles Lowther, was not a party to the agreement, he should think he would be justified in repudiating it. As to the new line, in his opinion it would confer advantages on the district generally.

Cross-examined by Mr. Pembroke Stephens, on the part of the North-Eastern Railway.—Any condition that hampered the working of the colliery was damaging equally to the lessor as well as the lessee. When the lease ceased in the year 1892, the injury to both the lessor and the lessee might certainly come to an end; but during the currency of the lease the agreement would be an injury to the lessor as well as the lessee. But the injury might possibly extend beyond the present lease. For instance, one of the most profitable seams, the Haigh Moor Colliery, would, at the present rate of working—380,000 to 400,000 tons a year, he was told—be exhausted before the termination of the lease; and it would be to the interest of the, lessees to get another coal seam to take the place of the Haigh Moor seam as soon as the Haigh Moor seam came to an end.

Mr. Stephens.—Do you think there was anything improper in the North-Eastern stipulating that if they made the railway, they should have the whole of the traffic? Witness: The line only received the sanction of Parliament on condition of their giving facilities to the collieries in the district.

Was it not a physical impossibility, owing to the intervention of other landowners between this particular colliery and the railway, for a connection to be made with the colliery, unless the North-Eastern stepped in and helped them by the exercise of their compulsory powers? If the North-Eastern had not granted facilities, we should certainly not only have not promoted the line, but we should have opposed, and the line would not have been sanctioned. Therefore I think the advantages were mutual.

Professor Thorold Rogers.—As I understand, Messrs. Bower, who entered into the lease, transferred their interest to the Allerton Colliery Company, and after that company went into liquidation, Messrs Bower resumed possession of the collieries. Would any loss ensue to your family by reason of the output being diminished? Witness: If anything brought about the insolvency of any of the lessees it would be a serious loss. As far as our own lease goes there is a minimum rental, and what is called "overs," or royalty, for extra workings. Whilst the colliery company was in insolvency we only received the minimum rent. Anything which prevents the working of the colliery up to its full capacity would certainly be a loss to the lessees, and anything which would be a loss to the lessees would be a loss to us.

Mr. John Luke Haigh, of Selby, solicitor to Mr. Firman, of Gateforth Hall, through whose estate the proposed railway ran for a distance of two miles, gave evidence in support of the line.

Mr. Charles Wells, coal merchant and timber merchant, of Hull, gave evidence in support of the bill.
